—STRAND THEATRE—

Opening night at the new Strand Theatre in Montevallo presented a brilliant assemblage of friends and patrons who gathered to congratulate the Watson family upon the completion of this modern and very lovely theatre building. "The Red Salute" was the opening feature production—but it was Happy Salutation Time for friends of the Watson's who were privileged to share this realization of a "dream come true".

It was an especially joyous occasion for us, for we were numbered among the guests who had accepted a cordial invitation generously extended by Manager Eddie Watson, a friend for many years. A friend whose success in the Cinema world is deserved, and only the merited success he now enjoys can command the unanimous acclaim accorded this popular Cinema Magnate. Tossing aside all personal bouquets upon the completion of this magnificent temple of entertainment, Mr. Watson pointed to a dear little silver haired lady who answers by the name of "Mother" Watson, as the "power behind the throne", whose unswerving loyalty and far-seeing vision furnished the inspiration through the past 15 years to make possible this worth-while achievement. Lady Watson lends a cultural air of refinement and beauty to any gathering which she graces, but on last night, her sweet and charming personality combined with a cordial friendliness as she stood to receive the happy wishes of hundreds of friends, was striking, and the outstanding recognition of how very much Mrs. Watson is beloved and appreciated in Montevallo and neighboring towns, was deserved.

We personally thank the "Manager" and the "Mater" for one of the happiest evenings we have ever spent. Congratulations sincere fly across the miles to the "Three Muskeeters", Lady Watson, Eddie and Morris Watson, whose thoughtfulness of us will make opening night at the Strand Theatre one never to be forgotten.

Judge and Mrs. Len C. Walker are being welcomed as residents of Columbiana this week. They have taken an apartment in the home of Mrs. Lena Merrell, and Judge Walker expresses himself as being delighted to become a citizen of Columbiana.

Did you know that President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner were both out of the United States last week, and the country was without either official. President Roosevelt was fishing in Panama——Vice-President Garner was sailing toward Japan to interview the Emperor. However, this is 1935—Roosevelt was in close touch by radio with the Presidential office in Washington, and if an emergency had been of sufficient importance, he could have hopped a plane and been back in a jiffy. This fact, had it happened long years ago, would have been a source of worry——but now in this enlightened and high speed age, there is nothing to worry about as far as distance goes—and getting who you want when you want them. No, not even when the President goes—a fishing!

Mrs. Myra Hamner Miles has returned from a week-end visit with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Hamner, in Camp Hill, Alabama.

Mrs. Homer Bearden and Mrs. Cecil Duke visited relatives in Birmingham last week.

Messrs. Tidwell and Orr, prominent educators of Montevallo, were distinguished guests in the Democratt office on Friday. Mr. Tidwell—"Dad" Tidwell, if you please, was walking with that certain extra swagger incident to a "blessed event" in his home. A "feather" in his new Fall chapeau was also proudly displayed by this popular Principal of the Montevallo High School and the reason? A "sweetest little fellow" has come to occupy his time and attention from "now on out". We hear he is a "darling" and we offer sincere congratulations to both Mr. and Mrs. Tidwell upon the arrival of the helpless "little tyrant", whom we are eager to meet and personally extend greetings.

Dr. H. W. James, director of Education and Extension work of Alabama College, public spirited Legionaire and civic promoter, brightened the office on Saturday with a personal call. It is always a happy privilege to welcome Dr. James in Columbiana.

From Vincent we had the pleasure of talking in our journalistic "salon" with J. F. McGraw (Big Bud), Principal A. O. Horton, "Dick" McGraw, postmaster of the above named wide-awake town, and Jimmy Gorman, one of the youngest and most popular business men in the county. Come again, gentlemen, we like you and we like your town and the spirit of co-operation among the merchants and the cordiality always accorded us when we steal away for a few hours—just to visit.

This week we met, face to face, "His Majesty", Red Mahan, Jr., of Montevallo, Alabama, and a handsomer lad we have not seen in many moons. Jack Gilbert, Joel McCrea and other cinema magnates may well look to their laurels, for if RED JR. takes a notion to crash the cinema, his contagious smile, and sparkling brown eyes will certainly register 100% with Mr. and Mrs. Public. About 18 years hence, look for him!

If "Believe It Or Not" Ripley ever lacks material for his interesting selection of oddities, he has only to come to Shelby County and open his eyes and look around the Vegetable Kingdom.

J. L. Gardner, of Shelby, Alabama, brought into the Democrat office on Friday morning a "sweet potato GOOSE". As perfect a specimen as could be found in "Gooseland" proper! The "potato" neck was turned at an inquisitive angle. It reminded one strongly of "folks". The "eye" had an inquiring upturned expression, and the body was perfect. In other words, in Potato Land there grow goose-shaped potatoes with a perfectly human expression about them that make them seem uncanny. We attempted to persuade Mr. Gardner to leave this "goose" with us, for we knew you might doubt the story, but the "kiddies" at his house wanted him to bring it back. We reluctantly allowed him to take it with him. About this time, Calvin Weldon, whom no one on this earth has ever been able to "get ahead of", whether in wise cracking or in story-telling, asked us if we had been to Wilsonville lately? We regrettfully stated we had not, then he related another potato story—which for "tonnage", takes the day. Joe Milam has on display in Walter Riddle's store a potato which weighs 14 pounds! We are on our way to verify this statement! We believe he is talking about a Pumpkin—or perhaps he does not even know the difference.

Jesse Hughs, one of the most ambitious and capable young Ministers we know, will leave Columbiana on Saturday for New Orleans where he will enter the Baptist Bible Institute. The good wishes of his many friends throughout Shelby County follow him. Sure, the DEMOCRAT will be on his reading table, and happily do we personally wish this friend of ours a successful and happy year of study. Thanks also Jesse, for the personal call to the office before leaving.

Collegiates seen during the week-end adding a colorful splash to drab Old Main Street included: Ruth Luck, of the University; Ellen Ruth Isbell, of Howard College; Jane Fowler and Charlie Verne Tinney, of Alabama College; and one of the prettiest as well as one of the most charming "blondes" we know, Mary Moore Hurst, of Birmingham-Southern. After chatting with Miss Hurst, we no longer wonder why "gentlemen prefer 'em".

Mrs. John Curlee has returned from Birmingham after attending the numerous social courtesies extended her sister, Miss Myrtice Acker, whose marriage to Dr. E. B. Cooper, of Columbiana, was a beautiful event of October 22nd.

J. H. Thompson, prominent planter of Vincent, spent Saturday in Columbiana.

There is never a dull minute in the office when debonair Grady Cleveland, of the Forestry Department in Montgomery, saunters by for a few minutes chatter between trips on his busy schedule. Were we called upon to nominate the best reconteur of "jokes", told in an inimitable manner and one on tap to fit any occasion, Grady Cleveland would walk right off with the honor, cock his gray Stetson snap brim over the left eye and—possibly, non-challantly toss off another one! Mr. Cleveland always has an appreciative following when he comes to Columbiana on business or on—his hobby, Fox Hunting. His pleasing, tactful manner in handling the business of the Forestry Department has made him a favorite in Shelby County, and his many friends happily welcomed him in Columbiana last week.

Mr. Sam Curry, of Wilton, spent a few days last week with his daughter, Miss Delilah Curry, in Columbiana.

Clay Butler, License Inspector, of Siluria, spent Saturday in Columbiana.

From the amount of "verbal tomahawking" now in progress, one would be led to believe the Indians had returned and resumed their favorite warfare engagements. Were some of the oral barrage not so comical, it would be tragic! However, this seems to be a highly cultivated ART among some of the natives of any small town, where TIME hangs heavy—and just such a life-like picture is painted, in a new novel just completed called HIDDEN SHOALS. The same circumstances must exist in every little Main Street. We suggest this book be placed in the Library, and if you are a good connisseur of human nature, you will likely find several fellow townsmen vividly painted for your amusement in this interesting and entertaining novel. Read it!

Luther Shaw, prominent Contractor and Brick Manufacturer, was a luncheon guest in Curlee's Cafe on Saturday.

James H. Lane, of Sylacauga, spent Friday and Saturday with the Rev. and Mrs. T. K. Roberts.

The Shelby County High School Wildcats will meet the Football team from Centerville on Friday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock on the High School Athletic field, Coach Hosmer and the boys extend a cordial invitation to see this fascinating chase after the "pig skin".

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond George, of Fairhope, Alabama, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Head on Monday.

Mrs. P. O. Luck, of Enigma, Ga., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Luck in Columbiana.

For the first Chrysanthemums of the Fall season we are indebted to our good friend, Mr. C. E. Niven, who is the unanimously beloved postmaster of Columbiana. He states he raises flowers for "past-time" and the pleasure and happiness he finds in giving them to his friends. Know of any other lovelier avocation? We are richer and happier for being included on his friendly list, and remain deeply grateful for his many, many kindnesses to us through the years we have lived here in Columbiana as neighbors and friends!

Well, Twilight is stealing through the office windows and through its shadows, there comes into the office an interesting visitor from Virginia, an old old Printer he states! He wants to look at the modern Linotype and Job Press. After taking a look around the shop, he tells me that he used to "edit" a good newspaper, PAY folks to read it, and gather poke berries to get the ink to print it. With this interesting bit of information, we shall call it a day! Aren't we all?

LIVING COSTS UP, SURVEY REVEALS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An advance in the living costs of wage earners and low salaried workers is reported Monday by the Labor Department.

After a survey of 32 cities covering the four-month period ending July 15, the department said the items purchased by this consumer group had increased 2.7 per cent above their June, 1934, cost and 8 per cent above June, 1933.

As compared with the period ending March 15, the department said food, rent and household furnishing costs were up a fraction, while clothing and miscellaneous items dropped slightly. It reported the most marked change as a 4.2 per cent decline in fuel and light costs.

Food costs increased in 20 of the 32 cities.

25% REDUCTION IN RESIDENTIAL ELECTRICITY COST IN TWO YEARS

The United States Department of Labor continues to put out figures showing the steadily mounting costs of living. The only items showing apreciable declines are fuel and light.

It is interesting to know that in Alabama the average rate paid by the residential customer of the Alabama Power Company has declined 25 per cent. Here is at least one bright ray in the encircling gloom. This drop in rate costs is also being reflected in increased demands for other electrical services.

The lady customer entered the store and headed straight for the proprietor.

"You sold me some rotten apples yesterday," she said, "and I'm bringing them back to you."

"That's all right, lady," hastily apologized the merchant. "You needn't have taken the trouble to bring them back. Your word's just as good as the apples."

No Core, No War
Sloan Sees Light
The Holy City Falls
G. B. Shaw Writes

A small boy, asked for the core of his apple, said: "There ain't going to be no core."

Laval, French premier, tired of dangerous goingson in the Mediterranean, gerous goings on in the Mediterranean, nounces bluntly: "There ain't going to no war," requesting England to remove her battleships from the Mediterranean.

The wise British have known all along that there was to be no war, but thought it well to indulge in virtuous demonstrations.

Britons rarely make diplomatic mistakes: diplomats of other countries are children to them, although France is an exception to that rule.

Washington believes the war will end in 60 days, and has probably been told so by somebody in Europe.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, announces "all signals set for increased automobile sales next year," and no doubt about it.

He approves an automobile show in November, instead of January, as giving the people more time to realize that the important car is the winter car, when the automobile "wears the rubbers" for the whole family.

Capturing Aksum will impress Ethiopians. The holy city, surrendered by the Ethiopians without a shot, contains the tombs of all Ethiopian rulers since the time of Sheba. The Coptic Christian bishop of Aksum voluntarily gave the keys of the city to the Italian Gen. Emilio de Bono, at Aduwa. He accepted the keys, proclaimed Italy's annexation of Aksum, sent a force to surround the city and prevent looting the monasteries and the ancient cathedral of St. Mary Zion.

In that cathedral the original Ark of the Covenant is believed to be preserved. Ethiopian history relates that when Solomon sent the son of his high priest, with other sons of great dignitaries, to accompany Sheba's son after his visit to his father, the son of the high priest took the original Ark of the Covenant with him, substituting an imitation ark, much to the indignation of Solomon and that high priest. In justice to the high priest's son, it must be stated that an angel appeared and gave him instructions about stealing the ark.

George Bernard Shaw discovers that Ethiopia, so-called, is an aggregation of tribes, one ruled fairly well by Haile Selassie, who is called "Emperor," the others doing about as they please.

In some of these tribes, what pleases the natives would seem strange to us. For instance, among the Danakils a lady will not marry a gentleman until he proves that he has killed at least four men. And he must prove it by bringing back the easily identified fragments of four mutilated bodies. Married life with such a lady should never be dull.

Wars come, wars go. Standard Oil goes on forever, working.

Walter Teagle, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, with oil wells scattered over the world, offers to buy every barrel of oil that Russia exports, many million barrels a year. To avoid ill feeling, Mr. Teagle would let British Royal Dutch-Shell and Anglo-Iranian have part of Russia's surplus.

Your Uncle Sam is very rich now, never had so much gold in his life. The total pile, "an all time high," amounts to more than fifteen billions of dollars.

It wouldn't be such a big pile of gold if the government had not ingeniously raised the price of the gold ounce.

Gold has been coming rapidly from Europe lately, including some gold that frightened Americans sent abroad for its health.

The United States is becoming more and more a gambling nation, and, in consequence, less and less a thinking, working nation. Gambling makes real work seem not worth while. Why work if you can play the horses? Can you imagine Washington, Lincoln or Edison studying "past performances"?

Mr. Damon Runyon writes:

"A few years ago, the Broadway betting men would have sneered at the idea of wagering on college football games. Now it is the biggest betting medium of any sport, with betting brokers issuing regular printed quotations on the various games every week."

At the Methodist Protestant church conference a committee of the Lord's day recommends that churches be lighted like motion picture "cathedrals." The committee complains: "The Church of Christ is in comparative darkness with often but a single light over the door and at the speaker's desk to save expense."

New Jersey justice decides that Hauptmann, convicted of murdering the Lindbergh child, may live a little longer, to take an appeal to the United States Supreme court. The Supreme court may, in its discretion, decline to investigate Hauptmann's conviction. In that case, the curtain falls.

ANTS HAVE "COWS"

Ants share with man the practice of domesticating less intelligent fellow creatures. An interesting illustration is the manner in which the ant makes the aphis, an insect, serve its needs. The eggs of the aphis are stolen and taken to the ant's nest, where they are tended carefully. When the larvae are hatched the young aphides are carried into the open and placed upon the plant on which they delight to feed. Then it obtains the honeyed secretion of the aphis, which it "milks" in much the same manner as man milks a cow.

Fabric Honors Go to New Woolens

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MOST of the glory in the fabric realm is going to the new woolens this season. Whether you work or play, whether you travel or saunter about town, whether you are campus-bound or en route to the office, whether you are counted among the spectator sports group in the grandstand or whether you tea at five or dance at the midnight "prom," if you would register among the best-dressed, fashion decrees that your costume be of some one or other of the handsome new wools that are showing this season.

Time was "way back when" that the merits of woolens were reckoned in terms of sturdy utilization qualities that insured comfort when the temperature went low as well as sterling wearability throughout the practical hours. But now all is changed in that you may have your woolen weaves as fastidious, as eloquent of chic and charm as you please.

Wherefore, the new wool fabrics have become the idol of fashion. The current collections intrigue with their wide versatility, their breath-taking novelty, the colorings which are rich and beautiful beyond wildest flights of fancy, together with weaves and textures the likes of which were not dreamed of in days of yore.

The woman who knows her woolens will choose according to time, place and occasion. For sports and for practical daytime clothes, rabbit woolens are outstanding. They are shown in cunning novelty checks and stripes and bold plaids which particularly stress the new wines, chic violet tones, dark browns and deep rich greens. Nubby mixture tweeds and herringbones are also favorites in sports woolens. Popular also are homespuns, surface cordings, diagonal or vertical ribbings and endless weaves that are nubbed, slubbed, flecked and highly metalized, fascinating and mysterious beyond anything previously achieved in the annals of the woolen industry.

Wool crepes, printed challis and cashmeres are especially lovely styled in soft types that are suitable to wear under fur coats. There is much excitement, too, in regard to the new sheer woolens.

Quite the newest trend in fashioning the smartest woolen suits is to bind the edges with supple fur after the manner shown to the left in the group pictured. Here we see a young fashionable clad in a jacket frock of sheer black woolen. It has the new short peplum. The edges of the jacket and the modishly flared skirt are banded with black Persian lamb. The crushed ascot scarf is of bright green moire. Speaking of sheer black, at this moment it is the rage for daytime dresses, with clever buttonings, shirrings, pleatings and metal gadgets to give the individual touch.

Campus-bound, the chic girl centered in the trio is wearing a smart two-piece frock of lightweight woolen styled to look young. Gray Persian lamb decorates the collar and the patch pockets of the tailored jacket that fastens down the front with self-fabric covered buttons.

Smartly simple in line, the three-piece frock for the junior, shown to the right, is practically a "must" in the school wardrobe. The cardigan jacket and the tailored skirt are made of a sheer soft rabbit woolen fabric. The tuck-in blouse of soft wool jersey in the natural tan color, worn with a Peter Pan collar outside the cardigan.

STRESSING PLAID

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The world of fashion is growing increasingly plaid-conscious. Never has eye seen plaids so gorgeous, so bold in color and in such fascinating wool weaves as are now enlivening the style panorama. The tunic of soft spongy woolen here pictured is in the smart new gray. The same gray is in the plaid contrasting the vivid reds, greens, yellows and white. Note the ascot tie, which is a very special style feature of the majority of sports costumes.

Two-Piece Dresses

Two-piece styles are exceptionally good for this fall, especially in thin, light-weight wool or crepe.

TROUSERED STYLE FOR WOMEN GAINS

The trousers-for-women idea is strong in the new fall fashions, and girls who heretofore have restricted their mannish costuming to the beach or the back yard, may now come right out in the open and wear trousers to dinner and dance.

There seems no doubt that some of the leading designers are all for the trousered mode.

Some gowns have the trousers beneath a skirt, slit to the waist.

Some feature divided skirts concealingly draped.

And some come right out with undisguised trousers in formal afternoon and dinner clothes.

The most daring variation of the theme presented thus far is the slashed evening skirt which reveals matching shorts.

Umbrella Skirt Is Favored by Coeds for Sweater Use

The umbrella skirt is the newest thing on the campus horizon.

It's the skirt that college girls will wear with their sweaters this fall, it looks like its name. It's a skirt with a decided flare, gored in the umbrella manner, with crosses between the seams. It demonstrates the new rule of shorter and fuller, and it's shown in all the new flannels and tweeds.

College girls, tired of the classic button-down-the-front skirt of wrap-around cut, are going in for gores this fall. The majority of skirts shown in college shops around town are definitely flared, and gored to the last notch.

They come in nice soft monotone tweeds and Angora fabrics, and are shown in colors to blend or contrast with any sweater.

Evening Cape

A luscious satin evening cape is bordered at the front with silver fox and caught together at the neckline with a large baguette diamond and ruby clip.

Lesson for October 27

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

(Temperance Lesson.)

LESSON TEXT—Daniel 5:1-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Proverbs 20:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Daniel Solves a Riddle.

JUNIOR TOPIC—At the Feast of Belshazzar.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Drink Leads To.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Facts About Alcohol.

I. Belshazzar's Impious Feast (vv. 1-4).

1. Those in attendance (vv. 1, 2). Those present were Belshazzer, his wife and concubines, and one thousand of his lords.

2. Their behavior (vv. 3, 4).

a. They drank wine and engaged in drunken revelry.

b. They committed sacrilege. They drank wine from the sacred vessels taken out of the temple at Jerusalem.

c. They worshiped idols.

II. The Handwriting on the Wall (vv. 5-16).

1. The time of (v. 5). It occurred "in the same hour" in which they were engaged in their drunken debauchery.

2. The effect upon the king (v. 6). "The joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another."

3. The king's behavior (vv. 7-16).

a. He called for the astrologers and soothsayers, offering them rewards of gold and of position (vv. 7-9).

b. Daniel brought in at the suggestion of the queen (vv. 10-16). The queen was perhaps the wife of Nebuchadnezzar who remembered Daniel's service in interpreting the dream of her husband.

III. Daniel Interprets the Writing (vv. 17-28).

1. Daniel's address to the king (vv. 17-24).

a. He brushes aside his promised gifts (v. 17). He would not have his speech limited by the king's gift.

b. He reviewed before Belshazzar the history of Nebuchadnezzar (vv. 18-24). He showed clearly that Belshazzar should have profited by the experiences of his father.

2. The interpretation of the writing (vv. 25-28).

a. "Mene" means "numbered" (v. 26). "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it."

b. "Tekel" means "weighed" (v. 27). "Thou art weighed in the balances and art found wanting."

c. "Peres" means "divided" (v. 28). "Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians."

IV. The Judgment Executed (vv. 29-31).

So rapidly did the divine judgment fall that Belshazzar was slain and Darius the Median took the kingdom that same night. The Chaldean dynasty ended with Belshazzar. We may, therefore, interpret this whole scene as pointing to the conditions at the close of the time of the Gentiles, and as adumbrating their prevailing conditions. Let us note

1. The stupidity of men. Belshazzar, like people today, did not learn by example. Nebuchadnezzar's fate should have deterred Belshazzar.

2. The magnificent splendor. This great feast was characterized by pomp, display and parade. How characteristic of our own age!

3. Luxury. The famous hanging gardens of Babylon were a noteworthy example. Signs of luxury abound today on every hand.

4. The licentiousness of the king with his many wives and concubines. Licentiousness is likewise notoriously prevalent today.

5. Blasphemous sacrilege. The sacrilege of this day may be in excess of that of Belshazzar's day and expresses itself in a. A profession of religion for pecuniary gain, social and political preferment.

b. The use of the pulpit of the Christian ministry for notoriety and even for the propagation of false doctrine.

c. Uniting with the church and attendance at the Lord's table so as to cover up secret sins.

d. The use of the Word of God to give point to a joke.

e. Denying that the Bible is God's Word, making it a book of errors, myths, and legends.

f. Sneering at the virgin birth, repudiating Christ's deity and setting aside his vicarious atonement.

6. Drunken carousals. The handwriting is on the wall. His judgments shall eventually fall. Conditions in the world indicate that the time is drawing near. Are you ready?

FLAVORED MILK APPEALS

Chocolate flavored powders and syrups may be combined with milk to make nutritious drinks which appeal to young and old. They are useful between meals, at lunch or at bedtime. They are suitable as a part of the meal or as a source of additional nourishment at other hours of the day. Invalids, convalescents and elderly persons, as well as those who are vigorous and strong, enjoy such beverages. Mothers find them useful to supply extra calories to active children. The various brands of chocolate flavored powders and sirups accepted by the American Medical association's committee on foods are discussed by Doris W. McCray in Hygeia. In her article she tells of the value of such foods in the diet and describes the legitimate claims which may be made for them.

AND WAIT

A woman's promise to be on time carries a lot of wait.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

And On

Life is interesting enough for us, that most of us want it to go on.

If you feel tired, run-down, nervous and out of sorts

—there is usually a definite reason for this

Now let's reason sensibly.

Don't try to get well in a day... this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

But there is a certain scientific way you can assist by starting those digestive juices in the stomach to flowing more freely and at the same time supply a balanced mineral deficiency the body needs.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired and run-down . . . a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve — by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic.

Much more could be said—a trial will thoroughly convince you that this way, in the absence of any organic trouble, will start you on the road of feeling like yourself again. © S.S.S. Co.

HOW Firestone GIVES YOU LOWEST COST PER MILE

FIRESTONE TIRES are built different — they have three patented construction features not used in any other truck tire. The body is built with Gum-Dipped High Stretch cords. Gum-Dipping, the patented Firestone process, soaks the cords in pure liquid rubber, insulating and coating every strand in every cord. This is why Firestone Tires run cooler and are stronger.

The tread is made of a new and tougher rubber compound which gives greatest resistance to wear. This, together with the scientific non-skid design, gives greater traction and longer non-skid mileage. Firestone locks this wider, heavier and more rugged tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body of the tire by building two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords (patented) under the tread.

These exclusive construction features result in lowest cost per mile. The largest operators in the country and operators of all types of equipment buy Firestone Tires year after year on their cost-reducing performance.

Call on the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Tire Dealer nearest you today, and start reducing your operating costs. When buying new equipment be sure to specify Firestone Tires.

Mr. Mauldin Talks To Local FFA Boys

Mr. Mauldin, a former county agent and farmer, tells the F. F. A. boys of the Shelby County High School how to begin with crimson clover. Mr. Mauldin has been a believer in crimson clover for many years and last year he planted 30 acres to crimson clover on his farm to be saved for seed. From this seed patch he secured enough seed to plant 500 acres of clover and some seed to sell his friends that were interested in the crop. His advice to the boys was to start with one acre as a seed patch. His observation last year was that crimson clover is a valuable legume that can be grown in the winter that will stand grazing and cattle and hogs seem to like the clover better than other legumes. Part of Mr. Mauldin's clover was grazed heavy during the winter and he got his best seed yield on the clover that was grazed heaviest. Mr. Mauldin also stated that farmers could grow any other crop after clover. This year after harvesting his clover seed he produced on the land a half a bale of cotton per acre.

In starting your seed patches, he tells the boys to select some medium land in fertility and secure about 50 or 60 pounds of chaffy seed, inoculate them well with commercial inoculation and soil from a clover field and plant very shallow on a firm seed bed and pack them in or harrow in and then pack. Manure broadcast over the field and 400 pounds of basic slap to the acre will add to your success with a seed patch of clover.

The clover when the seed are mature can be cut with a mower just like you cut hay and hauled and stored in a house or stacked until you are ready to get out the seed. The seed are gotten out of the clover by shaking the hay with a fork and the seed will fall on the ground and can be raked up in baskets and stored until planting time. Mr. Mauldin stated that one acre seed patch should produce enough seed to sow 15 to 20 acres. If you had enough clover seed to sow 15 acres to crimson clover this year compared to vetch and pea seed, it would be worth about $30.00 to you.

Crimson clover is a valuable hay crop yielding from one to two tons of hay per acre. Crops of corn after clover on average land will produce 42 bushels of corn per acre.

SPORTS

By FRANK MACKNIGHT, Columbiana, Alabama.

Shelby High defeated a stubborn Thompson team last Friday by the score of 10 to 0.

Thompson received the kick-off and made steady gains to reach the Shelby twenty yard line. The Shelby team held there for downs. On a wide end run, Martin ran to the thirty-five. On a long pass from Wallace to Martin, the ball was carried to the Siluria five yard line. Wallace carried the ball over for the first touchdown on the next play.

In the second quarter both teams held well. Punts were exchanged and both teams threatened to score. The Thompson line turned in some good offensive play during the second quarter.

Shelby kicked off to Thompson to begin the third quarter. The ball was brought back to nearly mid-field. The Thompson team took to the air and threatened to score before Shelby could regain the ball. The Shelby passing was not working so well so most of the plays had to be run over the line usually without gain.

The Thompson squad was making big gains with passes in the fourth quarter. They seemed determined to score. On an intercepted pass by Wallace, the Shelby fullback, the second touchdown of the game was made. Good blocking made this touchdown possible. Thompson received and drove deep into Shelby territory before they could be stopped. Shelby held for downs and kicked out of bounds as the game ended.

Score by quarters:

Scoring touchdowns: Wallace two. Point after touchdown: Martin.

Montevallo High journeyed to Piper to be beaten by Piper-Coleanor High by a score of 13 to 0.

Vincent High won from Maplesville High 32 to 0 last Friday. Vincent hasn't been scored upon all season.

RED CROSS REPORTS BUSY YEAR AIDING DISASTER VICTIMS

Tornadoes, Fires, Hurricanes, Floods, Epidemics, Make Record of Year

The American Red Cross assisted sufferers in more disasters throughout the United States during the year ending June 30, 1935, than through any similar period in the peace-time history of the organization, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman, revealed recently in commenting on the annual report which has just been released.

"The 128 domestic disasters in which the Red Cross extended aid during the fiscal year exceeded by 56 per cent the average over the past few years," Admiral Grayson said. "Not only was the period heavy in the number of disasters, but the geographical distribution was wide, with 37 States and 353 counties affected.

"Through these disasters and times of community distress, the Red Cross assisted 110,000 persons," the Admiral disclosed.

Spectacular service was rendered in many disasters because of the uniqueness of the problems and the far-flung points affected. The work of the National organization covered in the report carries stories of the Morro Castle burning; the trench-mouth epidemic in the beautiful San Luis Valley of Colorado; the great fight over a wide front in the mid-west dust bowl against respiratory diseases; floods, hurricanes, and tornadoes in many sections of the United States.

In addition to the disasters taking place within the continental limits of this country, Admiral Grayson pointed out that work had been made necessary by disasters in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Philippines, where 26 disasters were recorded in that archipelago. The American Society also assisted the Red Cross of two foreign countries in caring for victims of floods and earthquakes.

The variation of types of disasters called for expert council on matters relating to health and nutrition as well as epidimic prevention. Last year's work proved the value of the structure and administration of the Red Cross disaster relief, the Admiral said, the very frequency of occurrence and the variety of types constituting a severe test of the organization chartered by Congress to handle this type of National relief.

Expenditures of the Red Cross for relief of persons stricken by disasters within the continental United States amounted to $464,413. In addition, $75,000 was sent to the Philippines to assist them in three major relief operations necessitated by typhoons, $5,000 went to victims of the Indian earthquake, and $5,000 to Poland for victims of severe floods. A number of smaller foreign emergencies called for sums totaling $2,500.

The months of February, March, April, May and June were heaviest for tornado disasters. Floods occurred throughout the year. Serious fires calling for Red Cross assistance took place during July and December. A devastating explosion took place in Tennessee during April. Most of the hurricanes struck States along the east coast during the fall and early winter.

SPORTS

By FRANK MACKNIGHT, Columbiana, Alabama.

A strong Bibb County High eleven came to Columbiana last Friday and won from the Shelby boys, 13 to 0, after the local team had won its last two games.

The Shelby High team was outweighed several pounds to the man but they put up tough opposition in the pinches. Bibb took the lead in the first period as Quarterback McKinley made the first touchdown and Carnett kicked the extra point.

The Bibb team was held scoreless in the second quarter but in the third quarter a strong, tricky running attack was turned loose to return the ball to the Shelby one-yard line. The Shelby line made a strong stand to hold, and smeared several plays behind the line of scrimmage only to have Bibb's shifty halfback, Boyd, run around end to score. A try for the extra point over the line failed.

All of the Centerville backfield starred in their smashing line plays and good running. Those playing well for Shelby were: Martin, Davis, Lowery, Hughs, Letson and Wallace.

Score by quarters:

Bibb County High	7	0	6	0	—13
Shelby County High	0	0	0	0	— 0

Scoring touchdowns—McKinley and Boyd. Point after touchdown—Carnett (place kick).

An important high school game was played at Siluria last Friday when Montevallo High School defeated the Thompson High team, 10 to 0. Previously, the Montevallo team had won from Thompson, 6 to 0.

Vincent High's team took a rest last Friday. This Friday the Minor High team, of Birmingham, comes to Vincent for a game.

Shelby County High lost a triple-threat backfield man for the rest of the season last Friday when Wales Wallace, fullback, suffered a broken collar-bone. This is the first time the team has lost a man through injuries this season. His place will be hard to fill.

ACMAR, MARGARET MINES HUM WITH 1,576 MEN AT WORK

LEEDS, Ala.—All records for coal production have been broken during the past week at Acmar and Margaret mines of the Alabama Fuel & Iron Company, where six days a week are being worked and where the number of employes is at an all-time high.

It was announced that 768 men were employed digging coal at the Alabama Fuel operations, and in addition outside employes necessary for the operation of the mines ran the total employes up to 1,576 men. With this force, it is stated production figures have increased every day during the last week.

Orders for coal have been booked by the company from many points in Southeastern territory and messages have been received that unless coal was available any number of mills in Georgia, Alabama and other Southeastern states would be forced to close down. The continual operations at Acmar and Margaret, it is stated, have enabled a large group of factories and mills to continue operation, thus keeping at work a sizable army of employes.

Convicted Pair Wins Gamble For Freedom

LA SALLE, Ill.—James Gardini and Felix Mayeski made good on a sporting proposition with the mayor of nearby Spring Valley today and as a result escaped a jail sentence.

Held in the village jail on a disorderly conduct charge overnight, they were found guilty today and sentenced to serve out the fines.

"You should have been easy on us," they informed Mayor Arthur Tonelli. "We could have escaped last night if we wanted to."

Ruffled at the slur on his jail, Mayor Tonelli offered them freedom if they could make good. They were locked up again and as Mayor Tonelli stepped out the front door they greeted him.

The pair had broken rusty bars from the window of their cell and dropped to the ground.

Vincent Stores Will Close For Game

VINCENT, Ala.—The civic spirit in the town of Vincent will again be typified, on next Friday afternoon, when all stores will close their doors from 1:30 through 3:30 for the Minor-Vincent football game. Vincent's goal line has not been crossed during this season, and the game bids fair to be an exciting one. Mayor S. C. Elliott has also declared a half holiday in honor of Shelby County High School team, when they meet the fast Vincent aggregation. Everyone is cordially invited to be present on these two occasions.

Trade days are also continuing popular. Watch for further announcement in November featuring these unique affairs.

ALABAMA COLLEGE HOMECOMING DAY TO BE HELD NOV. 2

MONTEVALLO, Ala. — Featured by a special reunion of the class of 1925, the annual homecoming at Alabama College will be held on Saturday, November 2.

Plans for the event have been announced by Miss Eloise Meroney, chairman of the committee in charge, which includes E. H. Wills, Mrs. W. H. Trumbauer and Miss Mary McWilliams. Mrs. Douglas Hardy, president of the class; Miss Katherine Vickery, of the faculty, and Miss Josephine Watson, president of the Alumnae Association, are assisting in the arrangements.

Registration will begin at 9:30 Saturday morning in Palmer, while at the same hour the class of 1925 will meet in Calkins Hall. Dr. A. F. Harman, president of the college, will address the entire alumnae group and the senior class at 10:30. New officers of the Alumnae Association will be named at the business session prior to the luncheon in the new dining hall, at which members of the Student Senate will be hostesses.

The program planned for the luncheon is being directed by Mrs. W. H. Trumbauer and Miss Eleanor Rennie, of the faculty. The alumnae and faculty will be honored by the seniors at a tea in main parlors at 3:30. Friday evening the Alabama Players will present a Shakespearean program and Saturday evening James McPherson, former Metropolitan star, will be heard on the concert and lecture series.

ANOTHER BITE OF GLASS WON'T DO YOU ANY HARM

LYNCHBURG, Va. — It's utterly lacking in calories and vitamines and he doesn't recommend it as a regular part of anyone's diet but Dr. Mosby G. Perrow says a little bit of glass with your food won't do you any harm.

Jurors and courtroom spectators were literally popeyed when Dr. Perrow, Lynchburg's director of public safety, calmly munched a sliver of the transparent substance just to prove his point in a $50,000 damage suit in which he was an expert witness.

It didn't do him any good but apparently it didn't do him any harm. He made an excellent witness for the defense in the suit brought by Mrs. Bertie C. Conn, who claimed she had been injured by fragments of glass mixed with peanuts she bought at a Lynchburg store. She lost the suit.

Now Dr. Perrow is receiving fan mail. William R. Perkins, New York lawyer and an old friend of Dr. Perrow, asked facetiously: "In case the unexpected might happen, do you prefer glass flowers?"

Dr. Dice R. Anderson, president of Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga., formerly president of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, wrote Dr. Perrow a note congratulating him on his courage and adding he hoped no ill effects would follow.

VINCENT NEWS

Vincent remaining idle over the week-end will take on a strong Minor High School eleven at Vincent Friday at 1:30. Vincent has not been scored on or tied this season. The boys are in fine physical condition and are anxious for the fracas. They have been working hard on offensive plays. This will likely be one of the most interesting games of the season as all business men have declared a half-holiday in order to turn out for the game. A record crowd is expected.

The Athletic Association has agreed to share all the profits of a Fiddler's Convention at the high school on November 9 with the Vincent Civic Club. Both organizations are working hard to make this meeting a financial success as well as to provide amusement to those people who like string music. Several prizes will be awarded. String bands, string duets or individual performers who wish to enter the contests should communicate with A. L. Horton in Vincent, Alabama.

HEALTH SURVEY TO BEGIN IN TWENTY STATES REAL SOON

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—How does the health of American citizens affect economic and social conditions of the country, or any unit of the nation?

The answer to this question will be sought in a comprehensive survey which is about to open in Alabama and 19 other states, sponsored by the United States Public Health Service with the co-operation of the State Health Department.

The object of the survey, according to Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama State Health Officer, is to compile information as to the extent to which such ailments as heart disease, rheumatism, diabetes, cancer and digestive disturbances prevail in the United States, and the affect of such illnesses or economic and social conditions.

The study will be correlated later with data obtained previously by the Public Health Service in an intensive study of the importance and effect of chronic ailments on the capacity of the patient and family to remain self-supporting. An inventory will be made of the medical and nursing facilities available, and information gathered as to the extent to which the population availed themselves of existing public health and medical services.

Alabama was said to have been selected as one of the 19 states to be embraced by the survey because of the known efficiency of the statewide public health system and the interest the people are taking in the services. Dr. W. C. Beasley, a representative of the United States Public Health Service, will be in charge.

AT THE METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday morning and evening at the Methodist Church, the pastor will bring the last regular messages of the conference year. There will be special features to the evening service, reports being brought from every department of the church on the years work. The music will be a feature.

College Glee Club To Travel Extensively

MONTEVALLO, Ala. — Extensive tours through Alabama and Georgia are planned to give the Alabama College Glee Club its largest schedule in several years, according to H. D. LeBaron, director.

In December a concert will be given in Palmer Hall here, faculty and local musicians cooperating in this program, which will include several choruses from The Messiah.

Beginning November 8 and continuing through the month, the club will make a series of tours within the state prior to the home concert.

Officers of the club are Misses Margaret Burch, president; Sara Frances Smith, vice-president; Ruth Schuessler, secretary; Jean Richardson, business manager; Virginia James, librarian; and Margaret Burch, Willie Glea Hudson and Ruth Schuessler, accompanists.

The entire club is divided into three groups, and those appearing in concerts are selected on the basis of interest and attendance, as well on ability to sing and at reading music. The Associate Club, from which the concert group is chosen, is composed of upper-classmen only; while the freshmen have a separate organization and meet with the others only once a week for rehearsals. During the semester a special program will be given by the freshmen club.

The Singer's Club is an honorary organization, recognizing service in music. Miss Sara Kyser, president of the Music Council, presented pins to the following members of the honorary group recently: Misses Ann Barr, Margaret Burch, Alece Cooper, Elizabeth Messer, Jewel Pruitt and Jean Richardson.

Harman Speaks To Men's Bible Class

MONTEVALLO, Ala.—Dr. A. F. Harman, president of Alabama College spoke at the meeting of the Men's Bible Class at the new Strand Theatre Sunday morning. His subject was "A Neglected Christian Virtue." L. E. Shaw, president of the class, presided and led the singing, at which H. D. LeBaron was the accompanist.

Hoare Promises Britain Will Not Fight With Italy—Laval's Peace Efforts Continued—President Roosevelt Returns to Washington.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SIR SAMUEL HOARE, British foreign secretary, assured parliament and the world that Great Britain has no intention of fighting Italy and would not alone apply military sanctions against that nation. He held out strong hopes that the war in Africa could be settled without resort by the league to extreme measures. His speech was plainly an invitation to Italy to talk peace terms.

Sir Samuel Hoare

Denying that the government's policy is hostile to Fascism, Sir Samuel said:

"We have not the least intention of interfering in the domestic affairs of other people."

"The unbroken solidarity of the empire is behind the government's policy," he said. "Let those prophets of misfortune who have marked the empire down for decay and dissolution observe this fact of overwhelming importance."

Hoare hinted at British isolation from continental affairs if the league collapses.

Next day Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin warmly endorsed all that Hoare and Capt. Anthony Eden have done at Geneva. He deprecated even the use of the word war, but called for a rearming of the empire, saying: "In the interests of world peace it is essential our defensive services should be stronger than they are today."

Baldwin announced the adjournment of parliament on October 25 and the election of a new parliament on November 14. The campaign already is under way and is lively, with the international situation furnishing the main issues. The Labor party accuses the government of delaying action in the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio until too late to prove really effective, and impugns its motive in seeking rearmament.

MUSSOLINI made one conciliatory gesture toward Great Britain when he agreed to withdraw a division of troops from Libya; and at the same time he urged that France and Britain make quick reply to his peace conditions. But it became known the troops were to be moved from Libya to Tripoli, where they would be almost as much a menace to Egypt; and the duce's peace terms were so drastic that there was no prospect that they would be accepted by anyone concerned. They included disarmament of Ethiopia, an international protectorate over the central regions and an Italian protectorate over the remainder.

Addressing the foreign affairs committee of the French chamber of deputies, Premier Laval promised he would seek only a compromise that would be fully acceptable to the League of Nations. He told the committee that France's battleships would steam immediately to the assistance of Britain if the latter's fleet was atttacked by Italy.

WHILE Premier Pierre Laval of France was still trying desperately to find a way of settling the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel that would be acceptable to both Great Britain and Italy—apparently without regard to Ethiopia's real interests—fifty-two members of the League of Nations declared a boycott on all Italian goods and an embargo on various key exports to that country. The boycott binds these nations to prohibit importation of "all goods consigned from and grown, produced or manufactured in Italy or in Italian possessions from whatever place they arrive."

Pierre Laval

If rigidly enforced, this would cut off about two-thirds of the export trade upon which Italy depends in getting funds for prosecution of the war in Africa. The countries applying the sanctions agree to aid one another in compensating losses by increased trade facilities, credits, cash and loans if possible, and discriminating against league members such as Austria and Hungary which continue to trade with Italy.

Austria, Hungary and Albania spoke against the sanctions. Switzerland, which seeks to preserve her traditional neutrality, was silent. Some South American republics made complicated reservations.

It was decided that the sanctions should be put in force on October 31, and Laval thus had time to continue his peace efforts. These seemed to center on a way to "legalize" Italian occupation of that part of northern Ethiopia which Mussolini's troops have seized and to arrange for Italy's partial control over the entire empire.

GEN. RUDOLFO GRAZIANI'S forces in southern Ethiopia were reported to have won several important victories in their advance toward Harrar and the railway. They captured some towns despite desperate resistance by the natives, and took many prisoners. The main movement in that region was up the Webbe Shibeli river. The Ethiopians were repeatedly dispersed by aerial bombs.

In Tigre province, on the north, the Italians were consolidating their positions and preparing for another big thrust toward Addis Ababa. Their line there extended nearly 70 miles from Adigrat through Aduwa to the holy city of Aksum.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, deeply tanned and in fine spirits, returned to the White House, his holiday tour ended. When he landed from the cruiser Houston at Charleston, S. C., he told a big crowd gathered to welcome him that the country is on its way back to prosperity under the planned economy of his administration, "and don't let anybody tell you differently."

At an informal press conference just before he left the cruiser, the President was asked to comment on the "impending collapse" of his drive to put three and a half million employables on relief to work by November 1. He replied that November 30 was 39 days off and that November 1 had never been set as the deadline, and that he had been very careful to say that substantially three and a half million persons would be put to work. If three million are at work by November 30 he said he would be satisfied with the four-billion-dollar program, and that it could not then be considered to have fallen down.

One of Mr. Roosevelt's first appointments in Washington was for a talk with Secretary of State Hull on the European situation.

FOR the third time in his career Mackenzie King is now prime minister of Canada, following the victory of the Liberal party at the polls. Richard B. Bennett and his Conservative cabinet resigned and King was called on to form the new government, which he did at once. He himself was sworn in as prime minister, president of the privy council and secretary of state for external affairs. Thomas A. Crerar of Winnipeg was made minister of mines, immigration and colonization, interior and Indian affairs. Charles A. Dunning of Montreal is the new minister of finance and W. D. Euler of Kitchener has the trade and commerce portfolio. All the cabinet positions except that of agriculture were filled at once.

Mackenzie King

The resignation of W. D. Herridge as minister to Washington was accepted and became immediately effective. The department of national revenue announced cancellation of dumping duties on the following commodities entering Canada: Plums, prunes, radishes, spinach, and peaches.

ONE of the government's much publicized efforts to punish alleged income tax evaders of Louisiana failed when a jury in Federal court at New Orleans brought in a verdict of not guilty in the case of Abraham L. Shushan, one of the close associates of the late Senator Long. The prosecution claimed he owed $71,000 in taxes. The verdict was greeted with loud cheers by the crowd in the courtroom, and in the ensuing confusion several news photographers were beaten up by former members of Long's bodyguard—which seems to be a habit in Louisiana.

NEARLY 5,000 men and women from all parts of the United States gathered in Chicago and held a national convention of the Townsend plan, which, as most people know, would give every person sixty years of age a $200 per month income if the person agreed to spend it all within the month, did not work or have an income all told of more than $2,400 a year.

The elderly California doctor who devised the plan was present, and the delegates seriously undertook the work of formulating a campaign to compel the adoption of the plan at the coming session of congress.

FIRST of the big eastern railroads to seek reorganization under the amended bankruptcy act is the New York, New Haven and Hartford, which serves one of the most densely populated sections of the country. Its petition was filed because it was unable to meet taxes of $4,000,000 and interest of $2,200,000.

The railroad had sought another loan from the government, but the Interstate Commerce commission rejected the plea. The company had cleaned its treasury of collateral to secure loans of $7,699,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, $3,531,000 from the Railroad Credit corporation, and $16,000,000 from banks. The Pennsylvania system, which controls about 15 per cent of New Haven stock, did not appear ready to guarantee a further extension of credit.

"GERMANY is becoming a barren nation, intellectually, culturally and scientifically, under Hitler." That was the way Alfred E. Smith opened an appeal for financial aid for non-Aryan Christian and political refugees from Germany, at a dinner in New York held under the joint auspices of the American Christian Committee for German Refugees and the Emergency Committee in Aid of Political Refugees from Nazi-ism.

"I am informed that at this very moment I am speaking, 2,500 German refugees are on the verge of starvation," the former New York governor said. "Centers now operating and serving these refugees in Europe must be supplied quickly with money. They need aid, or will be forced to discontinue their work."

Dr. Albert Einstein, the eminent scientist, also was present and said German Fascism is directed mostly "against my Jewish brothers. The reason given is to purify the Aryan race in Germany. As a matter of fact, no such Aryan race exists and the myth of same has been invented solely to motivate the persecution and robbery of the Jews."

ALL states and communities have been asked by Aubrey Williams acting WPA administrator, to make better provisions for the care of "unemployables," for federal aid for the needy will soon be confined to providing jobs. In an interview Mr. Williams said that with six states already cut off the dole, progress of the work relief program would bring liquidation of relief administrations in "the great majority of the remaining states" during November. This will leave those physically or mentally unable to work, the aged, mothers with dependent children, and other handicapped families and individuals, dependent upon local efforts.

DR. HUGH S. MAGILL, who as president of the American Federation of Investors has been annoyed by congressional investigators, has written to all members of congress a letter asking whether American citizens "still have the right to express their approval or disapproval with respect to pending legislation without being harassed by 'inquisitors.'"

The federation opposed the recent enactment of the "death sentence" for "unnecessary" holding companies and was under investigation by the senate lobby committee.

In an open letter to senators and representatives, Magill said he had "refused" to permit representatives of the committee "to read my personal and private correspondence." He asserted the federation "is not a lobbying organization as that term is commonly used."

DEATH came to an eminent American, Maj. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, U. S. A., retired, at the age of ninety-one years. He passed away in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, and was buried in Arlington national cemetery with full honors. General Greely was universally known as the leader of the ill-fated expedition into the Arctic regions in 1881 from which only he and seven others returned alive. But he had already served in the Civil war with distinction, and his later scientific accomplishments won him international fame.

ARTHUR HENDERSON, president of the world disarmament conference and a most determined foe of war, died in a London nursing home. He was seventy-two years old and had been ill for a long time, so ill that he had not been permitted to see a newspaper for six weeks and did not know that another war had broken out and that the peace of Europe was threatened. The formen iron molder of Glasgow who became a leader of the Labor party and was foreign secretary when it was in power, was awarded the Nobel peace prize in 1934. His crusade for peace and disarmament was inspired by the death of his eldest son in the World war. He was a gentle, much loved man, a genuine idealist whose latter years were made sorrowful by the repeated failure of the disarmament conference to get results.

HELENA, capital of Montana, and all the western part of that state were terrified by a series of earthquake shocks extending through a number of days. There were only two fatalities, but numerous buildings were wrecked or so weakened that they had to be razed. Hundreds of persons were driven from their homes, and the suffering was intensified by a sudden fall of the temperature to below freezing.

EDWARD HENRY CARSON, who in 1921 was made Baron Carson of Duncairn, died in London at the age of eighty-one years, ending a strange and stormy career concerned mainly with Irish politics. A Protestant, he became leader of the Ulster party, organized and led the threatened Ulster rebellion in 1914 against the home rule bill and secured its postponement. When the war broke he turned his army to the battlefields of France and himself entered the British cabinet.

After the war Carson threw himself into the fight against the establishment of the Irish Free State and succeeded in securing the partition by which the six Ulster counties separated from the rest of Ireland.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Practical Jim Farley will have more to do with President Roosevelt's re-election—if he is re-elected—than all the New Deal brain trusters put together, or than many of the issues which in the last few months have attracted so much attention.

Farley has really built up a national organization. It ramifies down not only to every county, but to every precinct in the 48 states, and it is busy all the time. It has been working like mad in directions that have attracted no attention whatever. For example, it has been conducting a drive lately to get every Democrat, man or woman, who happens to be on the federal pay roll in Washington but charged to New York state, to register. It has run special excursion trains to New York with reduced fares, meal prices, etc., to bring about this registration.

This is a sample of the kind of activity which makes organization or machines (the choice of words depending on whether you are for them or against them) strong. It is the kind of thing that explains, in large part, why Tammany normally elects mayors in New York despite the black eye the tiger has in most of the country.

It is the reason the Republican organization generally won in Philadelphia, the Democratic in Baltimore, etc.

Much better illustrations are Chicago and St. Louis. The point here being that these two big Middle Western towns have had periods during the last twenty years when the strong organization was with one party, and then the other party developed a better. Thus proving that it is not the normal political inclination of the voters in these big cities which is so important, but the fact that the machine gets the vote registered, and then gets it voted on election day. Not to mention seeing that it is counted—at least once—after the polls are closed.

Started In Early

Farley began his real activities following the election of Roosevelt as governor of New York in 1930. His Tammany background was shocked at the state of the party above the Bronx. There were whole counties where the local Democratic organization was a mere adjunct to the local G. O. P. boss, and received patronage scraps from the local G. O. P. table in reward.

Farley installed a real fighting organization, with workers in every upstate precinct. That explained Roosevelt's enormous majority in 1930, which made him the logical Presidential nominee. With the opening of the 1932 campaign, Farley started the same sort of organization work for the whole country. He has been at it ever since. The 1934 election, far more sweeping than even the Roosevelt landslide of 1932, was not generally recognized as the fruit of this organization work, but actually it was most potent in bringing it about.

Today the organization that Farley has built up is stronger than in 1934. Whereas the Republican national organization, and the local organization in many doubtful states, is infinitely weaker than at any time since the end of the Civil war.

This is the very little discussed handicap that the Republican nominee to oppose Roosevelt next year will face. For instance, Illinois is admitted by many observers to be apt to go Democratic. Why? Because of the strength of the Kelley machine in Chicago, plus the Farley inspired organization downstate. Were the old Thompson machine in existence in the Windy City, the state would be figured probably Republican.

In Missouri the Pendergast machine in Kansas City, plus the decay of the old "Big Four" Republican machine in St. Louis, makes all the difference. It's votes in the ballot box, not sentiment 'round the radio, that elect. And machines know how to get them in the boxes.

Back to Prohibition

Most people may laugh at the predictions of dry leaders that this country is headed back toward prohibition—but not the distillers. Behind this attitude of fear is a very curious situation, very obvious to any one inquiring into it, but not generally realized. It involves the possibility that in the next fight to get prohibition, for the fight is not only coming but has begun, the effort will be to prohibit not any beverage in excess of one-half of 1 per cent, as the Volstead law read, nor even of "intoxicating beverages" as the Eighteenth amendment read—but distilled liquor.

Distillers are keenly aware of that. This explains their caution, as contrasted with the attitude of the brewers and wine makers. There was a great deal of talk, just before prohibition, about "light wines and beer."

All of which is curious in view of the tremendous prejudice which existed in that long period leading up to prohibition against the word "beer." It was generally coupled with an even more objectionable word "saloon." In fact, one frequently heard the words jointly—"beer saloon."

That prejudice seems to have faded until little is left of it. When wartime prohibition was being discussed in the senate, Wadsworth of New York, painted a delightful picture of the joys and temperateness of wine drinking. Senator Norris, one of the dryest of the drys, rose and asked if the senator from New York would be satisfied if the bill exempted wine. Wadsworth said he would like to save beer, too. Norris and other drys threw up their hands. It was unthinkable. It may be that this original prejudice, so much stronger against beer than wine, though wine contained normally a much larger percentage of alcohol, grew out of the difficulty some religious drys had in surmounting the Feast of Cana, but whatever the truth, the fact will be recalled by anyone in this country at the time that beer was far more obnoxious to the drys than wine.

Hits "Hard Liquor"

But now state after state, including Virginia, home state of Bishop Cannon, makes the sale of beer and wine simple, but throws many restrictions around the sale of "hard liquor." In a way the plan follows that practiced for a long time in Canada. So-called "wine cocktails" are offered in hotel dining rooms, but not martinis or manhattans. Beer is sold everywhere.

Beer and wine are sold in Virginia, Washington, and many other places in this country much more freely than in the old pre-prohibition days. Before prohibition the only places that would sell a customer a glass or bottle of beer were licensed saloons, which were strictly limited as to number. Now there are frequently five in one block. In Washington these are sandwiched between stores which are licensed to sell only packaged goods not to be consumed on the premises.

All of which change in sentiment—if it really does represent a change—is very apparent to the distillers, and their fear of the next fight grows, for their thought is that if the fight is concentrated on distilled liquor, or, say beverages exceeding 15 per cent or 20 per cent alcholic content, they will not have the brewers, the wine makers and the grape growers with them.

Postal Savings

While there is no intention in the administration of yielding to the clamor of privately owned banks for the abolition or sharp contraction, of the postal savings system, there is just as much opposition in official quarters to the elaborate plans for expanding that system, including checking accounts, and going into a general banking business.

Officials, both of the reserve board and post office, insist that they do not want to change the present system at all. They do not want to push privately owned and mutual savings banks out of business, and they do not want the government going into the banking business on a large scale. But at the same time they are unwilling to deprive the public of what they regard as a "privilege."

Actually it is rather puzzling that the postal savings system has not made greater inroads on savings banks in many communities, for example, the cities of New York state. In the Empire state the state banking authorities do not permit savings accounts to draw more than 2 per cent, which is precisely the rate paid by postal deposits.

But—postal savings depositors in many instances are buying postal savings bonds, and these pay 2½ per cent—more than they can get from any savings account in a privately owned or mutual bank in New York state.

As a matter of fact, the amount of such bonds so far bought, $101,977,560, represents just about the increase in postal deposits since last December, when postal deposits reached their peak of $1,208,000,000. They are now about $4,000,000 less than the peak, but would be nearly $100,000,000 above it, post office officials think, were it not for the savings bonds.

Money Is Safe

With the government guaranteeing all bank deposits, they point out, there is no question, so far as well informed people are concerned, of the safety of their money. So if the private banks pay a higher rate than the postal savings, the private banks should attract savings deposits as never before since postal savings was inaugurated.

Postal savings had the big boom, very naturally, in 1933, the year of the bank holiday. In December of that year they crossed $1,000,000,000. By the time confidence had been restored, and the government guarantee of deposits set up, the banks had begun to cut their interest rates. So there was no incentive to take the money out of postal savings and put it back in the banks. In most large cities of this country this is still true.

Where there are legal restrictions on the amount of interest that can be paid, as in New York state, it is just a question of protecting the banks from getting more deposits than they can profitably and safely invest, considering the low rate of interest paid on government bonds and other investments into which banks can put their funds. With the improvement of business, the state banking authorities could change this limitation overnight.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin.* You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

CHINESE, JAPANESE HERE

America's numerous Chinatowns, Chinese laundries and chop suey restaurants create the impression that the Chinese far outnumber the Japanese in this country today. The fact is, however, that there are 139,000 Japanese and only 75,000 Chinese. And although their women are seldom seen on the streets, there are 25 Chinese women and 70 Japanese women for every 100 men of their respective races.—Collier's Weekly.

"Yes—in Los Angeles. The February after I went away."

"But then, Ariel—Ariel, why did you run away with Dick! Did you make him think you cared for him? He wrote Phil, after all. He said that you were going to get a license—you had gotten a license."

"We got a license, yes. But you'll have to let me tell it the way it happened, Gail.

"Van took me back to the Monterey hotel that night," she resumed, finding her words slowly. "And he kissed me good-by, and said that he would always love me, and that I belonged to him. I believed him. I was all excited, but not ashamed—not one bit unhappy, Gail. I thought that there was something heroic about it.

"Dot didn't come in until after I did, and of course I didn't give her any hint. But we talked things over, and decided that we'd get up early the next day and give the boys the slip. We were wild at them!

"The next morning, while Dot and I were figuring it out how we'd get home, and we'd gone over to the bus to see what time it would leave, Buddy and Larry found us. They said that they were sorry and asked us to forgive them, and said they'd drive us home quietly and the whole thing would blow over.

"I was—well, of course I hadn't slept all night, but it was a sort of pleasant excitement, too; I felt—sort of swimming, in emotion, you know, and I said I'd like to watch the Pebble Beach golf for a little while, so we went there. Van was there, looking stunning of course, and terribly sweet; and we had a few words together.

"I wanted to get home and get rested, and have things go back to normal. So we started at about twelve, and then—then of course the accident came. Dorothy had left us, and I was driving.

"I thought Van would come to me the minute he heard. But he didn't. And then when he did show up in court he didn't say anything about an engagement.

"Once, when I said something, he said his stepfather would cut him off without a cent if he ever dreamed of it! He said that the main thing was to keep out of jail."

Gail could hear him. She could remember the ethereal little Ariel of three years ago; she remembered the casual, laughing Van. Ariel struggling with the saddest problem any woman ever knows—youth, faith, gaiety, security wiped away at a blow—and Van noisily jovial over her whispers, her asides, her anxious smiles and too-ready tears.

"You see, almost from the first, Gail, I knew what had happened. It wasn't the Hetty Sorrel business. I was sure. Ten days after that trial I knew what I was racing. And he didn't even like me; he didn't come near me. I telephoned, I sent notes, but he wouldn't come. You and Ede were so pleased that the trial had sort of—exonerated me, and that I was sobering down. I saw it, and every one was so happy, making plans. Dorothy well and safe and talking about going east for Christmas, and all the time—this tiger tearing at me."

"You poor little thing!" It was the first note of sympathy that had come into Gail's voice, and Ariel answered it by a quick blinking of filling eyes.

"It was all my own doing, Gail!"

"Isn't it always?" Gail asked slowly.

Those had been happy days for her. Days in which she had discovered Dick, discovered her own heart. And all the time the little sister had been walking in the shadows deeper than death, beside her.

"You can't think what it was," Ariel said. "I told Van. I didn't know what else to do! He didn't believe me, or he said he didn't," Ariel resumed. "And the next thing I knew some one told me calmly that he'd gone east. There was just one thing, Gail—" She paused. "Just one thing that kept me from killing myself," she added. "And that was you."

"Me!"

"You. You kept talking about how we had all to hang together, and get through the hard years, and carve out our destinies for ourselves. And I just couldn't do it! I couldn't shame and hurt you that way.

"The day after Van left I told Dorothy. And she said what he said, that she didn't think it was true. But they went away, too, Gail. She must have told her mother, and do you remember that Mrs. Camp took Dorothy east to school, right away?"

"Beasts!" Gail whispered, looking away.

"Dorothy only laughed about it," Ariel stammered, with a memory of that youthful agony and shame flushing her cheeks again.

"Laughed!"

"I couldn't tell you or Edith; I was afraid to tell Phil! I went to see old Doctor Somers, and he only said that he would rather have seen one of my father's children dead than have to tell her what he had to tell me!"

"Ariel—you poor child!"

"Van didn't answer my letters, and time kept going on, Gail, and I had no money! I couldn't get away, and I couldn't stay home.

"And then I thought of Dick, and that maybe if I was nice to him he would want to marry me right away—in time."

She laughed bitterly, fell silent again.

"What a fool I was!" she said. "But he didn't. He was wonderful, but he didn't care—that way.

"And then Christmas week came, and Dick was going on Christmas afternoon to Los Angeles, on a case for three weeks, and I wondered if he could get me a job, any kind of a job. So I went to his office—and I told him the whole story.

"He was wonderful! He never said a word of blame; the only thing he seemed to think of was how to get me out, and how to spare you and Ede and Phil. He adores our family, of course.

"He said that since I was a minor a very serious charge could be brought against Van. At first I wouldn't consider that. But he talked me over, and he composed a letter to Van, as my 'lawyer,' and sent it off that afternoon, a few days before Christmas, a few days before my eighteenth birthday. And Dick told me just to keep quiet and not worry, and that he would keep working at it, and it would all come out all right.

"Van wouldn't write me, ever, through the Clippersville post office, for fear we'd be discovered. We had rented a box in the Greenvale post office, and I used to take the trolley over there and ask for letters. And during this Christmas week I went over and there was a letter—from Van. He just said that he was not going back to college, but that his father had staked him to a year's trip around the world, and he and his chum were going. Gail, it went through my heart like a bullet."

"You should have wired his mother!" Gail said passionately. "You oughtn't to have let him get away with it!"

"Gail, she knew, of course."

"She couldn't!"

"Of course she did!"

The older sister was silent.

"Gail, do you know that I never felt—bad."

Gail reddened in embarrassment.

"I know what you mean."

"I mean," Ariel said, "that I loved him—I did care. I was carried away; I'd never loved anyone before!

"But what I did feel, Gail, was fury. Fury at myself for being such a fool! Like some cheap little factory worker—like a servant girl. Why, the servant girls have more sense! I could have torn myself to pieces, having Van smile and go his way, and Dorothy and her mother clear out."

"You have a child, Ariel?"

"Wait. Well, I lay awake all that night of Christmas eve, after we had come back from church, and I thought and thought—how to get away, what to do! And it seemed to me that I was going raving mad—I was, too. I thought the people in the church were looking at me, and I knew you and Edith would find out, long before they did.

"And then quite suddenly, peacefully, I made up my mind to go away with Dick, to make you think we were eloping. I thought that if Van sent for me I could tell you then, and if he didn't Dick would fix some way out!

"I got up at four and packed my bag and dragged it down and shut it in the old woodshed. And that afternoon, when you thought I had gone to Miss Vail's, I went out and waited for the trolley, and took the bus to San Jose, and bought myself a ticket to Gilroy. That was as far as my money would go.

"After the train was started I walked all through it, and I found Dick talking to a man, and he came right back with me, and I told him what I'd done!"

"And was he wild?"

"Wild? Oh, no! He said that he thought I had done right. He was wonderful!"

Gail's eyes flashed darkly blue.

"Dick—" she breathed.

"He said he thought it was the right thing to do. And he said not to worry, and that he would arrange everything the next day. He asked me if I had anything with me, and I said Oh, yes, my suitcase. So I took his berth and he sat up all night—thinking, he said."

The havoc she had left behind her, the havoc she had wrought in his life, had meant nothing to her then, and meant nothing to her now.

"He didn't mind," she said vaguely.

"We were going to be married the next day, Wednesday," she presently added. "But you can't do that down there. Dick wrote you that we were getting a license, and we did. But we couldn't get married, not for several days, and meanwhile Van wired, wired to Los Angeles. You see, he'd had Dick's letter, and it was true that he was going around the world, but by way of Panama. He wired that he would be in Los Angeles in sixteen days, and would see Dick.

"Then Dick said it would be much better to wait and see Van. To make sure, he cabled the ship in Havana. And Van cabled back, 'All right.' He was afraid of being arrested, on account of my being so young.

"Van's ship got in and we were married, and Dick and I swore that nobody should ever know. I hated him, then; I didn't want to marry him at all. But Dick said he would start legal proceedings.

"So we were married, and Van went on, on the next ship, and nobody knew. Dick had to go to Las Vegas for months; but he sent me money every month, and if he was in town he'd come to see me and take me to a movie or something. And I got work to do—you don't have much chance in the movies. I got a start—Ariel Adair they called me—only I didn't like it much. It's all right for the stars, but I never would have been one. So I got small parts with a stock company. We played Hollywood and Venice and Glendale and Pasadena. That was kind of fun.

"And then last year, when Murchison's Mills failed, Van came to Los Angeles again, settling things, and he came to see me. He told me that he had never looked at another girl, and he wanted to have me go back east with him. But then it was my time to say No," Ariel ended with a little curl of her lip.

"But you haven't told me, darling. What happened to you? Were you ill?"

"Oh, yes—or not so terribly ill. They said it was all wrong from the very beginning—it never would have been a healthy baby!" Ariel said. "They said it was luck it died."

Motherhood. The magic word, the magic estate of which Gail had dreamed. She was silent from sheer shock, sheer inability to speak.

"Anyway, I was in a hospital for three weeks, in a ward," Ariel went on bitterly.

"That was when?"

"February. While Dick was in Phoenix. He had cases all over everywhere. And I was taken ill very suddenly, and hadn't much money."

"You poor kid!"

"All that made me feel that I never wanted to see Van Murchison again. But he was having his hard times, too. Everything was crashing, and he was working hard in the New Jersey plant to save what he could. He's there now.

"When he came last year we had lots of long talks, and in a way he did what he could. He said he knew he had behaved terribly, but that he was a spoiled kid."

She was not very angry at him, even now. Gail saw, with a sort of stupefaction, that what the great Murchison did was still sacred, still above criticism, to Ariel.

"Finally we arranged it that if he went back and got a good start, with these people who have bought the mills," she resumed, "then I'd come on and we'd announce our marriage. And that's what has happened."

"You're on your way east now?"

"He meets me in Chicago next week."

A pause. Then Gail said, "You still love him, Ariel?"

"I don't love the idea of living in New Jersey," Ariel said, after a brief pause.

"But you're not unhappy?"

The old bored, haughty look.

"Oh, no," Ariel drawled. "But mind you, I was as much to blame as he!" she added with sudden force.

Gail mused on the whole story, her eyes on her sister's face, tumult in her heart, and the drum-drum-drum of the rain falling softly on the porch roof.

"You came here just to announce it?"

"Not exactly. Dick thought I ought to come home and explain."

"Was Dick at your boarding house?"

"Not even that!" Ariel said, with her scornful little laugh. "I tell you

"It Was My Own Doing, Gail."

he never so much as put a finger tip on me!"

"But you saw him all the time?"

"Off and on. He wasn't in Los Angeles much. But he would turn up and ask me if I had money enough."

"What a friend!" Gail said under her breath.

Ariel made no response. She was looking about the old kitchen.

"I can stay here, Gail, in spite of the Wibser tribe?"

"Darling, of course! And they're not such a tribe," Gail answered, laughing with a touch of hurt and reproach. "Just Lily and the boys. And look—this is the baby. This is Gail."

"They named her Gail!"

"Lily would have it."

"You might know she'd take your name, Gail. I suppose she's more a Lawrence than us Lawrences!"

To this Gail could make no reply. She said tactfully, "It's a quarter to seven, Ariel, and it looks as if either Phil had to be at the shop tonight, or had gone to Lily's mother's. You and I'll have dinner anyway. But what a buzz when the marriage is announced!" with a sort of mild awe. "Let's go upstairs, Ariel."

Ariel sat on at the table, a mutinous, dark look gathering in her eyes.

"Everything's changed, and I miss Edith!" she burst out suddenly, laying her head on her locked hands and beginning to cry.

Gail came over to her, and bent down to crook an arm about Ariel's bowed head. Her own eyes were brimming.

The Bonus at Last?
A Little on Account
Teagle Will Sell Oil
The Oceans Are Closer

Washington reports "payment of the $3,000,000,000 soldiers' bonus before the end of the next session is virtually assured." Good news for soldiers.

Arthur Brisbane

Do you suppose the government will print more of its "inflation bonds," and insist on paying interest on its own money, instead of printing new money for the bonus, or do you believe there must be some limits to stupidity?

The League of Nations wants us to "clarify our position." It would be made clear if the President would write to the League of Nations: "Our position is this: 'We are attending to our business, and advise you to do the same. Also, what about a little cash on account of $10,000,000,000 you owe us on the last war?"

Walter Teagle, head of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, disposes sensibly of the suggestion that all Americans should refuse to sell oil to Italy. He says Standard Oil is not in the League of Nations and he will continue selling oil through his Italian subsidiary.

This is news, important especially to California, where real estate prosperity grows with improved transcontinental trips.

The Santa Fe railroad, with a diesel engine, hauling nine steel cars and using 3,600 horsepower, has cut 15 hours from the running time between Los Angeles and Chicago.

Queer things happen in Ethiopia. The Daily Express says former War Minister Fitowrary Berru, in disgrace with the emperor because he spent too much money, walked, as a penitent, into the presence of the emperor, carrying on his back a heavy grindstone, and kneeled down in sign of submission. The emperor rolled the stone off his back, meaning forgiveness, and Fitowrary Berru is off spending money again. Some of our baked potato and "little pig" ministers might try that.

Here is war news:

England's soft-voiced Foreign Secretary Hoare begs, implores, beseeches Italy to make peace with Ethiopia while there is still time. "Sanctions" have not yet been applied. England and other countries are selling goods to Italy. "While the lamp holds out to burn, the vilest sinner may return."

You may see a new kind of "Olympic game" with long-distance runners wearing gas masks. In future wars soldiers will wear masks and civilians will wear them. Ability to run in gas masks will be important.

Russia knows that, and "training for the next war" eight men and women of the Osoaviakhim (society for aviation and chemical defense) marched 31 miles in gas masks in 10 hours 47 minutes, a world record.

General Smuts, minister of justice in England's Union of South Africa, says: "Annexation of Ethiopia or its domination by a great European power will mean training one of the biggest, most dangerous black armies the world has ever seen."

General Smuts worries about the conquering power of such a gigantic "black army" unnecessarily.

One pale chemist inventing a better poison gas, or more destructive explosives, and a few first-class pilots could take care of any "black army" that Ethiopia might send forth.

The American Federation of Labor asks American athletes not to attend the 1936 Olympic games, if they are held in Germany. As a reason for "banning German Olympics," the federation says Hitler is crushing labor unions "with blood and fire."

There is a better reason for not holding the 1936 Olympics in Germany.

The chief value of sport is in the fact that manly exercise is supposed, primarily, to develop and inspire courage.

The spectacle of 60,000,000 Germans cruelly persecuting and suppressing 600,000 German Jews is not exactly a picture of courage.

President Roosevelt has said that he intends to keep out of European complications. He will not let Europe complicate our foreign business, making it impossible for American concerns to operate merely to oblige European competitors. In any case our European friends should at least start paying the ten thousand million dollars they borrowed before asking the United States to lose more money for their sweet sake.

Dr. C. H. Mayo predicts that drugs will cure insanity. With the drug now used experimentally, Doctor Mayo hopes to effect permanent cures, by changing the blood circulation in the brain.

Lady's Painful Trouble Helped By Cardui

Why do so many women take Cardui for the relief of functional pains at monthly times? The answer is that they want results such as Mrs. Herbert W. Hunt, of Hallsville, Texas, describes. She writes: "My health wasn't good. I suffered from cramping. My pain would be so intense it would nauseate me. I would just drag around, so sluggish and 'do-less.' My mother decided to give me Cardui. I began to mend. That tired, sluggish feeling was gone and the pains disappeared. I can't praise Cardui too highly because I know it helped me." . . . If Cardui does not help YOU, consult a physician.

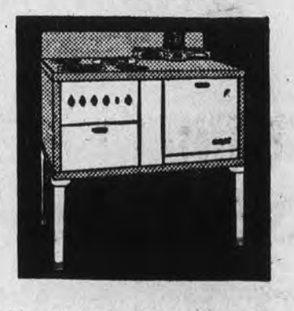
AN ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

—makes it possible for you to keep milk, cream, eggs, meat and other foods fresh and appetizing for days—leftovers need not be fed to the chickens. You can make appetizing, inexpensize frozen desserts frequently—every day if you like—it costs so little to operate an Electric Refrigerator.



NOW even modest homes can enjoy the comfort and convenience of electrified kitchens. The Economy Purchase Plan makes it possible to buy an Electric Refrigerator, an Electric Range and an Electric Water Heater all at the same time, with monthly payments so low that almost anybody can afford them. You might want to include an electric water pump too.

Of course, you needn't buy them all at the same time if you would prefer to buy them one at a time. You may already have an Electric Refrigerator and Electric Pump and may want to add the Electric Range and Water Heater and other equipment a step at a time. You can also do that under the Economy Purchase Plan.

Consider These Advantages

AN ELECTRIC RANGE

—helps keep your kitchen clean—is great for roasting meats without waste—bakes biscuits and cornbread to a queen's taste—is fine for preserving and canning—makes all food taste better—gives you more time OUT of the kitchen — costs surprisingly little to operate.

AN ELECTRIC WATER HEATER

—operates automatically and gives you all the hot water you want—when you want it—where you want it. Makes it convenient to take a nice refreshing bath every day if you like—makes dishwashing and churning easier and helps you keep the house clean with less work.

AN ELECTRIC PUMPING SYSTEM

—will bring running water to the house, the barn, the milking shed, the poultry house, the yard—any place you want running water. It does away with pail totin'—saves time—gives you time to rest or do other things.

Investigate These Devices!

PERSONAL MENTION

By MILDRED WHITE WALLACE

OCTOBER'S GEM.

"Filter the strain of Summer's reddest petals,
Distil the dews that August moons have wept,
Rob the May sky of sunset's varied metals,
Filch the rich greens from lawns where June has slept:

Harvest the ripened grain's dull gold and yellow,
Borrow the blue and mauve of July dusk;
Suffuse your rainbow-loot with fawn and mellow.
Amber and tan of withered leaf and husk—

Soften the reds with dust from beam and rafter,
Blend them with flames a fallen star has lost.
October's gem is Summer's tears and laughter
Inclosed in crystal globes of Autumn frost".

The above poem from the pen of Don Blanding, marks the passing of the prettiest season of the year. The splendor of its color appeals to every lover of nature—for those who have hearts to feel and eyes to see. No more glorious pictorial charm can greet the eye, than the crimson gold of the sunset, and the silver disc of the harvest moon as it rises, soon after Old Sol has gone to sleep. Did you happen to view this splendid occurence last week? Did you happen to watch the moon rise above the crown of a solitary hill top, or peep from behind a scattered group of trees? No lovlier picture has been painted than the ascendency of Harvest Moon which we viewed last week as we topped German Hill—At Sundown!

W. H. ROSE — JOHN T. WALTER

It is my happy privilege to present to you a little pen point sketch of W. H. Rose and John T. Walter, Managers and Operators of the new Dixie Theatre in Columbiana.

The "new dial" system, recently installed in Columbiana, has been ting-a-ling-a-linging almost constantly this week in an endeavor, on the part of hundreds of interested "would-be" patrons of the new Dixie Theatre which will stage a brilliant opening on next Friday night, Nov. 1., to find out something about the promoters of this "long wished for" improvement for Columbiana and vicinity.

It was no easy task to catch these busy gentlemen. Several trips were made to the theatre, but so many hammers were clamoring, so many technicians were installing new lighting effects, and placing the new R. C. A. equipment, Simplex Projectors etc., that it was impossible for Personal Mention to hear above the din and clatter of various implements, which meant the realization of a long anticipated "picture playhouse", which will be a credit to the community it serves, presenting only the highest type entertainment available. You have asked WHO the promoters of this new project for "Your Main Street And Mine" are? Where they came from? etc.——and finally catching Manager Rose during the dinner hour, between "bites", we deciphered the following "facts and figures" from this interesting well versed showman, with the pleasing personality and the striking brunette type of masculinity:

All right—Question number one, (received from the village queens) is answered. Mr. Rose is not married. The other two gentlemen, Mr. Walter and the artistic designer, Harry Holroyd, are! Mr. Rose laughingly stated his co-workers had taken the march to Hymen's altar, but he had, in some way, been left out of this "partnership" deal. However, (confidentially) "it may not be long now", you never can tell. At the present time, however, Mr. Rose is a BACHELOR, in love with his profession. He comes to Columbiana from Selma. For 15 years he worked with Wilby—and if you have ever taken a dip into the Cinema world, as a business investment, no further introduction is necessary regarding this "top-notcher" of silver screen presentations. Now! What Mr. Rose does not know about this intriguing ever entertaining movie game, we would not be interested in finding out. Patrons of this theatre will have all the advantages Birmingham offers, for the picture list to be presented here is complete. Mr. Rose desires to cooperate with the P.-T. A. and other organizations for the benefit of the communities he will serve. He is public spirited, wide-awake, energetic and a good "mixer". In other words, he has our hearty endorsement and full cooperation. Go down to the new Dixie Theatre Friday night, and let us know whot YOU think about it! Look elsewhere in this issue of the Democrat for the week's program. And, when we can interview busy Mr. John T. Walter, who spent the week-end with his family, we will tell you more about him.

The Democrat is now on the list of the Leonard Subscription Agency—better known as "James and Buddy". If you have not paid your little American Eaglet, please cooperate with "Buddy" Leonard, whom we are happy to welcome as one of our most enthusiastic co-workers.

Have you seen the adorable babette from Five Point neighborhood, John Charles McGhee, in a new pair of "white overalls". Six months old if you please, but standing quite squarely on his toes in the Democrat office last week. He was about the cutest little specimen we have ever seen from STORKLAND. The entire

LET JUNIOR MAKE OWN SIMPLE FROCK

PATTERN 9606

Lives there a Junior Miss who couldn't "fall" for this smart yet simple school frock? We just know she will want to make her first fall frock from this pattern, because it's so very easy to cut, assemble and stitch, and if Mother is too busy to supervise the operation, take the pattern and some pretty cotton to sewing class and work on it there. The youthful, square neck adopts a scarf-like collar to slip under its tab, the puffed sleeves have a hearty slash. Action pleats grace back bodice and skirt, a box pleat, the side front skirt.

Pattern 9606 may be ordered only in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 12 requires 2⅝ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Nature's Ice Box O. K.; Keeps Food 33 Years

Nature's ice box has even the best of mechanical refrigerators skinned when it comes to food preservation. Keeping food in good condition for years is no trick at all for natural cold storage plants such as the Antarctic wastes. According to Dr. Dana Coman, physician and dietician for the Lincoln Ellsworth-Sir Hubert Wilkins expedition, food left in a shack in the South Polar region 33 years ago was found to be still edible when discovered. The long-preserved food supplies were left by a Norwegian explorer, Otto Nordenskjold, in 1902.—Washington Post.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

It's a Season of Glamor and Glitter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

STYLE prophets predict a season of dazzling effects and sumptuous dress. According to the signs of the times women will sparkle from morning to night this fall and winter.

Their silk velvets will be embroidered with strass. Their wool-like silks will be elaborated with gilt braid. Sleeve ends and collars worked in a solid mass of huge sequins will challenge the supremacy of fur on evening coats. Silk chiffons will be beaded and silk crepes pailletted for formal wear either in allover patterning or confining their glitter to belts and angel sleeves or scarfs. Gorgeous silk lame lapels will adorn evening tailleurs with which matching lame turbans and blouses, bags and belts will be worn.

Jeweled ornaments will hold the drapes of harem skirts and clasp shirred and bloused bodices. Seed pearls will make chokers (new high collar fashion) and form passementerie embroidery—thus the story of glitter and glamor might run on ad infinitum.

Fabrics weighted down with beading, embroideries, sequins and jeweled ornamentation must hold and not pull out of shape. Women want their cloky surfaced silks to stay in, their crinkles to remain crinkled. They want to be assured that their taffetas will stay crisp, their chiffons and crepes not to grow sleazy and sloppy and so they are coming to realize more and more that care and discrimination must be exercised in choosing quality-kind fabrics. Which explains the reason why the demand for silks that are pure silk (the inherent elasticity of silk is important) is more insistent this season than it has been in many a previous year. So much for the practical side of the question and now let us turn to the models pictured with a view to studying each individually since they are so charmingly illustrative of the current trend to glitter, glamor and to dazzling effects in the silk parade of fall and winter fashions.

The beauteous model to the left is fashioned of rich silk lame in a delectable tone of blue, shot with silver. The square decolletage is set off by jeweled clips the like of which also form the buckle for the belt. The short sleeves are interestingly cut on kimono lines, giving fullness to sleeves and shoulder.

Eastern influence in evening fashions is most pronounced. Note the sari shawl of gold sequins which envelopes head and shoulders, adding brilliance to the stately black gown pictured to the right, which is made of a handsome silk velvety sheer. A tunic effect is simulated via an adroitly positioned ruffle on the skirt whose princess lines are slenderizing in a subtly sophisticated way. This ruffle ties at the back in a clever pose. The smartest dressed women regard black with the glittering note as first in fashion this season.

Greatest enthusiasm is shown for the cocktail dress or suit that adopts street length, it being a new entrant in the formal realm. The girl seated is wearing such a suit, its formality attested in the silk metal cloky tunic jacket with the now-so-fashionable frog fastening at the waistline. The afternoon dress is of a grainy silk crepe in the same aqua blue shade as the metal cloky which fashions the jacket. A jeweled clip accents the draped neck. The peaked beret with its ornamental veil is high-style in its every detail.

TAILORED JERSEY

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Wool jersey comes into its own, in that leading style creators are using it for their practical daytime dresses. The vogue for gray is increasingly apparent. There is a new beige-gray tone which is especially good style. Color accents on gray is fashion's latest message. The gray-beige jersey two-piece frock here shown is contrasted with a gay green and multicolor scarf with belt in matching green tone. The one-piece tailleur buttons down the front. It is fashioned of fine jersey in natural beige tone with trim accents in deep wine.

Matching Gloves

Handbags and gloves that match exactly as far as color is concerned are a smart accessory note. Wine and pine green are two popular colors.

HIGH HAT THE WORD IN FALL MILLINERY

It's a high-hat season.

One of the newest high hats in the fall parade is the domino crown turban, which has a rolled edge and a little square topknot that sticks straight up in the air exactly like an enlarged domino.

It's shown in velours and suede, with a small fly-away bow in front, and is a pretty trick with some of the new fur coats.

Another top-knot idea is developed in a bonnet cap of black felt, with a big frou-frou bunch of black satin ribbon rising impudently from the top-front of the crown. Small scalloped loops of black satin edge the bonnet.

The Tyrolean urge is still with us, in casual brimmed sports hats of velours or felt, with high, peaked crowns and perky quills.

Wool Dress Can Be Worn for Almost Any Occasion

Jean Patou has created one of those all-time dresses which can be worn for almost any occasion.

This dress is in brown wool with the back of the bodice and the sleeves of the taffeta in brown, green and red plaid. The accompanying jacket of brown wool has wide revers of brown caracul and turn-back cuffs of the same fur. The costume is completed by the Patou thimble hat in brown felt. The narrow brim turns way up in back and far down in front and a bright red quill is its only trimming.

Goldfish Used as Buttons

Tiny metal goldfish, with black-tipped fins and tails in approved goldfish style are used to button a knee-length tunic of a tea gown.

Narrow Braid Used

Narrow embroidered braid is set together with gold metal threads to form a colorful and unusual collar and cuff set worn on a black crepe frock.

Composition Feathers

Feathers of composition, in very vivid shades for velour hats, are among novelties seen in the shops.

Lesson for November 3

JUDAH TAKEN CAPTIVE

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 25:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people.—Proverbs 14:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Black Man God Cared For.

JUNIOR TOPIC—In Time of Danger.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Results of Doing Wrong.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Nations Accountable to God.

I. The Siege of Jerusalem (vv. 1-3).

1. The time (vv. 1, 2). It began on the tenth day of the tenth month of the ninth year or Zedekiah's reign, lasting about eighteen months. The tenth month, according to the Jew's calendar, corresponds to our December-January, as their calendar began about the middle of March. The reason the exact time is given is that this was to be an event of great importance to the Jews in their exile. In their gloomy exile God directed Ezekiel to utter a parable unto the captives of that day (Ezek. 24).

2. The method (v. 11). Nebuchadnezzar came in person with a large army and encamped against Jerusalem, building forts against it round about. It is thought that several walls were built around the city, shutting it in. On the tops of these walls forts were built from which missiles of destruction could be hurled by their engines of war against the city. With the city thus shut in, its fall was only a question of time.

3. The famine (v, 3). Geikie says, "It was speedily followed, as is always the case, with an outbreak of pestilence. Food was well-nigh gone. There had long been no bread. Mothers were at last driven to murder and eat their children. The richest citizens wandered about searching for scraps in the dung hills." Even outside the city the people were starving. "There was no bread for the people of the land." It is estimated that one-third of the people of Jerusalem died of starvation.

II. Zedekiah's Flight and Fate (vv. 4-7).

1. "The city was broken up" (v. 4). The Chaldeans had succeeded in making an opening in the wall so large that they could make their way into the city in spite of all that the Hebrews could do. Resistance was carried on to the bitter end.

2. Zedekiah's flight (v. 4). The king with his men of war fled by night toward the plain. His object no doubt was to cross the Jordan at Jericho and hide in the mountains east of the Jordan.

3. Zedekiah's fate (vv. 5-7).

a. He was overtaken in the plains of Jericho (v. 5). As soon as the Chaldean army discovered the flight they pursued and captured him.

b. He was brought to the king of Babylon at Riblah (v. 6). Riblah was a town north of Damascus. It was the king's headquarters from which he directed his armies against Tyre and Jerusalem. Before Nebuchadnezzar Zedekiah was tried as a criminal.

c. His fate. His sons were slain in his sight. His own eyes were put out. He was bound with fetters of brass and they carried him to Babylon where he remained a prisoner to the day of his death (Jer. 52:11).

III. Jerusalem Destroyed (vv. 8-10).

The dismantling of the city was delayed a month, perhaps awaiting instructions from Nebuchadnezzar who was at Riblah. The work of destruction was executed by the officer next in rank to the king.

1. They burnt the house of the Lord (v. 9). This was the sacred temple built by Solomon, with additions and alterations. Before burning it, they plundered it of all its sacred contents.

2. Burnt the king's house (v. 9). This was doubtless the palace built by Solomon.

3. Burnt all the houses of Jerusalem (v. 9). The implication is that the common houses were left for the people (v. 12).

4. They broke down the walls of Jerusalem. The aim in this was to render the walls useless as a means of defense.

IV. The Disposition of the Temple Furniture and Priests (vv. 13-21).

1. The temple furniture carried to Babylon (vv. 13-17). The pillars of brass and the brazen sea were broken into pieces by the Babylonians and together with the utensils were carried to Babylon.

2. Certain officers and priests taken to Riblah (vv. 18-21). These officers and priests and three score men of the land were taken to Riblah, where they were slain by the king of Babylon.

The events recorded in Second Kings cover a period of 308 years. God had said, "If thou wilt, then I will"; they had invited disaster by disobedience.

Experience

In youth we learn how little we can do for ourselves, in age how little we can do for others. The wisdom of experience is incommunicable.

A Good Man

It is better for a city to be governed by a good man than by good laws.—Aristotle.

Nature

Nature never stands still, nor souls neither: they ever go up or go down.—

Navajo Brave May Be Wed to Several Sisters

It is not unusual for a Navajo brave to be married to several sisters of the same family at the same time, according to Wick Miller, an authority on Indian arts and customs.

"That state of affairs is not objectionable to the Navajos," he said. "But they are extremely careful not to marry within their own clan. All in all, I would say their standards are higher than ours, and I believe they live up to their ideals, as a whole," better than white people. As the Navajos lead a wandering existence, their dwellings are temporary shelters. Wherever the Navajo is, he must be busy. Everybody has plenty to do. And everybody is happy.

Vanity Justified

If vanity is ever justifiable, it is in having a face that leads a reserved and reticent boy to tell his troubles to you.

The Culture Club met at the home of Mrs. Alvin Bird on Thursday, October 24. This meeting marked the first Fall program, and everyone enjoyed the attractively arranged course of study and entertaining features which the program committee has completed. Mrs. Cecil Duke was accorded a hearty welcome as she was received into the membership of this oldest club in Shelby County. After the short business program, Mrs. Purnie Hendrick gave a few minutes in parliamentary drill work. The new constitution and rules were then read and approved.

Stark Young's new novel, "So Red The Rose", was added to the Club Library, after which the gracious hostess served a delicious salad plate with coffee. Mrs. Childs and Mrs. Mims Roberts were guests of honor on this lovely occasion.

The club will hold its next meeting with Mrs. Sydney Bird on November 7th at 2:30 p. m.

The Physical Education Department from Shelby County High School was represented in Tuscaloosa at the fifth district meeting on October 26, by Misses Vivian Nix, Elizabeth Vershot, Billie Jean Young, Kathryn Finley and Hazel Ruth Swann.

ADULTS ARE SAFE FROM PARALYSIS, OFFICER BELIEVES

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Dr. J. N. Baker, Alabama State Health Officer, believes that "a vast majority" of adults in the United States are immune from any epidemic of poliomyelitis, or infantile paralysis.

"The paralysis from which the disease acquired its name is not a common symptom of the disease," Dr. Baker ssaid. This may be hard to believe, but those who have studied particular outbreaks estimate that a vast number of children are attacked, but that only a small percentage are actually ill enough to call a physician and so most cases are never diagnosed. These cases have only a slight illness and recover in two or three days without developing any of the serious tragedies of the disease.

"These very mild, unrecognized attacks are responsible for most people escaping recognizable infection. Having had the disease in a very mild form they are protected against a second attack. Probably the vast majority of adults in the country are safe from any epidemic."

Of the 4,334 crippled children examined by the rehabilitation division of the State Department of Education during the last year, 341 had disabilities attributed to infantile paralysis. The disease has never reached the epidemic stage in Alabama, however, and few cases are reported during the course of a single year.

Dr. Baker said that little is known about the prevention of the disease, although much has been, and can be, accomplished in the after-treatment of cases that do occur. The medical and scientific world is constantly working to find preventive measures.

"Apparently, to-day, we have greater hope of controlling this disease than at any time in the past, and of removing the terrors associated with the very name —— infantile paralysis," he said.

RESOLUTIONS

WILLIAM G. PARKER.

Whereas, Brother W. G. Parker was a member of our church for many long years. Some say he was a charter member, but we hardly think so, as the church is supposed to have been established in 1856, and he did not come to the county this early, but he was its main stay for more than half a century. During all these years our records and old settlers tell us that Brother Parker was always a faithful member, being prompt at its services and always had his heart and soul in the success of the church and its activities, and especially the Sunday School. He was liberal with his means in helping the church to keep going; and whenever the rub came and sacrifice must be made, Brother Parker came to our aid; because his whole heart and best interest was in his church, and he loved his church and its people and gave his best for it.

Brother Parker was the principal standby in the Sunday School. He and his good wife never forsook the Sunday School or preaching service for anything else that came along. After the death of his last wife, his home was broken up and he went to Gulfport, Mississippi to live with his loved ones who so lovingly and graciously cared for him until the end came which was just last week October 14th when the Lord called him to his long home.

On his visits here, even when he was very feeble, he always came to his beloved church, and came to the Men's Bible Class during Sunday School, and we are constrained to write these resolutions in his behalf.

Therefore, be it resolved that we feel very keenly the loss, especially the Bible Class, has sustained in the going of this good man, and that we extend our sympathy to his children, grandchildren and all of the host of his loved ones, who mourn his loss.

(Signed) Committee Appointed By The Men's Bible Class of Columbiana Baptist Sunday School.

Over a four-year period, American nitrate of soda has averaged the highest seed cotton yields at the South Carolina Experiment Station. The average, 1,759 lbs., was made with a basic application of 600 pounds per acre of 4-8-4. Another good showing by a Southern product!

Mrs. (Buddy) Leonard Now With Democrat

It is now time to pay your subscription to Shelby County's Leading Newspaper, the DEMOCRAT. Nationally known periodicals can afford to lose profits on their circulation area in order to secure a sufficient coverage in a large field to attract advertising, but your County paper, with its limited field for service cannot afford an actual loss on circulation because the advertising patronage could not be developed sufficiently to cover the loss and leave a profit.

We are happy to announce that Mrs. James (Buddy) Leonard, of Columbiana, has accepted the position of Field Representative with The Shelby County Democrat, and we will deeply appreciate your cooperation in helping her bring the large subscription list up to date.

We have attempted to give you each week a newspaper covering National, State, County and Community news. Your loyalty and interest has made the Democrat the widest circulated newspaper in Shelby County. We are deeply grateful and sincerely hope for your continued valuable support and cooperation.

Associate Editor.

Lauderdale Sends Farmers Message

We have received the cotton sale certificates and have distributed them to the buyers.

It is necessary for producers to get two copies of these certificates for each sale made, and I would suggest that you see or write to your buyer to send you the certificate giving him the date you sold the cotton.

As soon as you get the certificate from the buyer, mail to me.

When we get the sale tickets in the office, we will arrange a schedule to meet the producer and make out application for the additional money.

It is very important to get the sale certificate in this office as soon as possible, as no schedule can be arranged until you do this, so I want to urge you to get in touch with your buyer at once. (Signed)

NOVEMBER 9 SET AS STATE UNIVERSITY HOME COMING DAY

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—Alumni of the University of Alabama from all sections of the state will gather here November 9th to celebrate Home Coming Day. Letters which have been pouring into the office of the alumni secretary for the past few weeks indicate the largest gathering on any Home Coming Day in the University's history.

Features of a crowded program include a football game at 2 P. M., between the University and Clemson, preceded at 11 A. M. by an important meeting of the State Alumni Association in the Union Building, followed by an alumni luncheon in the Tutwiler annex. Other events on the program include a Home Coming Dress Parade and Review at 10:00 A. M., and meeting of the Board of Trustees at 10:30 A. M., Saturday. Festivities conclude with a dance at 9 P. M. under auspices of the Athletic Association.

THE DIXIE THEATRE STAGES BRILLIANT OPENING NOV. 1ST

The Dixie Theatre staged a brilliant and successful opening in Columbiana on Friday night, November 1st. A capacity filled house of enthusiastic picture fans greeted the new Managers Rose and Walter, formerly of Selma, Alabama, and continued patronage through the week has borne out the fact that Columbiana wanted a picture, needed a picture and will whole heartedly support a picture show.

Ted Lewis and His Band will furnish a beautiful musical background for the rollicking, lilting musical comedy offered for Thursday and Friday nights. On Saturday night, you will have the opportunity of seeing Richard Dix in, "West of the Pecos", by the famous author, Zane Grey—an out-of-doors picture which will appeal to everybody.

Watch the Democrat for further announcement of future plans of the Dixie Theatre. Among those contemplated are a Mickey Mouse Club for the kiddies on Saturday morning. A pop-matinee on Saturday beginning at 2:30 o'clock, and special feature pictures have been booked by various civic and patriotic organizations of the town, which will be announced later.

SIX FFA CHAPTERS ORGANIZE DISTRICT FFA NOVEMBER 4TH

F. F. A. boys of Shelby, Bibb, Chilton, and Autauga counties met at Jemison Monday evening, November 4th, and organized a District F. F. A.

Six chapters sent four representatives each to the Jemison meeting. They came from Columbiana, Jemison, Centerville, Billingsley, Isabella, and Clanton.

The Jemison officers had charge of the meeting and used the regular F. F. A. opening ceremony for this meeting. After the ceremony the president of the Jemison chapter appointed a nominating committee to meet with the local advisers of each of the chapters and select boys for officers during the coming year.

While the committee was out deciding on the boys for the officers, some good talks were made by F. F. A. boys from each of the chapters. Most of the talks were made on the program of work of the different chapters represented.

The Principal of the Jemison school, Mr. Peterson, made a good talk on, "Some of the work done by the Jemison chapter of F. F. A., and why F. F. A. boys should organize a District F. F. A.".

The nominating committee recommended for president a boy from the Clanton chapter; for vice-president a boy from the Isabella chapter; for secretary, Rudolph Minor, from the Columbiana chapter; for treasurer a boy from the Centerville chapter and for reporter a boy from the Jemison chapter and for the district adviser, Mr. J. P. Montgomery, from the Jemison chapter.

It was decided to have a meeting once a month and to meet once a year with each chapter.

After adjournment the Jemison chapter served the boys lemonade and cookies in the Home Economics department.

WEST BLOCTON TRIPS SHELBY COUNTY, 47 - 0

With a determination seldom seen in high school football circles the West Blocton Tigers routed the team from Shelby County High here by a score of 47 to 0. The locals scored seven touchdowns and kicked five extra points. The visitors were bottled up by the strong defensive display of the Tigers, and not once did they ever get within scoring distance of the West Blocton goal line.

The Tigers outplayed the crimson wearers in every department, running up a total of 259 yards gained from scrimmage as against 25 yards for the visitors, and chalking up 16 first downs while holding their opponents to five. The penalties during the battle were few, each team drawing two.

The ball carrying of West and Darris were outstanding features of the game. West plowed into Shelby territory 10 times for an average of 6 1-2 yards, while Darris carried the pigskin 15 times and averaged four yards per try. The left-footed drop kicking of Lyles, who is a right-footed punter, was one of the game's high spots. The performance of the forward wall as well as the other backfield men was commendable, each man filling his position well. Davis, Shelby County's shifty back, was the principal ground gainer for the visitors.

MONTEVALLO BEATS ISABELLA TEAM, 19 - 6

Montevallo won its second straight game by defeating Isabella, 19-6. Montevallo's first touchdown came in the initial quarter when Weems slanted off tackle for the marker. The second tally came in the second quarter when Lee, behind perfect interference, ran a punt back 65 yards.

Montevallo's last marker came when Harrison drove the ball over after Green had placed it on the one-yard line. Isabella's touchdown came on a pass with White racing 30 yards after receiving the ball.

For Montevallo, Weems and Harrison starred in the backfield and Wood was a standout in the line. Green punted four times for an average of 37 yards to an average of 26 yards for the Isabella punter. Lecroy starred for Isabella with his great running.

Isabella attempted 17 passes and completed five. Montevallo attempted four and completed two. Montevallo led in first downs, 10 to 4.

MINOR TEAM BOWS TO VINCENT, 20 TO 13

Vincent stopped the Minor eleven, 20 to 13, here for the locals fourth straight win this season. Denty, Vincent center, made the first touchdown on a blocked punt in the initial period, but Minor tallied in the same quarter on a pass from Johnson to White.

Late in the second period Embry ran off tackle for 65 yards and the second Vincent tally, but Minor again tied up the score when Johnston returned the opening kickoff for the second half for a touchdown.

Looney scored the winning tally for Vincent in the final stanza on a pass from Beavers. Willis, Bell and Gardner were the outstanding linesmen for the locals, and Carr played a brilliant game in the backfield. Johnson and White starred for Minor.

Homer J. Bearden Is New Standard Man

Registered In Chancery 7-5-38

Homer J. Bearden, prominent young business man of Columbiana, received a promotion this week from the Standard Oil Company, and will assume the northeastern county management of this company's interests in Shelby County.

NEW DIAL 'PHONE SYSTEM STARTED HERE NOVEMBER 4

The new dial telephone system went into effect promptly as scheduled on Monday night at 9 o'clock. The booming voice of Mayor Harry Gordon conversing with Hugh White, President of the Public Service Commission, was the first message of welcome confirmation that all lines were working satisfactorily. Columbiana has the distinction of being the only town in the United States with a population of 1100 citizens, which can boost the Dial Telephone System installed by the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

Mayor Gordon has been working on this progressive step for Columbiana for several years and Monday night marked the chalking up of another "dream realized" by Alabama's most progressive and up-to-date Mayor.

This play is under the sponsorship of the Senior II Class of Shelby County High School, and is under the special direction of Kay Wood.

"Anne Make-Believe", is full of romance and pathos. There are many comedy situations that are different. Some of Columbiana's best talent will be presented in special parts. The audience will be keyed up every minute, watching the play unfold.

521 PERSONS WERE KILLED BY AUTO IN STATE LAST YEAR

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Death, riding on four-wheels-no-brakes; death lurking behind glaring headlights; sneaking in along with the driver who seeks to save a second, who knows that "I am safe" and cares not for the other.

Death! The Grim Reaper who followed automobiles driven by Alabama men and women and picked up 521 broken bodies to call his own last year. The thousands injured were not his concern.

This number of fatalities from automobile accidents represents an increase of 41 or 8.5 per cent compared with the average number of deaths for the two preceding years.

"Although the total number of automobile fatalities represents less than two per cent of the deaths from all causes, the important point to remember is that practically all such deaths can be prevented," said Dr. Leonard V. Phelps, Director of the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the State Health Department.

"Deaths from motor vehicle accidents are rapidly increasing each year. If the human factor can be controlled most of them can be prevented. Those who are interested in accident prevention should cooperate through educational and law enforcement programs in eliminating this unnecessary loss of life.

"The blame in most instances rests with the driver. It is not possible to postulate exactly what safe speed is because it will vary according to circumstances. The main point is, be careful."

Mt. Era P.-T. A. Sponsors Program

The ladies of the Mt. Era P.-T. A. sponsored an interesting and entertaining program of music and plays Saturday night. During the evening, candy and sandwiches were sold. Miss Kathryn Rush won the cake which was sold for the prettiest girl. The proceeds amounted to $21.55.

Shower Given Rev. Jones At Mt. Era

Brother and Mrs. Jones were honored with a shower and pounding Saturday afternoon at the church. After a bible contest, a large clothes basket was presented to Mrs. Jones. She displayed the many nice, useful gifts. A delicious plate of a drink, cake and salad were served to a large crowd.

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all drug stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. President Raps Tugwell for Budget Prediction—WPA Job Program Moves Rapidly—Farmers Indorse Corn-Hog Control for 1936.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REXFORD G. TUGWELL, undersecretary of agriculture and once considered head man of the "brain trust," made a speech at Los Angeles the other day that called forth a sharp rebuke from President Roosevelt. Addressing a Democratic gathering, Tugwell asserted that the administration could satisfy every humanitarian demand and still balance the budget in 1938.

R. G. Tugwell

Mr. Roosevelt, in a press conference, scolded the newspapers for printing what he called "crazy stories" and went on to declare that Tugwell's assertion was almost as unfounded as the predictions thrown out by many political observers that the budget probably would never be balanced again. Tugwell's statement wasn't quite as "wild" as the newspaper stories, he remarked, because Tugwell knew a little more about the budget than the newspaper men.

The President said he and his advisers were about to make a study of the financial situation, and that until the budget is finally drafted about the first of the year not even he knows what shape it will take. Every effort, he said, would be made to hold the regular government departments down to the figures of this fiscal year, but he would make no predictions as to emergency expenditures.

JOBS for 3,500,000 needy persons by November 15, and an end of the dole by December 1. That was the forecast made by the New Dealers in Washington, and it appeared probable of accomplishment. Officials said states will receive no direct relief allotments from the government for December and that the November grants will be greatly reduced. The employment program is a month behind schedule, but is now being carried forward rapidly. Every state director of the PWA has been given a job goal by Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and was told by that gentleman:

"The responsibility for carrying out these objectives, through providing work on approved projects, rests squarely on you."

As November opened these state administrators had $1,018,947,649 to spend, and every day Comptroller General McCarl was putting more to their credit in the federal treasury. Of the $3,330,843,803 tentatively approved in WPA project values by President Roosevelt, McCarl had passed $2,450,293,894. Of the $1,060,207,831 definitely allocated for WPA by the president, McCarl had countersigned treasury warrants for all but $41,260,182.

NEW DEALERS have scored a major victory, and are correspondingly elated. By a majority of something like 10 to 1, the corn-hog producers have voted for a continuance of the crop adjustment through another year. Incomplete returns from the referendum showed that the program was favored by a majority in every one of the 33 states from which votes were received.

Chester C. Davis

"It is only natural that we should be pleased with the apparent approval of adjustment given by corn and hog farmers," said Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, as he watched the returns come in at Washington. "If the final results bear out present indications another voluntary contract will be offered for both corn and hogs."

In a formal statement Davis emphasized earlier assurances that the AAA would seek a 25 to 30 per cent increase in hog production next year, saying the "need for increasing the present pork supply of the nation. . . will be kept in mind in plans for the next adjustment contract."

Before the results of the voting were known President Roosevelt announced tentative plans for making the AAA over from an emergency to a permanent agency. Observers in Washington concluded that Mr. Roosevelt intends to make the AAA a major campaign issue next year and to rely for re-election largely on the voters in those western states that have received the largest cash payments in the carrying out of the crop adjustment program—taking it for granted that he will carry the solid South.

CONTINUING the administration's policy of "enabling farmers to market their crop in a more orderly fashion," Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced a corn loan of 45 cents a bushel on the 1935 crop, available from December 1 until next July 1. The Commodity Credit corporation had already approved this and asked a commitment from the R. F. C. to provide the necessary funds.

Wallace estimated that about $150,000,000 would be advanced to corn growers under this program. Borrowers must sign the AAA corn-hog control contracts. The loans will be made on corn which, if shelled, would grade No. 3 or better. The grade requirement last year called for was No. 4. The loan rate then was 55 cents a bushel.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI defies the League of Nations and its sanctions. In a speech at the inauguration of the new university in Rome he said:

"In the face of an economic siege toward which all civilized people of the world should feel supreme shame, in the face of an experiment which they wanted to test, for the first time, against the Italian people, let it be said:

"We will oppose it with our most implacable resistance, with our most firm decision and with our most supreme contempt."

However, it was announced in Geneva that the duce was willing to negotiate for peace with Ethiopia, and there was a possibility the league would delay for 15 days the application of further penalties.

King Victor Emmanuel issued a decree putting the entire Italian merchant marine on a war basis.

Prime Minister Baldwin's reply to Mussolini's defiance was a blunt assertion that Great Britain was prepared to resort to force, if necessary, to carry out the sanctions. Said he: "We mean nothing to the league if we are not prepared in the end, and after grave and careful trial, to take action to enforce its judgments."

The British government made new protests to Italy against Italian press attacks on Britain and anti-British propaganda in Egypt, and three more destroyers were sent from Gibraltar to Malta.

WHILE the League of Nations was going forward with its plans for the imposition of sanctions against Italy, its officials asked the United States government to comment on this policy, for the attitude of this country is considered vital to the success of the program. Secretary of State Hull replied promptly but with extreme caution, avoiding comment on the action taken by the league powers and inferentially declining to cooperate in the sanctions. The answer, whose tenor was dictated by President Roosevelt, was sent to Minister Hugh Wilson at Berne. It only set forth the moves made by the United States under the neutrality act and restated our government's hope for world peace. In press conferences Mr. Hull stressed the fact that this country will continue to move independently to keep free and untangled as President Roosevelt has promised.

Secretary Hull

AMERICAN citizens are not respecting the embargo on shipments to Italy and Ethiopia to an extent that satisfies the administration. Therefore the President issued this statement:

"In dealing with the conflict between Ethiopia and Italy I have carried into effect the will and intent of the neutrality resolution recently enacted by congress. We have prohibited all shipments of arms, ammunition, and implements of war to the belligerent governments. By my public statement of October 5, which was emphasized by the secretary of state on October 10, we have warned American citizens against transactions of any character with either of the belligerent nations except at their own risk.

"This government is determined not to become involved in the controversy and is anxious for the restoration and maintenance of peace.

"However, in the course of war, tempting trade opportunities may be offered to our people to supply materials which would prolong the war. I do not believe that the American people will wish for abnormally increased profits that temporarily might be secured by greatly extending our trade in such materials; nor would they wish the struggles on the battlefield to be prolonged because of profits accruing to a comparatively small number of American citizens.

"Accordingly, the American government is keeping informed as to all shipments consigned for export to both belligerents."

Secretary of State Hull issued another statement calling upon American citizens to desist from trading with either Italy or Ethiopia. Such trade, he declared, was conducted "at the expense of human lives and human misery."

EARTHQUAKE tremors that were felt in many localities all the way from Spokane and Calgary to New York and Boston were severest in Helena, where at least two persons were killed and many injured. SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—President Roosevelt is heartily in favor of the recent action of the Interstate Commerce commission, as a result of which the New Haven railroad is now seeking receivership with a view to scaling down its capital debt structure.

It has been in the President's mind for some time that the interest payments being made by the railroads were entirely too high. He has frequently commented to friends that whenever a bond issue is made, by a railroad or any other business, provision should be made for an annual curtailment of that loan, so that at the end of a given number of years the bonds could be retired from the sinking fund. Frequently, he has pointed out, the bonds are still part of the road's capital debt, and adding sharply to its fixed charges, when the improvement for which they were issued has long since been worn out and replaced, usually by another bond issue.

The original idea of the administration was to use the Missouri Pacific as a yard stick in cutting down the capital structures of the railroads. The plan was to reorganize this railroad, always a weak sister, though always prominent as an important link in first this and then that transcontinental line, in such fashion that it could earn several times its fixed charges, and hence sell bonds on a 3 to 4 per cent basis.

Actual figures as to amount of bonds and interest are so complicated, with the Missouri Pacific and the New Haven, and for that matter with all railroads, that illustrations would take a column to explain. But here is the Roosevelt idea illustrated simply.

Suppose a railroad had $500,000,000 of bonds outstanding, at an average interest rate of 6 per cent. Some railroad bonds bear as low as 4 per cent, and some as high as 7 per cent, but the average is not far from 6 per cent because there are more of the higher rate bonds than of the lower rate.

To Illustrate

In this illustration, the fixed charges of the road, so far as bond interest is concerned, would be $30,000,000 a year. Taxes and this bond interest as well, of course, as all operating expenses must be paid before anything can be given the stockholders. In addition, every time some of the bonds fall due, the railroad has a terrible time floating a new issue even if it is a fairly prosperous road, and usually has to pay handsome bankers' commissions for placing the new bonds.

Now suppose, further, that the road, after paying operating expenses and taxes, has just $20,000,000 left over, on the average, for bond interest. Which actually is little better than the case of the Missouri Pacific, and a little worse than the case of the New Haven.

The New Deal plan would be for this mythical road to go through receivership, as the New Haven is about to do, and take advantage of Section 77(b) of the bankruptcy act. When it emerges, it might have a total capital debt in bonds of $400,000,000, but on a 3½ per cent basis. This would make its annual bond interest bill $14,000,000 instead of $30,000,000. As the average earnings applicable to bond interest would be $6,000,000 in excess of this, however, the road could expect the lower interest rate. But instead of the $6,000,000 in addition being paid in dividends, a sizable fraction of it, say $5,000,000, would be used to retire bonds every year.

The stockholders would be actually better off than they were before. In the illustration given, there would probably be no dividends for some time after the reorganization. But the property in which they have an equity would be at least on the road to a better situation. Whereas if reorganized under the old tooth and claw method, they would probably get nothing.

The same sort of plan has been worked rather successfully on non-railroad corporations, though of course the most important new phase of the law is that it prevents such reorganizations being held up by minority security holders demanding more than their share.

"Pitiless Publicity"

President Roosevelt is expected to decide that present regulations and practices protecting the names of exporters of war supplies from publicity should be modified, thus applying the "pitiless publicity" so much talked about by his former chief, Woodrow Wilson, to the present situation.

Under the present practice, ship manifests are held confidential, if such a request is made by the exporter. Even where publicity is allowed, the name of the exporter is not made public. Thus it was impossible for reporters in New York recently to be sure which of the oil companies had made very large shipments of oil to Italy.

Treasury officials are considering permitting publication by newspapers of every detail as to exports. Naturally, they will not do so if the State department objects, and conversations on this point are now proceeding. Officials of both departments, as they admit in private conversations—though, of course, they decline to be quoted—favor such publicity, and it is their confident expectation that the President will agree with them.

Such a change of course would have no legal effect in deterring anyone who wished to ship such war supplies as are not banned by the President's proclamation. The reason the oil companies and shippers of other war supplies are opposed to any change, and wish to retain the present protective secrecy, is that they fear a boycott of their products by individuals who would resent what they would regard as "war profiteering."

It is increasingly manifest that the sentiment of the country was strongly behind the action already taken by the President, and that it would favor going even further—save where the pocketbook of individual sections might be affected. This is realized by the companies now selling oil to Italy, and those selling metal which, while not actually ammunition, can be made into ammunition by very simple processes once it reaches Italian workshops.

Limit Motor Speed

Automobile manufacturers are not talking about it, publicly, but they realize a very strong tendency which may force limitation of the possible speed of automobiles. Motor-car makers discussed the situation very seriously at a recent meeting in New York. Of course they are prepared to fight such legislation, either by the states or the federal government, but the vice president of one of the big companies admitted to friends here within the last few days that the motor industry would not be surprised to see such legislation very widespread within two years.

In the face of advertisements that new models will "crowd 100 miles an hour," most of the present consideration of the problem by its advocation is aimed at restriction to speeds not exceeding 60 miles an hour. Some of the extremists would go as low as 45, the speed limit on the open road in a good many states. The idea suggested would be to prohibit the operation in a given state of a car capable of running in excess of a given number of miles per hour.

If only one large state, or any state regardless of size, whose citizens buy a large number of cars, should impose such a restriction, the effect on all motor manufacturers would be very serious indeed. For such a law as is being advocated would not permit the mere addition of some such simple governor controlling the number of revolutions as was used by some cautious car owners in the early days, for the would-be reformers are determined that it must be something which cannot be taken off. It would have to be, to comply with their ideas, a built-in part of the motor.

Liquor Regulations

Reports from the distillers all over the country indicate that there will be no important opposition to the new regulations which Administrator Franklin C. Hoyt has suggested for labeling liquor. It is already virtually decided that some administrative changes will be asked, but only one change in the proposed regulations will be recommended that is of any interest to liquor purchasers.

That is the desire for postponement for a month, or two months at most, of the dates on which the new regulations go into effect.

As at present proposed, after January 1 next no whiskey can be branded as "straight" unless it has been aged in charred oak casks for at least one year. After June 30 next no whiskey can be labeled "straight" unless it has been similarly aged for 18 months, and after January 1, 1937, for two years.

The industry would like to mark up these three dates, especially the first one. But as to the general idea, there is very little dissent. It is generally recognized that conditions have changed, with the passage of time since repeal, which justify the higher standards that the proposed Hoyt regulations set up.

As to blended whiskey, the restrictions would merely be that not less than 20 per cent of any whiskey marked "blend" should conform to the requirements for "straight" whiskey—that is that after January 1 next this proportion of straight whiskey must be used, and that it must have been aged in charred casks for one full year, after June 30 it must be 18 months old, and after January 1, 1937, it must be two years old.

Must Be Labeled

Another restriction which is generally approved requires that the amount of neutral spirits, or alcohol, used in blended whiskey must be stated, and also that it must be plainly labeled that such neutral spirits were produced from grain, or molasses, or whatever.

Actually very little neutral spirits made from molasses or other than grain bases is now used in blending whiskey and gin. In the early days of repeal one of the largest producers, in an eastern city, used almost exclusively neutral spirits made from molasses. There is not alleged to be any question that such neutral spirits are any more harmful than those made from grain. Actually the two products are not different chemically. It is just a question of taste. For reasons which flabbergast the chemist alcohol produced from grain seems to make a smoother blend than alcohol of the same chemical content made from molasses.

KILLED BY FLYING SHEEP

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches: or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Afterward they went upstairs, through the familiar halls and past the familiar doors, to talk desultorily, inconsequentially, of anything and everything. When a wail from the kitchen took Gail down there again on flying feet, Ariel, bare-headed and looking young, small, and tired again, came too, and then Lily, Phil, and the boys came in and there was a babel and confusion in which somehow Gail and Ariel managed a cup of tea.

When Gail went upstairs after dinner, supposedly to superintend the little boys' retiring, it was to be noted that she remained there some additional moments. When she came down she wore her newest gown, a simple, thin black velvet gown that left her slender brown arms bare and fell away in a long line from the straight column of her throat and the curve of her young breast. At the throat there was golden old lace, her mother's lace, and Gail wore tonight her mother's old cameo ring.

The tawny locks that had been bobbed three years ago were longer now and gathered in a cluster of curls at the nape of her neck. Gail rarely showed any color, but tonight there was a subdued sparkle and shine about her; her wide sweet mouth was burning scarlet, her sapphire eyes starry.

Phil, Lily, Sam, Ariel—they all sat in the room that had once been the lesser drawing room but that now had been changed into a living room.

The fireplace was opened, and logs crackled there. The boys' blocks and books were stored on the shelves, and a ring of comfortable shabby old chairs circled the hearth. Lily only listened tonight. She was a good deal older than Ariel, but she seemed a little afraid of her. Gail was rather silent, too. She sat, slender, thoughtful, and tawny-headed, at Phil's knee on a cushion. Her square shoulders rested against her brother, her square fingers were locked, her eyes thoughtful, and her full underlip slightly bitten.

Sam drafted for tomorrow afternoon's Challenge the announcement that would take all Clippersville by surprise. Little Ariel Lawrence, Mrs. Vance Murchison. Ariel, listening, correcting, appeared the least concerned of the five.

There was a step at the side door, a gust of rain-sweet air penetrated to the sitting room. Gail had known this must come. She did not stir, except to raise her eyes to Dick Stebbins as he came in.

Phil did most of the talking. Dick talked, too, to Lily—to all of them except Gail. To her he did not speak directly until the clock struck ten and she got to her feet.

"Ariel, you must go to bed. You must be dead. Come on!"

"Are you coming back, Gail?" said Dick then, with a glance.

"I think not. We'll be talking," Gail said, with a smile, "all night."

"Tomorrow I'll have to hang around the hospital in the hope of seeing poor Willoughby."

"If he died, Dick," Phil asked, "would that kind of throw the monkey wrench into your plans?"

"Well, in a way. There are two or three other propositions I could follow up," Dick answered, unruffled.

He was the old Dick, and he was a new Dick, too. A quiet big man, very sure of himself. His manner, his voice were more authoritative than they had been. He had not worn a big belted coat three years ago, nor jammed big gloves into its pockets.

"Willoughby is doing the London work for his eastern firm," he said. "And there was some talk of my going with him."

"If you didn't, might you practice here, Dick?" This was Gail.

"I don't think so—not in Clippersville," he answered decidedly. "International law, you know . . .

"Seen 'Caravan'?" he demanded abruptly, looking at Gail.

"You mean the big musical comedy?"

"Yep."

"No, I haven't. It's playing in Oakland tomorrow."

"I noticed that," said Dick. "Want to go up?"

They were all looking on, suddenly awakened, suddenly aware of the situation. But she could not see anything but the lean, homely kindly face that was smiling—just the hint of a smile—at her.

"I'd love it!" she said.

* * * * * * * *

The great news rocked Clippersville breakfast tables the next morning, and Gail, walking to the library in the delicious autumn freshness after the rain, was assailed on all sides.

"The family knew she was married," Gail said, over and over again, hoping that this was not stretching the truth to the breaking point. "But they were both so young—and Van had no prospects—and then that unfortunate business of the bankruptcy came."

But Ariel's marriage was in second place for her. She was thinking all the while that it was almost nine o'clock, and that in eight hours Dick Stebbins was coming to the house to take her off for dinner and the theater in Oakland, 35 miles away.

She did not have to wait so long to see him. At about ten o'clock he walked into the library and came up to the desk. Gail saw his hulking figure in the entrance arcade, and her heart turned over completely, and the hand that was resting on her desk blotter trembled.

When he stood before her she reached both hands across the high desk.

"Dick, we couldn't say much before Lily last night. She's not to know everything. But how are we going to thank you for standing by Ariel, for saving her?"

"Why, that was all right!" he said, laughing a little awkwardly, flushing warmly.

"Ariel's only a child still, Dick; she can't appreciate it. But Phil and I do—I do, from the bottom of my heart!"

"I guess you know why I did it," he wanted to say. "I guess you know I was glad to do it!" was what she heard.

"That doesn't make it any less!" she told him.

"It's a nice town to get back to," he said, after awhile. "On a morning like this, with everything washed fresh and cool, there's something awfully friendly about it."

"And how's poor Mr. Willoughby?"

"Not so good."

"Mrs. Cantor," Gail said seriously, "told me that he had been told by the finest New York doctors that he would simply have to stop drinking and eating the way he was."

Dick listened respectfully to this and other Clippersville revelations. He had all his old simple, keen interest in Gail's point of view; he was especially concerned and amused over her reports of Lily and Ariel.

"They don't like each other?"

"Well, they're polite. But they have nothing in common!"

"No," he conceded, deeply struck, "I suppose not.

"But Lily makes Phil happy?" he asked anxiously, more than once.

"Oh, utterly! He's mad about her."

"And that's a cute baby!" Dick said, in satisfaction.

* * * * * * * *

The autumn sun shone, and only the occasional fall of a yellow leaf through the crystal air indicated that the month was October and not May. The hills were transparent blue gauze, all about the canyon and the dam, when the Lawrences took their lunch up there on a hot clear Sunday afternoon.

Dick Put His Big Arms About Her and Crushed Her Against His Heart.

Gail and Dick walked up the creek bed alone, after the meal. Both their faces were flushed and damp when they sat down presently on a great fallen redwood, up in the sweet shadowy woods, and smiled at each other.

"Gail," said Dick then, "do you know that you have grown to be the most beautiful woman in the world?"

Her blue eyes deepened oddly, like summer water touched by cloud shadow.

"If you say so—" she stammered, finding her voice with difficulty.

Neither one could seem to speak again. Dick stood up, and after a second Gail got to her feet, too, and turned as if she would have gone back down the trail.

"I guess you know what I've come back for, Gail," Dick said then. "You've always been the only woman in the world for me. But to come back and find you—what you've grown to be—with all the town—every one—more or less in love with you—"

He stopped, for Gail had come up close to him and was holding out her hands. Dick put his big arms about her, and crushed her against his heart, and they kissed each other.

It was half an hour after that first, deep kiss that shouts from the deserted party at the dam brought them back down the trail. Their hands were linked as they followed the rushing stream back; it was four o'clock on an October afternoon, the sun was already sinking.

Hot light poured through the thinning foliage, and lay graciously among the red, twisted madrone branches, and on the shafts of the redwoods. The birds were all still now, but bees went by like bullets, and here and there bright-winged flies buzzed in weaving columns in the sun.

"And all that time—all that time, Dick, you cared?"

"Yep. But I didn't know it was going to be all that time," he said honestly. "It—sort of—went on, from day to day."

"I knew I cared," the girl said seriously.

Suddenly the two stopped on the rough trail and smiled at each other.

"This all seems like a dream," Dick confessed.

Sun-browned, her tawny hair in a little disorder, her blue eyes bright, she stood looking up at him without speaking—her man, the man who was to take care of her, stand by her, and love her, all her days.

"Dick, after all these years—after all the other girls—it's so strange to think of myself as engaged!"

"It's strange to me to think that, at last—" He stopped on a brief, odd little laugh. "That at last I've gotten Gail Lawrence!" Dick finished it boyishly.

"It's all so strange," Gail mused, her fingers clinging to his, the glory and beauty of the autumn woods about them. "I'll be Mrs. Richard Stebbins!" she said.

"Gosh!" the big man said, smiling down at her, small and square and tawny-headed, flushed with walking, radiant in this exquisite hour of fulfillment.

"It's all come out like a story," Gail decided contentedly. She jerked her head, with a sudden little touch of self-consciousness, toward the unseen picnickers. "They know," she said, with an abashed grin.

"I don't know why they know," Dick answered, surprised.

"Oh, they do! But let's have it—ours, for just a little while," the girl pleaded. "Let's not tell them today, anyway."

"You're the boss," Dick agreed, as they went on.

The others were making preparations for departure. It was four o'clock. Gail gave no sign as she began to help gather sweaters and cups; Dick said nothing. But Lily shot Phil a significant glance, accompanied by a brief nod, and Phil went up at once to his sister and caught her by the arm and turned her about.

Gail's innocent inquiring glance changed guiltily, and she laughed, the rare hot color spreading over her face. In another second Phil had given a great shout, and Gail was laughing and crying in his arms, and Lily, leaping over her amazed children, had run to embrace Dick wildly.

After that every one laughed and shouted. It was Ariel who was the most surprised; entirely taken aback.

"But Dick Stebbins, Gail," she said later, in a faintly complaining tone, in the privacy of their own room. "He—after all, his father was our father's—well, foreman! Employee!"

"Ariel, you little fool!" Gail answered with a joyous laugh. She was too happy to quarrel.

"Well, after all, birth does count," Ariel said discontentedly.

But Gail was too much absorbed in her own thoughts to hear her.

If Mr. Willoughby lived, then Dick would duly depart with him in a few weeks' time, and instead of following up the London offer would establish himself somewhere in the East, possibly in Washington.

If his superior died, Dick would go east at once, and follow the same course.

In either case he and Gail would be married in—say eight months.

"Call it a year. It's safer, Dick."

"Eight months. Maybe six."

"That would be April or May!"

"April or May."

He came soberly into the library, ten days after the picnic, to tell her that old Willoughby had quietly slipped away.

Gail's face paled a little.

"So it's no London?"

"No London."

"After all your work, Dick!"

"Oh, that! It'll come in, somehow, some day."

"But it does mean a fresh start?"

"In a way it does. But the thing I mind is leaving you."

"No help for it!" she said gallantly.

"I suppose not."

"I have something, you know," she said hopefully, after a pause. "Phil is fixing it all up now. Ariel wants money, and Sam and I would as soon wait. So it looks as if we might get the ranch, he and I, and he says he'd like to live there and farm it, and put out twenty acres of table berries. If he does, even though it might be some time . . . And then there's The Bells of Saint Giles!" she added, in increasing hope. Dick laughed.

"It'll all work out," he said, following the laugh with a faint frown. "But—it isn't just what I wanted to offer you, my darling."

The last word fluttered her senses, and she laughed excitedly.

"Besides, there may be a miracle!" she said.

Dick looked into the honest, shining, loving blue eyes so near his own, and lightly touched the square, capable hand.

"You're the miracle!" he said.

The phrase was destined to become a household word. For it was but a few days later that Dick came to the Lawrence house to dinner, late, and handed a telegram to Gail across the rice muffins and the old blue milk pitcher and the glass bowl of pink October roses.

"Read it aloud."

Dazedly, she obeyed. It was signed "George G. Leavitt."

"We would be glad if you could arrange to take Paul Willoughby's place, assuming full responsibility for London office. Can offer you assistant if desired."

"Dick!" She swallowed hard. "What does it mean?"

"It means being picked out of the ranks, and handed a field marshal's commission!" Dick said in a voice that shook.

"Congratulations!" Phil said, his handsome Lawrence face one glow of pride and satisfaction.

"But Dick—Dick—can you," Gail stammered. "I mean—are you sure? Without—without—"

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Bay of Fundy Power
Religion Aids Mussolini
Cheap Eggs for Soldiers Government Railroads?

Governor Brann of Maine is unwilling to share expenses, and President Roosevelt may drop the Passamaquoddy power project. That would be a national misfortune. While spending billions so freely, it would seem worth while to spend thirty-six little millions to harness the gigantic tide power in the Bay of Fundy.

Development of that project would supply the whole state of Maine with power and industrial prosperity and pay for itself.

To allow the vast power of one of the highest tides on earth to continue going to waste would be as foolish as it would be to cease using the power of Niagara.

In Milan, Cardinal Schuster, celebrating mass for those that died in the Fascist march on Rome, indorses earnestly Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia, praising "the valiant army which, in intrepid obedience to the command of their fatherland at the price of their blood, open the doors of Ethiopia to the Catholic faith and the civilization of Rome."

Also, according to Associated Press, the cardinal praised Fascism as "promising the national morality wished by the Catholic church."

Italian soldiers in Ethiopia, much surprised, can buy as many fresh eggs as they want at ridiculously low prices.

Ethiopians will not eat eggs—their religion forbids them to devour "that which might have life in the future," but they are willing to sell the eggs to the Italian soldiers and let them imperil their immortal souls by "devouring future life" if they choose.

Ethiopian tribesmen have no scruples about eating the chicken, once it is hatched, which shows that religious scruples take interesting forms. What about the "future life" that the hen might have produced?

Railway labor unions plan a Washington lobby, to promote government purchase and operation of railroads. Owners of some railroads would gladly share the expense of that lobby, if they could sell their railroads at a fair price.

Running a railroad in competition with automobiles, motor busses and trucks is like running a legitimate hotel in competition with night clubs and other former speakeasies.

Russia is a successful spy hunter, having convicted on the average one every six hours, according to "Collier's."

If, in Russia, you are convicted of spying, no second conviction is ever necessary or possible.

These 100,000 spies, to earn their money, must keep international suspicion alive, and that helps to keep war alive.

Rejoicing in the fact that "the 13 years of the Fascist regime have not passed in vain, and the world of plutocratic and conservative egotisms is obliged to take note of this," Mussolini denounces League of Nations sanctions aimed at him as "a preposterous crime destined to increase disorder and distress in every country."

Pan-American Air Lines asks air travelers: "Shall we serve cocktails to passengers?"

The answer should be emphatically "no." First, the average cocktail is unfit for any stomach, except perhaps that of a carrion-eating hyena; second, it has been proved more than once that alcohol and flying do not mix well.

The President inspected "fortifications" of the Panama canal, returning from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Unfortunately there are no fortifications on the Panama canal. The canal depends on its locks and they, open to attack from the air, could easily be destroyed. No engineer will deny that.

The way to have a "fortified" canal is to build one at sea level. In these spending days that might be done now, through Nicaragua.

Uncle Sam would have something to show for his money more substantial than groups of weary gentlemen "raking leaves."

There is encouragement in the fact that "regular jobs," not the artificial made-to-order kind, are increasing. Three hundred and fifty thousand men were hired in September, and payrolls for September are $12,000,000 a week above August.

Warner Brothers' successful production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," under the direction of Max Reinhardt, proves courage and sound judgment.

The picture is a financial as well as an artistic success, greater by far than any recent Shakespearean stage production with living actors.

Mr. Burton, of Cosmopolitan Magazine, asks various highbrows and brows of middling height to answer: "Will world peace ever be possible?"

The answer is "Yes," but paid spies may postpone the happy day.

Among other parasites, the world now supports 100,000 spies—men and women. Forty thousand have been caught and convicted in Europe during the past 15 years.

Costume of Suede Is Top o' the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

STOP, look and listen for it's most important news we are telling you—all about the latest sensation in fashiondom, namely the costume done entirely of handsome, colorful suede. In the perfectly stunning dresses, jackets, swagger coats and many-piece ensembles of all-leather which are stepping out into the limelight this season, an epoch-making chapter is being written into the annals of fashion history.

A significant thing about this intriguing all-leather movement is that designers have discovered that suede adapts itself with equal facility to formal as well as casual sportsy styling. Which is a line of thought to whoich our minds must adjust would we fully appreciate the broad scope covered in the new leather fashions, since hitherto the mention of leather in a style sense meant its use for sturdy sportswear only. In the new order of affairs suede qualifies as aptly and happily as a medium for the loveliest and daintiest of formal evening apparel as it does for the sturdiest of outdoor garments.

To prove to your satisfaction the truth of the above assertion, we invite you to glimpse the "love of a gown" as pictured to the left in the illustration. The lady of the evening as here portrayed is Bette Davis of cinema fame. She is wearing an exquisite gown of white chevrita suede. Which goes to show that Hollywood agrees with Paris in this all-leather vogue now sweeping throughout the style centers of the world. An adorable gown, you will admit, is this beguiling suede formal. It has the slink, suave lines to which so many of fashion followers aspire. A high neckline in front with low backline outlined with braided suede adds further distinction to this charming gown.

Suede evening wraps are also in high fashion, either of the short jacket styling or in loose swagger lines. Capes, too, if you please, some of which are elegantly collared with white fox.

To the right in the picture, Kathleen Burke, another favorite, is wearing a five-piece ensemble done entirely of handsome suede, in a fascinating tone of rich hunter's green. It is one of the hand-laced types (the skirt is sewn together with leather thongs) such as is foremost in fashion this year. In fact, laced leather is the password to high style in the thrilling suede outfits that are being turned out for fall and winter. For the seams to be laced together as here shown dates your costume as being unmistakably a "last word" creation.

In the instance of the five-piece "set" here shown, lacing is carried out along the edge of the side-front fastening of the form-fitting skirt, also on the collar and revers of the swagger coat and two-buttoned vest. A saucy youthful suede beret together with a miser's drawstring bag completes this perfectly stunning street outfit.

As to the cunning outfit below in the group, it tells at a glance that it has gone decidedly "football." It is Maureen O'Sullivan, of film prestige, who in flying colors is scoring her touchdowns in this hand-lace suede suit of devastating chic. Even the buttons are laced as is also the pigrain leather football hat. Her bag is of the same leather ingeniously shaped like a football. The suit's standup collar is news.

CREPE AND VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Velvet enters into every phase of the mode this season. The afternoon dress which combines velvet with wool or silk is a highlighted number on the present style program. In the model pictured the designer has introduced velvet very effectively. The flowers at the shoulder are also of velvet. A high military-type neckline accents the chic of this costume.

COLOR PERVADES WHOLE ENSEMBLE

Color is not content this season to be a splash or a dab—it pervades the entire ensemble from tip to toe and has finally invaded the field of woman's most conservative color accessory—silk stockings.

The traditional beige and gray tones have made way for red and green stockings. Wine red stockings are smart with all of the wine tones. Suede green silk stockings are worn with greens and browns, with green suede or antelope gloves, shoes, and bags to match. Very sheer, two and three thread hose, in green or red make their debut for dressier wear.

Navy blue hose are high style with a blue town suit collared with raspberry red velvet and worn with a matching hat. With a Veronese green dress accented in brown green silk stocks and brown shoes are news.

Some New Shades Added to Hosiery for Autumn Wear

Hosiery, this fall is here in a variety of new shades. In keeping with a growing feeling of luxury in the evening mode, smart complements will be provided for the gold, silver, and bronze slippers worn with gowns of Eastern influence. For daytime a series of browns will be best liked—golden brown, wine brown, brownish taupe with a rose cast, natural beige and coppery brown—to go with autumn colors.

Smoother Hair Styles

Smoother hair styles are being seen for early fall. Advance styles would indicate that the elaborate rows of curls, popular for many months, are to be laid aside—until we all change our minds again.

Handbag Made of Wood

A smart handbag is large and flat, designed to look like an enormous compact, and it is made of wood in a dark brown natural finish.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for November 10

EZEKIEL TEACHES PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezekiel 33:7-16.

GOLDEN TEXT—So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God.—Romans 14:12.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Prophet Encourages His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—A Watchman on Duty.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Does God Care What I Do?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Individuals Accountable to God.

Ezekiel prophesied in the land of the captivity. The purpose of his ministry was threefold: (1) To show the house of Israel that they were in captivity because of their sins (14:23). (2) To show that God is righteous in his visitation of judgment upon them (7:8, 9). (3) To sustain their faith by assuring them of their national restoration, the punishment of their enemies and their final exaltation among the nations when Messiah shall reign.

I. God's Sovereign Right to the Souls of Men (18:1-4).

Every man is personally responsible to God.

II. The Moral Obligation of Sons to Their Father (Ezek. 18:14-20).

While the law of heredity gives the child a sinful nature and when the child arrives at the age of moral responsibility it begins to sin, God holds such responsible for their deeds.

III. Ezekiel's Responsibility (Ezek. 33:1-9).

As a prophet of God certain responsibilities were imposed upon him. There is a sense in which every disciple of Christ is a witness for him and therefore is responsible for the giving of his testimony to sinners. His responsibility is set forth under the figure of a watchman. Two things were required of a watchman.

1. To hear the words of God's mouth (v. 7). The source of the message of every minister and Sunday School teacher is God's holy Word. Just as the prophet did not originate his message but received it of God's mouth, so it should be with every minister and Sunday School teacher.

2. To sound the warning (v. 7). After hearing God's message he was to speak it out and proclaim it to the people. A watchman today is both to hear and to speak. The people are to be warned of the impending danger. Failure to sound the alarm makes the watchman guilty of the blood of the sinner.

IV. God's Attitude Toward the Sinner (vv. 10, 11).

God has declared in his Word that unfaithfulness on the part of his people would cause them to "perish among the heathen," that they would "pine away in their iniquity" (Lev. 26:38, 39). In view of this pronouncement some are disposed to say that their case is hopeless. To meet this attitude of despair the prophet assured them that God had no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that his sincere desire was for the wicked to turn from their way and live. Regardless of what their past had been, they were given the assurance that the future was bright if they heeded God's command and plea. No one need to despair because of sin, for God's grace is greater than human sin.

V. The Sinner's Personal Responsibility (vv. 12-20).

God created the members of the race personal beings, giving them freedom of choice. They have moral discernment enabling them to distinguish between the right and the wrong. They choose, therefore, according to the quality of their being.

The following principles govern the sinner:

1. Past righteousness will not avail for present sins (v. 12). When a righteous man turns to iniquity, his past seeming righteousness will be of no avail.

2. Past sins do not make impossible present acceptance with God (vv. 12-15). By virtue of the operation of the law of habit, every sinful act makes it harder for the sinner to repent, but God's grace is such that if the sinner repents God will forgive and restore.

3. Restitution required (vv. 15, 16). The proof of penitence is that, so far as possible, the sinner makes amends for wrongs done.

4. God's ways are equal (vv. 17-20). God holds man responsible for his own deeds. The child is not condemned because of the deeds of his father, nor can it be said that the fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge. This does not do away with the law of heredity. Regardless of what one's past life has been, God's grace in Jesus Christ blots out his record and he stands accepted in the Beloved.

Friends

Friends are as companions of a journey, who ought to aid each other, as preservers on the road to a happier life.—Pythagoras.

A Mother's Love

If there be aught surpassing human deed or word or thought, it is a mother's love!—De Spradaro.

Force

The power that is supported by force alone will have cause often to tremble.—Kossuth.

21 Trillion Microbes to One Double Handful

Life teems in the soil with inconceivable numbers and activity. Dr. Charles Thom of the United States Department of Agriculture, in a recent talk to world soil scientists at Oxford, England, said counts of soil bacteria have shown as many as forty-six billions of active organisms in a gram of decomposing plant material. There are 28 grams in an ounce, 16 ounces in a pound. A gardener picks up a double handful of mellow compost and there may sift through his fingers, among other things, a living microscopic host represented by a figure that reaches halfway across the usual newspaper column—21,000,000,000,000.

AND AFTER THAT—

A man likes to make his breakfast on radishes, lettuce and gooseberries out of "his own garden" just once.

BROTHER'S KEEPER

Nearly every man wishes to be his brother's keeper when it comes to deciding how his brother shall vote.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

INTERESTING PERSONALITIES

By Mildred White Wallace

GEORGE RICHARDSON.

Several years ago, when we assumed the Assistant Editorial Department of The Shelby County Democrat with its various responsibilities, and Cullen Morgan, owner, sold his interest to us, we were introduced to George Richardson, whom we were told would be our fellow-worker, in charge of the mechanical and printing section of this busy work shop. We remember at this time, wondering how so youthful a product could be placed solely in charge of such a monumental undertaking—but after almost three years spent in daily association with Mr. Richardson, we are here to state that his YEARS and SIZE have absolutely nothing to do with his inexhaustible supply of BRAINS and ABILITY.

Many of you readers each week, see only the finished product known as The Shelby County Democrat, and we venture to say, rarely ever consider the many hours of hard work that lie behind each issue, so, at this time, I should like to claim the happy task of presenting to you GEORGE RICHARDSON, the "power behind the press", who has been largely responsible for the success and happiness we have shared in our voyage on a sea of "printer's ink" together.

George Richardson was born in Marion, Alabama, in 1911. He is about 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 130 pounds. He has a striking personality, an optimistic disposition, and happily combines an artistic temperament with a practical outlook on life. His "hobby" is MUSIC, and in our busy work shop, amid the clackety-clack-clack of linotype, job press and typewriters, the ever present RADIO plays an harmonious accompaniment, making the shop a happier place in which to meet the cares incident to a work-a-day world. George reluctantly talks about himself or, what we consider, his phenomenal possibilities in Newspaper-land. He admits that he has been vitally interested in the attractive field of journalism since he was 12 years of age, when, as Printer's Devil, he began his newspaper career with The Marion Times-Standard. His Mother tells me, he invested his first earned money, in a bicycle. She further states that this young fellow has been entirely self sustaining since he was 12 years old. George Richardson has an insatiable ambition. He is unafraid of hard work. The long, tedious hours of linotyping hold no discouraging note for him. After our few days work together, we realized that there was in store for George Richardson a brilliant future, and that he would be prepared to take advantage of it when the opportunity for advancement came.

Last week, he was summoned by Herr Bell's trick invention, to answer a call from The Tuscaloosa News. The ringing message spelled PROMOTION, and offered a reward for his faithful attention to each detail assigned him here. While we rejoiced with this little fellow-comrade, over his good fortune, congratulated him sincerely, and wished him all the success he so richly deserves, we felt a distinct tug at our heart strings, for there has developed, not only a high respect for his ability as a Printer and Mechanical wizard, but between us there has grown a very close bond of friendship, which we personally feel will never be broken, no matter how many miles lie between, nor how many promotions may come to crown the conscientious effort George Richardson gives to whatever task he is designated to complete.

Mr. Richardson, although only 24 years of age, has had experience with many newspapers in Alabama, namely: The Marion Times-Standard, Marion, Alabama; The Hale County News, Moundville, Alabama; The Foley Onlooker, Foley, Alabama; Weatherford Printing Company and The Tuscaloosa Warrior, Tuscaloosa, Alabama; and with The Shelby County Democrat in Columbiana. He holds an enviable record with all employers.

In closing this little pen point sketch, we personally extend congratulations to Bruce Shelton for his wisdom in giving George Richardson a broader field for development in his chosen avocation. We join the entire staff of Democrat officials in offering our best wishes for personal happiness in his new found employment. We also join the legion of friends George has made, since becoming a resident of Columbiana, in their sincere expressions of regret over his leaving us in search of "new worlds to conquer". It is a personal loss from which we shall not soon recover. However, even though our lives may not run in parallel channels again, we shall always be found on the "side lines", cheering this worthy young fellow on as he climbs high the ladder of success. We predict, not many years hence, he will be seated on the top rung of the stairway of achievement, with his hat cocked at a characteristic angle, and giving the world his usual merry "ha-ha", for GEORGE RICHARDSON——CAN, in common parlance, "TAKE IT".

OCTOBER.

Let not your heart be grieved
At summer's going,
For tarnished flower
Or russet vine and tree.

This is the month of gladness
For it is showing
April's promise
In reality.

Let not your heart be grieved
Though autumn stealing
Over the meadows
Bids the songbirds hush.

This is the month for thanks
At love's revealing
Of gathered harvest
And the burning bush.

TO YOUR boy belongs the future . . . the thrill of accomplishment . . . new worlds to conquer. You want to do all you can to help him succeed. Much of his ability depends on eyesight. Quick perception as he studies—accurate vision in sports and games. ¶What about the lighting conditions in which he reads or studies? Improper lighting causes eyestrain, nervousness, headaches. Why not check the lighting in YOUR HOME for his sake? At your request a lighting expert will survey your home and tell you just how much light you should have. Sometimes a bulb of higher wattage is needed; in other cases a new type of lamp will give better light. There is no charge whatever for this service!

R. C. CAMPAIGNS TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Program Inaugurated in Local Chapters to Cut Down Farm and Home Accidents

The American Red Cross has launched a nation-wide campaign to eliminate hazards in the home and on the farm that now take an annual toll of nearly 35,000 lives, according to a recent statement by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations.

"Every Red Cross chapter is being asked to play a part in this campaign," Mr. Fieser said. "Hazards in the various communities will be pointed out. The children in our schools throughout the country will be given a list of the home hazards and asked to enroll parents or relatives in the fight against them."

Nearly five million men, women, and children were temporarily disabled in the homes of America last year by accidents, officials of the National Safety Council have revealed. Most of the accidents in which persons were killed and injured could have been prevented, according to this safety agency, this fact alone largely motivating the Red Cross drive for accident elimination.

ALGENE (Al) KEY

"Did you ever see a dream come a walking?—You did?—Well, did you ever see a KEY come a talking? No?—Well, I did! And it all came about like this. The date?—November 7! The time?—Noon! The place — Curlee Cafe! Mayor Harry Gordon makes rather a dramatic entrance, and with him is prominent looking guest. He promptly brings him to our table and presents, "Mr. Key of Mississippi." The name rang clearly familiar. We associated those three little letters, K-E-Y with many anxious hours we had spent, during the past summer, listening to latest news flashes from the Flying Key Brothers in "Ole Miss." You will recall, they held universal attention for 27 and one-half days, while they shattered the world's flying endurance record, chalking up exactly 653 hours and 34 minutes in the air.

We did not for one minute dream we were really chatting with one of THE Key celebrities, but we remarked upon the "same name" its fame in aeronautical circles, etc., and of course, we supposed he KNEW the KEY BROTHERS of World Endurance Flying Fame—Imagine our surprise when this tall, blue-eyed, typical American young fellow replied rather modestly—"I am AL!"

Now, is THIS news, or is this NEWS? AL KEY IN COLUMBIANA, ALABAMA. My friends, it is now my happy privilege to present to you the KEY to the situation—Algene Key—better known as "AL."

Al Key was born in Meridian, Miss., in 1905. He has always been interested in flying. He began his actual experience in the fascinating art of traversing the air waves in 1924. His practical flying experience was received under Clark Sterling of Missouri. He and his brother, Fred Key, made several former attempts to break the World's Endurance flight record, but financial troubles and lack of adequate equipment prevented the completion of this joint ambition, until June-July, 1935, when sponsored by the Meridian Junior Chamber of Commerce, their spectacular flight, breaking the world's record for endurance flying was successfully accomplished.

The last flight into the ether was undertaken purely from a Civic standpoint. There was no financial reward offered for its accomplishment. However, after its successful termination, the Key Brothers won both fame and fortune. Many offers for personal appearances came from theatrical magnates and Cinema Directors. Over 10,000 personal letters were written by the Key Brothers to radio fans and friends—but the Flying Keys preferred the simple life, home, family and the personal supervision of their Flying School, to the spotlight of public approval in other professions. Colorful careers were cast aside in an effort to promote FLYING, and in the further pursuit of their ambitious undertaking to teach and stimulate confidence in a sometimes skeptical people, with the hope of fostering universal interest in the Airways — which Mr. Key states—they deserve.

"Mr. Key, we realize you had many thrills while sailing on the 'Milky Way,' trailing around in Stardust, and winking and blinking at Moons other than ours, but what was the greatest joy you experienced during your 27 and one-half days piloting Ole Miss into the Harbor of Dreams Come True?"

"Do you want the TRUTH, or something for this newspaper," he asked.

"TRUTH," we answered, "NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH!"

A tender, reminiscent smile played over the handsome features of Al Key as he told us the following little human heart story.

"The greatest happiness I derived from the relization that our flight had been a successful one?—Well, you see, it is like this.

"I have a little girl at home who thinks her Daddy is the greatest man on earth. She is six years old and all her life she had wanted a Shetland pony. I could never grant this wish—(Financial handicaps again)—One night while flying through the clouds, high winds and stormy weather, I casually mentioned over our microphone, this little family incident, which lay very close to my heart. A kind radio fan heard the message and presto, the pony was delivered to my baby girl. When the reception of this gift was relayed to me, and I realized by this flight, I had been able to make possible the gratification of this wish which brought her the happiness I knew she was experiencing, well, I believe this was the happiest thrill I derived from the achievement of 27 and one-half days in the air."

"Were you ever frightened, or did you ever think of coming down, giving up—" we asked.

An emphatic "NO-MAM." was the answer. "All of that is settled before you leave the ground. A firm DETERMINATION to 'stick' must be ingrained before the 'take-off'."

By constantly asking questions, we managed to get this modest unassuming, world famous celebrity to give us the following interesting facts regarding the historical flight.

The official record for endurance flying was accomplished by the Key Brothers after 438 contacts were made by James Keaton and Bill Ward. By the way, these two boys were pupils of the Flying Keys. There were consumed 6,000 gallons of gas and 300 gallons of oil. The radio installed in Ole Miss was designed and constructed especially for this flight by a local Radio Engineer by the name of Woodruff. Instruments and all equipment worked perfectly, and direct contact service never failed.

Mr. Key stated if he and his brother had, by completing this flight, proven the reliability of airplanes, they would consider the trip entirely worthwhile. Mr. Key further stated that FEAR of airplanes should be entirely eliminated, as far as safe transportation is concerned. There is no justifiable reason for it, provided the SHIP is kept in perfect condition. People should no longer regard this mode of travel as dangerous. He expressed a desire to be able to inspire a confidence in this method of traveling. The height of his ambition is to design and build airplanes, and to make another world non-stop flight.

"Where," we asked.

"Anywhere" he answered, just so we keep flying.

"What of the ship, Ole Miss? And your brother, Fred?"

"Ole Miss is still flying," said the intrepid airman, "and Fred is instructor in our flying school in Jackson, Miss."

"What about our own airport? We hear you are the district Supervisor of Airports for Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi?"

Mr. Key replied, "Columbiana has one of the best in the state. I shall recommend its completion as soon as I reach Montgomery" Right here he stopped, and signalled to a distinguished gentleman, who was entering the door of this little print shop, and with a genial smile said, "Lady, my achievements and meager success in the air reads like Ned in the First Reader, compared to the record of the gentleman whom I should like to present to you — Major Edward Haight, of Washington, D. C., World War Ace!"

Well, ladies and gentlemen, things were picking up in this little journalistic retreat. History was being written on this Red Letter Day for "yours truly." Monotonous routine was forgotten and an army salute to the Major was in order! We now recall the merry twinkle in his piercing blue eyes as he acknowledged the "salute," extended a cordial greeting and graciously consented to tell us something of his colorful life. He spoke with the friendliness and understanding which always marks those who have "reached the top."

We feel it a distinct honor to present to you Major Edward Haight, formerly of the Reserve Air Corps of the United States Army, and at present Regional Supervisor, Reg. 3, Airport Marking and Mapping, from the Airways Extension Department of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

"Dame Fortune" had truly smiled on Personal Mention today, but we realized we would have to do a quick mental turnover. These were prominent people, on a "flying trip," and "in a hurry," and we knew it! However, there is always time for a cherry "hello," even from "Ships that pass in the night"—so here we go with a few facts we gleaned from the suave, sophisticated, world-traveled Major with the magnetic personality and the Chesterfieldian manner.

Major Haight learned to fly in France and served the United States during the entire period of the World War. He spent five months on the front in the 2nd Pursuit Group of the United States Army, and successfully brought down five two-seater German planes. In 1920 Major Haight joined the Postal Department of Air Mail and flew the mail on the first Air Route established in the United States, Cleveland to Chicago. By reappointment he returned to the regular Army in 1920 and remained until November, 1923, when he resigned from regular service. In 1926 the Major was made Chief Pilot and Maintenance Manager of the Central American Air Lines and was stationed in South America. Since this time he has been connected with the Department of Commerce. Durng the past July Major Haight completed the aerial mapping of over one-half the United States. This involved flying precise parallel courses in connection with making the new Department of Commerce Sectional Air Maps.

We asked the irrepressible and inveterate flyer to which department of Uncle Sam's emporium we owed a vote of thanks for his visit to Columbiana. He stated:

"We are in Columbiana as employees of the Air Commerce Department in connection with the approvel of the Airport projects under the supervision of W. P. A., with a view of assuring their logical development from an aeronautical standpoint. The co-ordination of the eight Southeastern States is my Job. We flew to Alabama from Atlanta, and now here we are in your charming little town."

Major Haight paid a glowing tribute to Mayor Gordon and his civic improvements. He was also delighted over the cordial reception he had enjoyed while visiting "Your Little Main Street and Mine". We were, all this time, secretly envying the Major his colorful and eventful life. Just think of visiting all the enchanting lands you have dreamed about! Flying over snow-capped mountains, exploring alien countries in this fascinating world. Seeing and enjoying the thrill of travel! We casually mentioned this, and here is the Major's reply:

"Little lady, after barging around this old world as long as I have, seeing it from all angles, I know of nothing that I should like better than coming to Columbiana, and living quietly, forever, just "watching the world go by."

"Did we extend a hearty welcome and O.K. this project?"

ASK THE MAJOR!

A YOUNG PIONEER

When several hundred families were sent to Alaska from the Middle West to settle the Matanuska Valley, the Red Cross sent a nurse, Madeleine de Foras, to remain with them for a year to help protect their health. Among the first friends she made were the little pioneer, Arthur Hack, 4 years old, and "Prince," the pup who went with his young master to Alaska.

Heart Drifts

YOU WILL FORGET

You will forget Samoa's skies of blue,
You will forget the prayer I made for you;
In other lands, Belov'd, look back awhile,
Let me remember—let me see you smile.

You will forget this kiss that holds us fast,
You will forget this hour that cannot last,
In other arms than mine, Belov'd, and yet
I will remember—you will forget.

(Gordon Johnstone)

TENDERNESS

Under the lonely moon
I lie awake and dream;
And you come there, the moonlight on your hair,
Your lovely eyes agleam;
And round you soft the silver shadows creep,
Kissing your mouth where all my kisses sleep.
After the night has waned
And death to me shall nod,
I will kneel there clad in a garment of prayer
At the white throne of God;
Holding aloft your heart for HIM to bless,
Your heart that loved me with such tenderness.

LOST

Where is the little girl who played with a fairy,
Who saw bright wings upon the sunlit airy
Paths of the forest? Who saw goblins clearly,
And loved her "china" children proudly, dearly;
Wakeful in the twilight, her wide eyes greeted
The young Lord Jesus by her bedside seated.
Trusting in a Santa Claus, credulous believing,
Life was a spangled gift for her receiving.
She has gone a long way, eagerly, gladly;
She has learned to look at things too well, too sadly.
Hands behind her stiffened back, clinched and wary—
Where is the little girl who played with a fairy?

(Elspeth)

TAKING WAYS

When he took her arm
She smiled at him,
When he took her lips
Her eyes grew dim;
When he took his leave
She gave a start
When she found out that
He took her heart.

ANIMAL SHOW TO VISIT COLUMBIANA

On Tuesday November 26, just about the time most of the people of Columbiana are thinking of getting up, the long line of trucks of the Mighty Haag Shows will begin arriving here, and start work pitching their vast city of tents on Cox's Pasture where they will give two complete performances.

The Haag Show this year will bring to Columbiana more wild animals, horses, pones and trained dogs than ever before exhibited. This year the Haag Shows are featuring such well known acts as the Tan Araki Japanese Troupe in a new act. Johnson Duo of Wire Walkers, Zeldo Troupe of head balancers, Fisher Family of Acrobats and Haag's Herd of Performing Elephnts, largest and best trained in the country, presented by Miss Ruby Risher, who takes her life in her own hands twice daily when she places her head in the mouth of one of the elephants.

There will be a street parade at 1:00 P. M. followed by a number of free exhibitions on the show grounds. Performances start at 2:00 P. M., and 8:00 P. M., but doors willl open one hour earlier so as to give everyone ample time to visit Hagg's big new zoo and be entertaned by Hagg's Gold Concert Band.

Admission will be at popular prices, and the public is assured of a whole evening of splended entertainment.

NOTICE!

Due to mechanical trouble this week, the Democrat is issued one day late. The delay was unavoidable. We appreciate your indulgance and proffer thanks to our fellow travellers along the journalistic route—W. M. Wyatt—of Montevallo Times—and to Luther McGiboney of the Reporter — for whose valuable assistance we are deeply grateful. The broken machinery is all O. K. now, and we shall greet you "on the dotted line" next Thursday.

Various State and City Elections Give Cheer to Both Parties—Greece Votes for Restoration of King George II.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

REPUBLICANS shouted loudly that the victory of their party in the New York state election was a terrific blow to the New Deal and a repudiation of President Roosevelt. The Democrats declared it was no such thing. James A. Farley, who is both national and state chairman of the Democrats, gave them their cue when he declared recapture of control of the legislature by the G. O. P. was "normal" and that the Democratic vote for assembly candidates taken as a whole exceeded the Republican vote by more than half a million, which was something of an exaggeration.

J. A. Farley

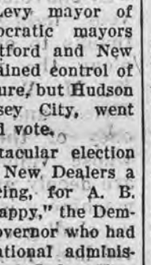
The Republicans gained nine additional seats in the assembly, giving them 82 to 68 held by the Democrats. Only two senate seats were involved in the contest, both to fill vacancies. One of them went to a Republican and the other to a Democrat, leaving the setup of the upper legislature body unchanged.

In 45 cities of the state, the Republicans elected 33 mayors, including Roland B. Marvin of Syracuse, possible nominee for governor next year. The President saw Hyde Park go Republican and Farley failed to hold his own district in Rockland county.

The Democratic organization in New York came through strongly and menaces the prospect of a re-election for Mayor LaGuardia, observers hold. The Fusion forces, which turned Tammany out two years ago, crumbled.

In Philadelphia S. Davis Wilson, Republican, was elected mayor but the vote was close enough for the Democrats to call it a virtual victory for the New Deal. Cleveland, Columbus and 23 out of 42 other cities and towns in Ohio chose Republican mayors, and so did a number of municipalities in Massachusetts. Connecticut Socialists re-elected Jasper McLevy mayor of Bridgeport and Democratic mayors were returned in Hartford and New Haven. Republicans gained control of the New Jersey legislature, but Hudson county, including Jersey City, went Democratic by a record vote.

Results in the spectacular election in Kentucky gave the New Dealers a real reason for rejoicing, for A. B. Chandler, known as "Happy," the Democratic candidate for governor who had the support of the national administration, handily defeated Judge King Swope, the Republican nominee. This despite the fact that Democratic Governor Lafoon had declared himself against Chandler and threw his support to Swope. The referendum on repeal of the state prohibition amendment gave the repealists a good majority.



In Virginia and Mississippi all the Democratic nominees were elected, which was to be expected.

"GROSSLY arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious," was the way Federal Judge William C. Coleman of Baltimore described the public utility holding act, and he held the law unconstitutional in its entirety. In a long decision, the judge declared that the act's "invalid provisions" were "so multifarious and so intimately and repeatedly interwoven throughout the act as to render them incapable of separation from such parts of the act, if any, as otherwise might be valid."

Judge Coleman instructed trustees for the American States Public Service company, plaintiffs in the litigation on the act, to treat the law as "invalid and of no effect."

The Securities and Exchange commission announced in Washington, however, that enforcement of the act will continue, despite the ruling.

GEORGE of Greece is once more king. The plebiscite resulted in his recall by a huge majority, and before long the monarch will be back on the throne he abdicated 12 years ago. The vote in favor of the restoration was almost unanimous, even in Crete, the birthplace of the republican leader Venizelos who is now in exile and under sentence of death.

King George II

As the results of the balloting came in, Premier George Kondylis appeared on a balcony of a government building and announced: "As of tomorrow, King George II will be king of the Hellenes. There will be no political parties. They have been broken up by the people themselves and a new epoch of reconstruction will start."

MACKENZIE KING, the new prime minister of Canada, was in Washington negotiating with President Roosevelt a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and the Dominion. Completion of such a treaty was one of the planks of King's recent election platform.

Canada buys more from the United States than any other country, and America, in turn, is Canada's best customer. Last year America exported goods worth $302,000,000 to Canada and imported goods worth $231,000,000. These totals compare with 1929 totals of $948,000,000 and $503,000,000 respectively.

CHINA has suddenly abandoned the metallic silver currency standard, adopted a managed paper currency and otherwise reformed its monetary system. The four-point program was announced in Shanghai by Finance Minister H. H. Kung just after Vice President Garner and his party of congressmen had left the city for Manila.

The American party was entertained by high Chinese officials, including Kung. But, despite much oratory of the hands across the sea character, no hint was given of China's contemplated action. However, all English language newspapers in Shanghai carried long interviews with Senator William H. King of Utah and Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, both of whom practically told China that it "was not any of her business what America did about silver," and predicted the continuance of United States purchases until the price of silver has reached $1.29 an ounce.

WHILE the invading Italians were pushing further and further into his realm, Emperor Haile Selassie I of Ethiopia celebrated the fifth anniversary of his coronation, and he did it in fine style, too. Escorted by a throng of feudal chiefs in barbaric attire, the king of kings and his queen passed through the streets of Addis Ababa amid wildly cheering thousands, and gave thanks to God in St. George's cathedral. Afterward, seated on his ivory and teakwood throne in the palace, he received the felicitations of the chieftains and the diplomatic corps. In the afternoon Haile gave the soldiers a great feast of raw meat, and in the evening he entertained the diplomats and nobles at a state banquet with golden service and rare wines.

Emperor Haile Selassie

The emperor holds that the big oil concession negotiated for American interests by F. M. Rickett, the English promoter, still holds good although the Americans relinquished it at the suggestion of Secretary Hull. "This concession," said Haile, "is an integral part of our national economic program. We purposely granted it to a neutral country like the United States in order to avoid political complications and international jealousies. It is unfortunate that war must delay its fulfillment. Through the benefits accruing to this concession we hope to raise the social level of people and provide them with honorable remunerative employment."

THE League of Nations set November 18 as the day on which the economic sanctions against Italy should be put into effect, and later decided that coal, iron and oil should be included in the embargo. The league appointed Premier Laval of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, to carry on peace negotiations with Italy. Sir Samuel still insisted any peace must be within the framework of the League.

The Italian armies on the northern front pushed further into Ethiopia, following the tanks and with bombing planes active overhead, and one column entered the city of Hauzien on the way to Makale. The invaders met with no resistance of consequence. The government at Addis Ababa announced that Italian planes had killed 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows with bombs and machine gun fire at Gorahei.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has accepted an invitation from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, to appear before that organization in Chicago on December 9 and deliver an address. Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Chicago at nine o'clock that morning, make his speech, and start back to Washington three hours later.

The President's promised trip to Indiana to take part in the dedication of a memorial to George Rogers Clark at Vincennes has been postponed until June of next year, when he will also visit the Texas centennial exposition in Dallas.

ADMINISTRATOR HARRY L. HOPKINS issued an order barring from work relief jobs all persons not on the dole as of November 1. He said, however, that despite this order 10 per cent non-relief labor could be employed on any project, and more in specific cases. The $330,000,000 public works non-federal program and the $100,000,000 low cost housing program have been exempted entirely from the relief labor requirement because of a shortage of skilled construction workmen on relief.

BILLY SUNDAY, the spectacular evangelist whose fiery eloquence led many thousands to "hit the sawdust trail" to the altar and seek salvation, died of heart disease at the home of his brother-in-law in Chicago. His wife, known all over the land as "Ma," was with him at the end and said Billy died as he had always wished, suddenly. Mr. Sunday, who was almost seventy-three years of age, was a professional ball player in his youth. He was converted in 1886 and in 1903 was ordained a Presbyterian minister.

One of America's leading scientists, Henry Fairfield Osborn, died in New York at the age of seventy-three years. He was eminent in many branches of science and was sometimes called "the successor to Darwin and Huxley." For years he was the president of the American Museum of Natural History.

SOVIET Russia celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with a tremendous display of its armed strength in Moscow. Infantry, cavalry, tanks and all the other army services marched for hours past the tomb of Lenin, where stood Joseph H. Stalin and other leaders to review the long parade.

Voroshiloff, commissar for war and navy, declared in the order of the day that the Soviet army was ready to protect the frontiers of "our sacred land" at any moment. He warned the world that danger of a new general war hung over mankind.

The executive committee of the Communist Internationale published an appeal to workers of all countries to join hands to force an end to Italy's war in Ethiopia, protect the Chinese people from invasion, ward off danger of war in Europe and bring about a downfall of Fascism.

WHEN the nations get together in London in December for the next naval conference it is not likely they will be able to agree on much in the way of limitation of naval armament. But there is a good prospect that Italy will there demand the neutralization of the straits of Gibraltar, which would be extremely distasteful and perhaps embarrassing to Great Britain. Diplomats are certain the British would refuse to make the concession.

It was reported in Paris that the Duce would ask that the straits be put in the same status as the Suez canal, and would offer to scrap two 35,000 ton battleships now under construction as an evidence of his good faith. Britain hopes France will support her attitude concerning this demand and in return may agree to take a larger percentage of exports from French Morocco to strengthen France's position in that colony. French naval experts said that, while neutralization of the straits would guarantee free passage for France for all time, yet "it would be better to have a strong British hold on Gibraltar" in case France got in a war with Germany and was faced with the prospect of German submarines entering the Mediterrannean to ravage her commerce and stop transport of troops from north African possessions.

AFTER a conference with agricultural specialists and representatives of farmers, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced that a two year program for corn and hog producers had been determined upon, the main features of which are:

1. Prevention of an excessive production of corn in 1936 and 1937.

2. Allowance of an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as it is estimated would take place were no adjustment program in effect.

3. Prevention of an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

The new contract will require that an area at least equal to the number of acres withdrawn from production of corn be added to the usual area of the farm devoted to soil-improving and erosion-preventing uses. This requirement was a part of the 1934 corn-hog contract but was relaxed when the drouth come.

MEDALS were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission to 47 men and children of the United States and Canada, or to their relatives in 11 cases. Most of the awards are for rescues of persons from drowning.

Two silver medals were awarded and 45 bronze. The silver ones went to James C. Martin, fifty-one-year-old Joplin (Mo.) laborer and Christine Stewart, thirty-five, of Brookline, Mass. Martin went into a sewage pit trying to save a fellow worker. Both drowned. Miss Stewart leaped into the sea near Bar Harbor, Me., in an attempt to save Emily McDougall, thirty-one. Rescuers pulled them out 40 minutes later. Miss McDougall died. Cash awards totaling $7,000 for educational purposes accompanied the medals in 14 cases, the commission announced. In 22 other cases, a total of $17,250 was granted for purchase of homes or "other worthy purposes."

GERMANY has no designs on western Europe, but she does intend to promote her expansion in the Baltic states, and hopes later to divide the Ukraine with Poland. That is the substance of assertions made by Pertinax and Genevieve Tabouis, two of the leading political writers of the Paris press. They say Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of finance, revealed these plans to Jean Tannery, president of the Bank of France, and Montagu Norman, president of the Bank of England.

Schacht, the writers say, exhorted the two financiers to act with Germany "in the financial field" to end the Italo-Ethiopian conflict as soon as possible.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Evidence increases that there will be a real drive for the 30-hour week when congress reconvenes. In fact, despite the bitter opposition of many business men, particularly large employers whose plants require continuous operation to obtain maximum efficiency and economy, the probability is that congress would pass the 30-hours week bill at this session if the union labor leaders were sincerely for it.

Nearly every development is grist to the mill of the measure's advocates. For example, the latest government figures show that wage payments—a rough way of stating employment—have advanced to within 71 per cent of normal. But production as a result of that employment and these wages has reached 91 per cent of normal.

It's technocracy all over again—the constantly recurring problem of how to pass the work around—how to keep enough consumers in funds to purchase the products of the decreasing number of workers.

Many experts still think that this cycle, far more than the loss of cash by the purchase of foreign bonds that later defaulted, and infinitely more than the stock market crash, was responsible for the economic troubles which began in this country in 1929.

No better illustration of this theory has ever been advanced to this writer than what he discovered in Birmingham, in August, 1929. Just a year before, the steel mills of that district had employed 42,000 men. In August, 1929, they were employing only 24,000 men. But they were turning out more steel!

Down the Line

In short, 18,000 well paid men had lost their jobs, had stopped buying at the local department store and other stores, were wearing old clothes and squeezing their pennies. Newspapers were forced to cut expenses because the stores had been forced to cut their advertising. And so it went all the way down the line—more than two months before the stock market crash. And the same thing was happening in Pittsburgh, Gary, Youngstown, Chicago and Bethlehem. The same sort of thing, to a greater or lesser extent, was happening in every other industry, which meant that the buying power of the country was being dried up.

But virtually nobody realized it!

In the last session of congress so much sentiment developed for the 30-hour bill that, in the early stages, leader after leader told a group of editors inquiring into the general legislative situation that they expected some modification of the 30-hour measure, if not that itself, to pass. It did not pass because union labor leaders traded it for the Wagner labor relations bill. They far preferred that.

There are two major objections to the 30-hour proposal, one by the big employers, and the other by some of the very people who believe that the type of thing illustrated by the Birmingham steel mills not only caused the depression, but has held back the return of prosperity.

The objection of the employers is that it will disrupt their organizations. Thirty hours a week is only five six-hour days. Such a limitation on work hours does not fit in readily with shifts. And of course there is always the objection to a blanket raise in wages, boosting production costs. This last phase is especially true now because business generally is concerned over the resentment of housewives in particular and buyers in general over advancing prices. Also because they know that security bill taxes for old age pensions, unemployment insurance, etc., are shortly going to advance production costs further.

The objection by the theorists is that any such move is just a temporary palliative. Further advances in labor saving machinery—additional shortcuts will come. They fear the 30-hour measure might prove a veritable straitjacket.

Stock Rise Too Fast

The stock market has been rising too rapidly to suit the administration. Information to this effect comes from the same sources that enabled the writer to make this same statement in June, 1933, when it may be remembered, the administration literally smacked the market down and took considerable pleasure in the process.

The administration does not want any such crash at the moment. In fact, all it wants is a small decline, and it does not want that until after January 1.

The significance of this is that it knows many business executives plan their budgets around the end of December and at that time lay out their plans for expenditures and expansions during the year. For this process the administration wants the business leaders of the country to have all the encouragement possible. Hence it will make no move to interfere with the boom so evident in the market until after January 1.

Of course the administration even then does not want anything approaching a confidence-destroying debacle. It would merely like to see a decline set in which would carry security prices, stocks in particular, down to a level from which a slow, creeping progress could be made next summer and fall.

Politics is behind all this. The New Dealers fear if the present boom continues, well through the winter, there is likely to be the normal setback in the summer and fall. The effect of this on the country would be precisely opposite to that desired.

The most encouraging sort of stock market movement to the country, the New Dealers figure, is the creeping advance. It indicates improving business prospects, not speculation. But it cannot occur, very well, after a big bull movement, especially if stock prices have been pushed up during that bull movement far beyond any sane ratio to earnings and dividends.

There's the Rub

Now that is where the rub comes in. For despite all this talk about "breathing spell" and reassuring business, every one close to the administration knows that there are going to be more taxes—after election—and that these taxes, assuming the New Deal is continued by the voters next November, will fall on business. Especially big business.

Although this is absolutely clear to anyone, no matter how remote from touch with the White House, who carefully studies the President's official utterances (he pointed out in the "breathing spell" statement that no more taxes should be imposed on the little fellow, already burdened by processing taxes, etc.), it has not been generally appreciated.

But by next summer, the New Dealers figure, the gentry who buy and sell securities in large quantities, and therefore come pretty close to controlling prices, will realize it. Hence they will be inclined to liquidate their stock holdings, if stock prices at the time happen to be high.

It is well known that stock prices are controlled by what the buyers and sellers regard as future prospects, rather than past performance. Hence the conviction that the corporations must shoulder a much greater load of tax burdens will not be helpful to better dividend prospects.

Hangs on Farm Plank

The most significant point about the recent poll taken by the American Press association, which shows a considerable fading of the Roosevelt popularity, is the clear demonstration, by putting certain unstat[illegible] points together, that the agricultural plank of Roosevelt's opponent may decide whether the New Deal is to have four more years, or is to die on March 4, 1937.

Most important in the poll is not the fact that the Northeast has turned against President Roosevelt. This has been known for some time—been generally accepted since the Rhode Island by-election. Nor is the fact that New York state is included. The big point is that the poll shows sentiment against the President, apparently strong enough on the returns so far in and as of today, to indicate the President might lose the electoral votes in Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota and South Dakota. Also Wisconsin.

To appreciate the significance of this, a resort to electoral votes is necessary. In these dispatches some months back it was pointed out that Roosevelt could lose every state north of the Mason and Dixon line, and the Ohio river, and east of the Mississippi, except Wisconsin, and also lose California, Kansas and Delaware, and still have 269 electoral votes, or three more than enough.

In short, he could lose all New England, New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Kansas and California, and still win.

At the time this table was presented by the writer largely to show the tremendous importance of New York, and hence the possibility that Tammany Hall could re-elect Roosevelt by straining every nerve to get out the vote, or defeat him by mere apathy. This was on the theory that upstate New York would probably be about the same in sentiment as its neighboring states in New England.

Loses New York

This emphasis on New York is abundantly justified by the recent poll, which indicates New York is against the President. Also two of the trans-Mississippi states included in the anti list in these dispatches—California and Kansas.

So that the important new point is really involved in the additional Middle Western states—Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and South Dakota. Wisconsin may be left to one side. No political observer believes that Wisconsin will buck over the traces if the La Follette organization sets out to deliver it to Roosevelt. Further, no one has much doubt at the moment that the La Follettes will do just that. If there should be any slip-up there, and there should be no material change otherwise in the lineup, it will be just too bad for Roosevelt. It would make the New Deal battle line so long and vulnerable that breaks would be sure to occur somewhere.

But these farm states in question, from Nebraska up to Minnesota, may be depended upon to go as the intelligent self-interest of their farm population determines.

MOVIES IN DARK AFRICA

The movies have penetrated far into the heart of West Africa, the natives having a passion for films of super-fervid melodrama, wild west exploits, murder, pillage and arson. Attempts have been made to infuse an element of moral uplift into their intellectual bill of fare and their conception of white humanity, but these efforts have met with a marked lack of appreciation.

Ship Ice to Iceland

Carrying coals to Newcastle has often been cited as the most uneconomic of all practices. But carrying ice to Iceland was, until recently, regarded as even more foolish. However, last summer was abnormally hot in Iceland, and the excessive heat melted all the glaciers and icebergs which usually supply Reykjavik, the leading seaport, with its quota of ice. For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, Iceland actually suffered because of a shortage of ice.—Taylor-Tycos, Rochester.

The Lucky Lawrences

—25—

"There's one thing I can't do it without!" Dick admitted, folding the telegram to put it back into his breast pocket.

"Money?" Sam asked.

"Nope." Dick looked at Gail, and all the others laughed. "I won't do it without my wife," he said simply.

"But gosh!" This was Sam again. "You'd have to be married right off!"

Dick said nothing. He looked at Gail.

"Gail could be married tomorrow, and get out like a fire horse!" Lily said, and they all laughed.

It was exciting. Things were happening fast and furiously to the Lucky Lawrences at last. Miss Ariel's secret wedding had had all the town buzzing. Now Miss Abigail's plans had the right of way, and the little town was stirred with a deeper emotion!

"To—for the land's sake! To where?"

"To London, Mrs. Pine. For two years."

"For the land's sake! Well, don't forget your friends in Clippersville, Gail."

"As if I could!"

"Next Thursday! Next Thursday? For heaven's sake! Why the rush?"

"Dick—Mr. Stebbins—has to sail for London on the fifteenth. And we have ten days or two weeks in New York."

"Well, you certainly have taken folks' breath away!"

"Not any more than mine, I assure you, Mrs. Brush."

"You'll be back in Clippersville some day."

"Oh, indeed I hope so!"

"When d'you leave the lib'ary, Gail?"

"Tomorrow night."

"Well, I declare it won't seem like the same place without you!"

They were all so kind. Old associates in tears, old friends carrying armfuls of brightly polished huckleberry and pungent chrysanthemums to the Lawrence house. Presents, presents, presents—every one in town had to have a finger in Gail's new equipment.

In Muller's she looked at the incredibly smart ensemble: the tan silk blouse, the tobacco-brown coat with a great white fur collar.

"The tag seems to be gone, Mr. Muller. Not that I think it's—just my price."

"It is thirty dollars," said old Muller steadfastly. The saleswoman almost cried out. Even unsophisticated Gail looked bewildered.

"Thirty dollars!"

"Thirty."

She tried it on that night for the family, pulled down the rich little tobacco-brown hat over her eyes.

"You're stunning!" said Lily and Ariel.

"Gee, you're cute!" Sam and Phil said.

Dick said nothing.

The days were full of delights; in the long evenings she and Dick sat by the fire and planned.

"What keeps us in New York for ten days, Dick?"

"Oh, I have to see Mr. Leavitt, and we have to get you a winter coat—or maybe we could get that in London."

"All I know is," Gail said, "that when you say 'a London coat,' you say something."

"But you'd need it on the steamer, you see."

"Dick, I assure you in all seriousness that I can't believe my ears!"

"It's going," he said slowly, with a rich content in his voice, "to be fun!"

"Imagine our paying for things in shillings and pence, Dick!"

It was an inexhaustibly diverting thought. Once she said wistfully, "Would any of Dickens' London be left, Dick, do you suppose? I mean all around Lincoln's Inn, where Traddles had all the girls, and down 'round the docks and bridges where Lizzie Hexam and her father rowed, and in the law courts where Snagsby bolted his bread and butter?"

He laughed at her tenderly.

"My darling, I don't know Dickens as you do!"

"I should love to see the old Marshalsea," she mused, "and Arthur Clenham's house, and the gate where they found Lady Dedlock!"

Old Miss Roundtree, born in London, came especially to warn her. The Hyde Park neighborhood was the nice neighborhood, my dear. There were very nice flats in all those streets; the Stebbinses couldn't do better, unless they meant to go as far out as St. John's Wood. But they must keep away from the Pimlico district. These things were important at 'ome.

Mrs. Wibser, Lily's extraordinary mother, also had advice to impart.

"You might easily take it for seasickness, d'ye see? But there'll be a good doctor on board, and you look him up the first thing. He'll tell ye the difference. Not that there's anything to be afraid of, but it's as well to take care of yourself, from the beginning."

"I'm not one bit worried about that. What does worry me is that I might be the sort that never—"

"Well, you're not!" said the oracle firmly. "You're one that'll have to look out now, not to get all run down!"

"Honestly, Ma," Lily said, "your idea of conversation with a girl who's going to be married in two days simply gets me!"

Mrs. Wibser was undaunted. She instantly recalled the case of a girl who had mistaken a discomfort far more significant for sea-sickness, and who had died and been buried at sea. Lily and Gail laughed the tears into their eyes, the older woman could not see why.

"Havin' children's as natural as breathin'," she said indignantly "They say the Indian women simply drop out on the march . . ."

"Do you know whom I'm going to miss like everything, Lil?" Gail asked in an undertone, after awhile.

"Phil?" suggested Phil's wife.

"Phil, too, and of course the baby. But I meant Wiff-waff," said Gail. "He and I understand each other; I never dreamed that I could love a little boy as much as that!"

"He'll miss you, too," Lily said, tears in her bright sharp eyes. "But won't we all!" she added simply.

It was only Ariel, of them all, of all Clippersville, who could not share the excitement and pleasure of Gail Lawrence's marriage. Ariel had somehow lost her birthright of little sister-ship; there had been no happy flurry of flowers, gifts, wedding frocks, and wedding plans for her; and she looked on at Gail's excitement and emotion with disillusioned, hard young eyes and a faint curl of the lip.

Sometimes Gail dragged herself from her own roseate absorption to try—as all her world had always tried—to cheer Ariel.

"Do you know anything about Manchester?"

"Manchester?"

"The New Jersey town where Van is, where you'll live?"

"Not much." Ariel's tone would be utterly dreary. "Van says there's a country club."

"That might be fun!"

"I don't imagine anything in New Jersey is fun. It sounds to me like a horribly jay place!"

"Maybe you'll have a baby, Ariel. That will keep you busy!"

"Maybe I won't," Ariel answered, setting her jaw firmly.

"Oh, darling—you love children."

"I know," Ariel conceded grudgingly, and was silent. "Men always get the best of everything!" she added resentfully.

"Well, as far as I can see," Gail said healthily, "Van is working hard on a rather dull job, and seems to be an immensely improved—" she altered the word—"developed young man!" she finished.

"Why should what a girl does be so much worse than what a man does!" Ariel said darkly, out of thought.

"Oh, darling, we can't go back to that!"

"I mean, why should a man be able to throw anything up to his wife, when he himself was in it—talked her into doing it?" Ariel demanded.

Gail flushed with distaste.

"I don't think a decent man would do that, Ariel!" she said warmly.

But words were no use. Twenty-one, beautiful, married to the man she had chosen, yet the secret of content was denied Ariel, and she could only look forward with apprehension, and backward with regret. The look in Dick's eyes when he came to steal a few words with his promised wife was a sealed book to Ariel, as was the light that shone on Gail's face as she went to meet him. There had been no mystery, no waiting, no fragrance and glory to Ariel's surrender—excited, reckless, their sudden desire knowing no law, their breath stained with food and drink and cigarettes, she and Van had possessed each other casually, without premeditation, unashamed and unfearing before the hour that found them in each other's arms; ashamed and fearful forever afterward.

Ariel tried to feel contempt for Gail, so innocent, so awed, so trembling with love and faith at the door of the temple. Ariel was but twenty-one, but life had hardened her; she had aged ten years in the last three. Nothing thrilled Ariel now, no promises rang true in her ears, no prospect allured her. And Gail at twenty-seven, Gail who wrote stories and handled unmanageable little boys and novel-loving old ladies so expertly—Gail was only a child, going in utter unknowingness to her bridal night. To Gail men could still be fine, good, worthy of trust and love; to Gail marriage and motherhood would be the very crown of life.

When Gail and Dick sat before the fire in the late evenings, and when Ariel, reading in the next room or loitering discontentedly up to bed, heard their low voices, their low laughter, she tried to despise them.

But after all it was hard to despise beauty and strength and hope; it was hard to despise the prospect that embraced travel and new cities, and the crossing of the great ocean. Above all, it was hard to despise love, and how these two loved each other!

Gail's new cards came home: "Mrs. Richard Alden Stebbins."

Her new trunk came, with a plain little "A. L. S." lettered on the blue stripe that encircled it.

"Why the blue stripe, Dick?"

"Willoughby gave me that idea. We'll be traveling, off and on. We'll go over to Paris for Christmas, maybe. And it helps you pick out your baggage."

"Oh, thrills!" sang Gail.

"But listen to me, Dicky," she said, on the afternoon before the great day itself. "Mark me well. If you were running this ranch as your father did, and if you and I were moving in here tomorrow, I'd be just as happy. I'd be just as happy! I'd bake you biscuits and sweep out this old kitchen."

On a quiet, late October afternoon they were walking about the old place that was presently to be Sam's home. Sam not only had theories about farming, but he had an eye on pretty Beth Tait who taught the kindergartenn grades. He, Gail, and Dick wandered through the gaunt, deserted farmhouse that still smelled of apples and rotting wood, and through the sweet-scented barns and stables.

"I believe you would!" Dick said.

Sam had left them alone for a minute in the kitchen. It held the homely air of a place in which hard living—loving, hating, eating, grieving, and rejoicing—had had their way for generations. The old stove had been polished thin; lamps still stood crookedly on the old brass brackets. Two empty flower pots careened on the window sill.

"How different it would be!" Gail said.

"Well, this was home to me, you know. I learned to read in this kitchen. My whole childhood was right in this yard."

"If Beth and Sam make a go of it we'll come back some day!"

"We'll come back anyway, Gail."

They stepped into the dooryard, and looked up at the trees from which the leaves were drifting, and Dick showed her his initials cut clumsily into the great wealed bole of a pepper tree. The girl stooped and touched her lips to them.

"Do you know what that is, Dick?" she asked, straightening up with eyes full of love and laughter. "That's love, dear. The love of a woman for a man!"

"The miracle," he said, kissing the glowing face under the tawny mop.

On the way home they stopped at the graveyard, and Gail knelt, dry-eyed and thoughtful, at Edith's little stone, and touched its carved inscription with her finger tips

"'Blessed are the pure in spirit, for they shall see God,'" she read. And all that evening, the last of her girlhood, she thought of Edith.

"My darling, if you could share this! You'd love it so! Packing the trunk—you'd have so many little tricks, out of the backs of magazines! You'd come to visit us, maybe, in London, and we'd prowl around together—in the Strand and in Charing Cross road. . . . You'd be the first to touch my baby—when he comes."

The evening was one long dream, a dream that blended into the dreams of the short night, when she slept lightly, but sweetly, mingling waking thoughts with happy, confused journeys into the unreal.

She thought of the old house whose winter shadows rose about her and below her and above her; the stately old ugly rooms, the books and books and books, on the shelves and lying face downward on the chairs and stuck between the railings of the winding stairway. She thought of her poetic mother, dying, with innocent little golden-headed Ariel on her arm and of motherless childhood days when she and Edith had whispered of school affairs, going off to sleep, and had played mud pies and flower ladies out in the old garden during the long vacations.

Then Papa off to the war, as became a Lawrence and a patriot, and then the strange sense of suddenly growing up, of responsibility, that had come with the news of Papa's death, and her first job.

Poverty, hard work, discouragement, ignorance—how these shadows had darkened about the Lawrence children! The old house shabbier and poorer, Ariel unmanageable, Sam playing hooky, Phil beginning to run with the Wibser girl, and never any money, any beauty, any leisure, any young pleasure for any of them!

She and Edith had philosophized, had read books and taken walks, had refused the spurious coin when the genuine had failed them. But Ariel had fluttered straight toward the flame—desperately determined to force from the world what the world would not give.

Edith always steadfast, faithful, coming to the library to help stack books, planning supper in the side garden, with raspberries and iced tea. But Ariel in open rebellion, and Gail not much better.

She remembered the day when Van Murchison came suddenly back into her life, and when fun, excitement, visits, and frocks had seemed within reach. Unsatisfactory, flippant, giddy as he had been, she had accepted him, she had determined indeed to marry him should the chance be offered her—marry him to escape.

Gail, dreaming of all this on her wedding eve, trembled with a sudden chill in the darkness and solitude of her own big chamber. She would have taken Van to escape—what?

Well, this. This that she had tonight. Her friends, her background, her family, Phil and Lily and the children, all the beauty and dignity of home. To escape from her work, her beloved sheets of yellow paper, her green fountain pen. To escape from Dick, and London, and all the glowing future!

Poor little Ariel had escaped—escaped from life. She had shut herself into the jail of her own dissatisfied heart, and there she would be for a long time to come, perhaps forever.

Fishy Facts

Nine hundred thousand tons of coal are used to catch the 200,000 tons of fish landed at Grimsby every year, where the largest ice factory in the world turns out 1,200 tons of ice a day. Brought from the farthest parts of the North Sea, the landings begin at 5 a. m. every weekday morning on the "pontoon," which is the name for the concrete market. The fish is auctioned from north to south, cleaned and frequently filleted, boxed in ice and packed in the vans of express night trains to catch the early morning markets at Billingsgate in London and elsewhere.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Something About Billions

Marvelous New Cars
News From Ethiopia

Silas H. Strawn, once head of the American Bar association and president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, says the country is spending $7,000 a minute, and thinks it is too much. Your small boy will tell you how much $7,000 a minute makes in one year. Once "all the world wondered," or at least we did, when there was talk of spending one-quarter of a billion on the Panama canal. Now, any professor could spend that, after three minutes' thinking, and news that the nation's deficit has increased fifteen hundred millions in the past few weeks startles nobody.

Arthur Brisbane

The world has passed through earthquake week. Earthquakes in Montana, greatest sufferer on this continent. Severe shocks are reported in Siam.

Earthquakes in Buffalo, N. Y.; Ottawa, Toronto, Guayaquil, Ecuador; a busy seismographic week.

And the moon is partly to blame. Its power of gravitation exercises a strong pull on the earth, as it shows in lifting the ocean tides. Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, of Harvard, says the moon causes "sub-surface adjustments of the earth."

The new cars of 1936, now on exhibition, are so extraordinarily beautiful that every American should see them, regardless of intention to buy a new car. Most encouraging is the determined energy that business men and engineers of the automobile industry have shown in fighting the depression, while improving that which seemed beyond improvement.

Rome gives confirmation of the slaughter of six thousand women and children by Ethiopian warriors taking vengeance on the fathers of the children who deserted to Italy. Rome also reports the killing of five hundred Ethiopians by Italian bombing planes, and "an attempt to assassinate Haile Selassie by an unnamed American negro."

Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has "flung the last available man into the battle line," relying on old men, young boys and women to run his government, reminding you of the late czar's announcement that he was going to send "his last moujik." He did not live to do that.

The national effort to "buy ourselves out of the hole" encounters difficulties. The President, to make his four billions cash spread as far as possible, announced top wages of $93 a month. But union labor says, "No; you must pay us full union wages," and New York may have a state-wide strike to back the demand. President Roosevelt, it is said, refuses to concede that public relief is a branch of union labor, and, even with 1936 looming ahead, may insist that two governments in the country are one too many.

Heavy windstorms in Florida so late in the season are disturbing. Inhabitants are moved away from the keys. There is no danger, however, to those that occupy houses properly constructed and know enough to stay in them during the short time that the storm lasts.

Greece is ready to take back her king and many Greeks are growing "spike" mustaches like his. Many Germans grew mustaches, curling upward, to imitate their former kaiser. There is not much in imitating mustaches.

You wonder why the Greeks cannot find a Greek for king, if they must have a king. In days of "the glory that was Greece" it wasn't necessary to go outside among "barbarians" to find a ruler.

You may want to know that in England, where good times have really come back, the Tories have made heavy gains at the present election and the Labor party sustains heavy losses. Ramsay MacDonald, head of Britain's first Labor government, rejoices openly at labor's downfall. His work as prime minister seems to have changed his opinions. Experience often changes our minds.

"It is a very great rebuff for labor," says MacDonald. "The people are not being taken in by wild and reckless promises which they know cannot be carried out, in municipal or national government."

Ed Howe, an able writer of Kansas, is expected to "put aside his pencil and pen forever," because his doctor warns him that blindness is approaching.

Perhaps Mr. Howe will tell his doctor: "Milton did much of his important writing after he was totally blind, and I can do the same." Mr. Howe can use a dictating machine, whereas Milton dictated to his daughters, who, uneducated, found it difficult to write down his Latin dictation.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

BANKING EVOLUTION

By R. S HECHT

President American Bankers Association

BANKING at one time was a private business, but more recently has developed into a profession—a semi-public profession. This change has not come suddenly but is the result of an evolutionary process. Banking has grown and changed with the growth and change of our country.

R. S. HECHT

The banker who has survived the trials and tribulations of the past few years has proven himself a man of courage and ability, and we may well expect him to meet the problems that lie before him with resolution and sound judgment.

Changes of momentous importance have occurred in our economic structures and bankers have had a difficult road to travel. Some will argue that all of these changes were evolutionary and inevitable, while others look upon many of them as revolutionary and unnecessary. It is extremely difficult to trace with any degree of accuracy the real causes for many of our troubles and it is not always easy in judging these developments to distinguish properly between cause and effect.

Unfortunately it has become the fashion to blame on our banking system all the troubles which the depression has brought. As a consequence we hear much of needed reform of banking by law. No one will deny that certain defects have developed in our existing banking laws which need correction, and that certain abuses were committed which no one wishes to defend or have remain possible in the future. Never before were bankers more determined than they are today to bring about whatever changes in our banking system are called for by the public welfare.

The best results can and will be accomplished by normal processes and gradual adjustments of our present private banking structure—suitably supervised by proper authority—rather than by the passage of still more drastic laws, offering panaceas in the form of more government-owned or government-controlled financial organizations.

The Basis of Good Laws

Lasting laws relating to any phase of human need are formed and modelled in the rough school of practical human experience and are usually the result of sound evolutionary processes rather than of sudden impulses to change fundamental principles.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE CONTINUES TO GAIN

Bankers Report Nation-Wide Improvement in Attitude Toward Banks—Educational Campaigns Play a Part

NEW YORK.—Ninety-six per cent of over 300 reporting clearinghouses throughout the United States find concrete evidence of favorable turns in public opinion regarding banks, it is shown in the results of a survey made by "Banking," the monthly publication of the American Bankers Association. City and country districts in every state are represented, it is pointed out.

"The outstanding conclusion is that there has been a genuine nation-wide improvement the last few months in the attitude of the public toward its banking institutions," the publication says. Statistical evidence on which the bankers base their conclusions which warrant this statement is as follows:

The Evidence

"How do bankers know there has been an improvement in the public attitude? They have certain statistical evidence. They have seen their deposits increase substantially in nearly all the cases reported, and tremendously in some cases. Many letters tell of increases of 100 to 300 per cent from the low point of the panic.

"For another thing, they know that fewer people are using safe deposit boxes as a repository for their savings, and that, in many instances at least, postal savings are declining.

"However, many express the view that they could throw out the statistical evidence and still realize that the public is in a better mood where the banks are concerned than before. The best evidence offered on this point, numerous bankers say, is to be found in the acceptance by the public of the newly instituted service charges and the reduced deposit interest rates."

A Summary of the Returns

The statement presents the following summary of the survey:

"We find on breaking up the general classifications of replies to the poll that the 65 per cent of those answering with an unqualified 'yes' represent only a partial measure of the optimistic feeling. Adding the favorable replies included in other groups, (i. e. 'yes' with qualifications, 'no change,' and 'mixed') we find that the vote shows a definitely healthy situation in 84 per cent of the localities reporting; at least some signs of improvement in another 12 per cent; a continuance of unfavorable conditions in 2 per cent, and a change for the worse in another 2 per cent. It is not too much to say that this is substantially 96 per cent favorable."

Reasons for Changed Public Opinion

As to reasons for the changes in public opinion regarding banks reported by the clearinghouses "more than one organization has a word to say about the American Bankers Association advertising and educational material," the magazine says.

It mentions in addition the benefits of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation in the emergency, improvement in the general business situation, the weeding out of weak banks and the banking moratorium.

"The response to the survey can be put down as encouraging and informative," the magazine concludes. "It holds out the definite hope that with a continuance of a cooperative, educational attitude on the part of the bankers the rest of the journey back to normal may well be completed in the not too distant future."

BANKERS ACTIVE IN SOIL SAVING MOVE

Issue Book Describing Causes, Ravages and Means of Prevention of Erosion

MADISON, Wisc.—Under the title "Protecting Investment Values in Land," the American Bankers Association Agricultural Commission has published a booklet dealing with the conservation of soil resources as a pressing national problem.

"Careful estimates indicate that 750,000,000 tons of soil, suspended and dissolved, are carried off to the sea each year by running water," the commission's book declares. "An equal amount removed from its source is left en route. This means a total of 1,500,000,00 tons, equal to approximately one ton for each acre of land in this country. The Soil Conservation Service estimates that 35,000,000 acres have been ruined.

THE WORK OF CREDIT

Bank Shows How It Gives Needed Aid to All Classes of Prudent Borrowers

How a bank loan portfolio presents a graphic cross section picture of the business of its community is disclosed by the description which a midwestern bank recently gave of its loans to customers. It revealed also how closely interwoven with its neighbors' varied lives are the threads of the bank's financial helpfulness.

This description showed that the bank had made a loan of $100,000 to a local shoe manufacturer to purchase materials, discount bills and meet current requirements.

To a wholesale grocer $95,000 had been advanced for the purchase of inventory, the loan to be repaid over a period in accordance with specified terms set forth in the loan agreement.

Assistance in Personal Matters

Another loan had been made to a home owner to the amount of $200 for painting and repairing. This was made in cooperation with the Federal Housing Administration and was being repaid in twenty-four monthly installments of $8.33 each.

A dentist had been loaned $300 to purchase new equipment. He was paying off the debt out of his professional earnings as they came in.

To a large domestic refrigerator distributor $30,000 had been granted on warehouse receipts to finance dealer shipments.

A home owner had been granted a $3,000 mortgage loan to be repaid in three years.

One thousand dollars had been advanced to an office worker on the cash surrender value of his insurance policy to aid him in meeting an emergency.

The National Total

If each of these various examples were multiplied many times the result would represent the total volume of credit cooperation which the bank was extending to its neighbors in its community, for aggregate loans to all its customers amounted to more than twelve million dollars.

Simplification of Bank Checks

New York.—In a bulletin issued by the Bank Management Commission of the American Bankers Association, plans are described for carrying on the simplification of bank checks, notes, drafts and similar instruments in respect to size and uniformity of arrangement of subject matter.

Detailed recommendations for this end were formulated by the association about ten years ago, the bulletin says, and promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce among banks, business houses using large numbers of checks, commercial stationers and lithographers. As a result about 85 per cent adherence to the recommendations was brought about. The present bulletin, which describes the standard specifications in full, is issued to maintain this high level of adherence to the recommendations.

National Bank Notes

Changes in our money on the scale of about $800,000,000 are now going on through the retirement of national bank notes. This is reflected in increasing deposits in the Treasury of lawful money to replace bonds held against outstanding notes which will require some time for withdrawal from circulation.

The change in the currency will require a considerable shift of bank funds in many cases, but it is doubtful if so large a volume of currency has ever been retired and replaced in any country with so little disturbance.

Smilin' Thru

"There's a little brown road
Windin' over the hill
To a little white cot
By the sea.
There's a little green gate,
At whose trellis I wait
While two eyes of blue
Come smilin thru at me.

There's a gray lock or two
In the brown of her hair
There's some silver in mine too I see
Yet in all the long years
When the clouds brought their tears
Those two eyes of blue
Kept smilin' thru at me."

SMILIN' THRU LIFE with its sunshine and shadows! It's joys and sorrows are all beautifully portrayed in song and story in the cinema production—SMILIN THRU, to be shown, by popular request, at the Dixie Theatre in Columbiana on Thursday and Friday nights.

It is not often a picture so strongly appeals to me—but, I have seen this particular one exactly four times, and shall be found looking at it and loving it all over again. It depicts LIFE as we would like to believe it. The immortality of LOVE—Its beauty and sacred influence on our lives, lasting, immovable, eternally THERE. Do not fail to take advantage of this opportunity to see this picture while it is in Columbina. It is a story whose beauty will linger with you long after the final drop of the curtain. It is one of those things that furnish inspiration enough to keep you—SMILIN' THRU.

The Legion Dance sponsored by Shirley-Holloway Post of Columbiana, staged in the Masonic Hall on Monday night, November 11, was a success from every standpoint. A brief musical program preceded the talk by Commander Frank Head, after which the Rhythm 'Ristocrats swung into Over There, and the dance was on. The Legionnaires state they are contemplating renting the Hall and will possibly present a dance once a month during the winter season.

The esteem and love that the town has acquired for the Rev. and Mrs. Davidson will follow them to Standing Rock, where he will serve as pastor of the Methodist Church. Rev. and Mrs. Davidson came to Vincent four years ago. Their pleasing personalities and faithfulness for the work won them many friends who regret their leaving, but as the old saying goes, Vincent's loss is Standing Rock's gain. Again the town wishes them all the luck and happiness possible as they travel the pathway of life.

Your Best Flare Forward in Simple, All-Occasion Frock

PATTERN 2397

This charming all-occasion frock has flares both back and front, thus assuring its wearer plenty of style interest. The drop-shoulder yoke points twice in front, once in back, to the bodice and puffed sleeves which gather round it. Utterly charming, the tiny round collar which tops the yoke's diagonal closing, and don't you love the young way the sleeves puff about the elbow? There are novelty crepes with plenty of surface interest from which to choose—or if you're out to be very practical, select a sheer wool.

Pattern 2397 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3¾ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Kosciuszko's Tomb

The tomb of Kosciuszko, who served as Washington's adjutant during the Revolutionary war, is now a vault of the Cathedral of Cracow, in Poland. Every year hundreds of Americans visit it and the huge mound of earth which the Polish people built to honor him. The dirt for the mound was brought by peasants from all over the country in their long-flowing sleeves and aprons.

Hippo Charges Auto

Giving a savage snort a hippopotamus charged an automobile from a roadside wood between Victoria Falls and Livingstone, Rhodesia, recently. The beast badly damaged the car. The woman passenger suffered a broken kneecap and her husband and daughter were bruised. The hippo's shoulder was badly injured and the animal limped back to the woods.

Encouragement

Correction does much, but encouragement does more—encouragement after censure is as the sun after a shower.

Man Slays Wife by Gun; Court Imposes $10 Fine

Called upon to pronounce on the case of a man who killed his wife because he had discovered that she was unfaithful, an Assize court jury sitting at Lille has returned a thoroughly French verdict. It found him not guilty of murder, but guilty of carrying arms illegally.

Charles Simmoneau, an accountant, was the accused man. Suspecting his conjugal misfortune, he had engaged a detective to follow his wife's movements. Informed one day that she was in a certain hotel, he waited near until she left and then followed and shot her. She died in three months. In court Simmoneau said that he deeply regretted his act, and also expressed his grief at not having been allowed to go to his wife's bedside to beg her forgiveness. Acquitted of the murder charge, he was fined $10.

Keen Imagination Sure Check on Unkind Acts

A keen imagination is the surest check upon all unkind conduct. Happily, it is the very rare exception when anyone intends to be unkind. Most persons, however culpable, would indignantly deny the imputation. It is usually because they fail to realize the suffering they inflict; they are deficient in that power which depicts the pain of another to their own sensibilities.

There are many hearts now hard and callous that might be rendered tender and pitiful could their imaginative faculty be so developed as to make them conscious of the distress they carelessly produce.

Fur Coats Atop Bright Wool Frocks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FURS play an increasingly important role in the American woman's wardrobe. It is highly significant that the world of fashion is in this day and age thinking in terms of fur as would not have been considered possible in the past. We have come to sense that whatever can be done with fabric can be as readily achieved via fur as a medium, and so with this thought in mind artists in fur craft are designing and creating fashions as unrestrictedly as if they were manipulating velvets, or silks, cottons, linens or any other known fabric.

There is no end to a recital of the perfectly astonishing things being done in the realm of furs this season. In this brief message only a few highlights can be touched upon. For instance, entire suits are now being fashioned of furs which are as supple and as comfortably wearable as cloth. Enthusiasm for the new costume suit is notable also, the ensemble including a stunning fur coat or cape or jacket (short or hip-length or longer) the same becoming an integral part of the whole in that it is lined and detailed with the gay plaid or novelty fabric of which the dress is made. The fact that fur is playing a big part in the millinery realm should also be taken into account.

Just now the outstanding trend is in the direction of the fur coat, that bespeaks high style in its every detail, to be worn over bright-colored woolen frocks such as are at this moment at the height of fashion. The coat foremost in the line of action is the jaunty swagger type styled of the fur you like best. These fur swaggers are given added swank in that they flaunt the newest fastenings in the way of military frogs done of braid or if not these then metal gadgets that sound a gay note of chic.

For the fashioning of these voguish coats every conceivable type of fur seems to have been called into play—precious mink, sable or hudson seal, persian lamb, caracul, fine kidskin, moire pony, moleskin, summer ermine, raccoon, muskrat—to complete the list go to your favorite furrier and see what you will find there to see and covet.

Raccoon, tried and true and ever dear to the heart of the college girl, is featured this year in a full-length double-breasted model as shown to the left in the picture. The johnny collar with a wide lapel can be buttoned up close to the neck. A double skin cuff and collar add the right tone and shading to the fur.

A black Russian pony skin model, shaded and matched like caracul (center figure), has a semi-princess line, the new raglan sleeve, a two-point collar and sway belt.

You won't have to worry about the cold if you snuggle into the stunning hudson seal swagger to the right in the illustration. It has the new two-point collar that is so flattering to your face. The tapered balloon sleeve is also an important style feature. Slit pockets also add that very desirable chic. This is the sort of fur coat that instantly ranks its wearer among the best dressed.

The fur theme is endless. If you long to see more and more of furs that will fairly dazzle with their sumptuousness, furs that are detailed with fetching style maneuvers that will make you almost gasp in admiration and wonderment that such things can be, keep an eye open for national fur week. During this nation-wide carnival of fur every fashion emporium, be it on Main street or in New York, Chicago, Hollywood or other metropolitan center, will dramatize furs in spectacular display.

OSTRICH BOA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Reports come from Paris that Lucien Lelong and other leading couturiers are accessorizing the feather boa, not only in renaissance colors but also in white and black. In the picture a long boa of dyed ostrich is flung nonchalantly across the shoulders. A large ostrich fan is carried to complete this very formal costume. The white, heavy satin gown with its extremely deep front and back decolletage is beautifully complemented with the rich renaissance-red feathers of the boa and the fan.

BUSTLE IS TRYING TO STAGE COMEBACK

We've seen timid attempts, in the last few years, to revive the bustle of grandmother's day. But this season there is no doubt about it—the bustle has arrived.

It's all in line with the new tendency to back fullness in the swish evening gowns.

Sometimes the bustle takes the form of a looped back drapery, with a trailing panel.

Sometimes it is a peplum-like bit of shirring.

Sometimes it's part of a sash that ties in back, or a flange stitched from the center seam.

But a bustle it is, and there's no argument about it.

The new idea of back fullness has given the designers a lot of new ideas in silhouette.

Usually the front of the evening gown is slim, straight and fitted, with the fullness concentrated at the back, where the gown flares forth in surprising fashion.

Shops in Paris Display Expertly Tailored Undies

Paris shops are showing expertly tailored underwear in a wide range of styles. Crepe de chine and satin creations are trimmed with delicate embroidery, which is considered much smarter and more practical than lace. Taffeta skirts with a design of ruching around the hem are worn as petticoats under evening gowns. The skirt of the evening gown hangs far more gracefully over the stiff taffeta, which is not at all unattractive if it happens to swirl out during a dance.

No Sleeves

Something new in fur wraps is a sleeveless one of seal. Two large fur buttons anchor it down on one shoulder. Worn over a brilliant color dress, it makes an elegant costume.

Lesson for November 17

THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm 126:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New Song.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Coming Home Rejoicing.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Thanksgiving for God's Care.

I. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:1-14).

It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send this letter to the captives in Babylon (vv. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vv. 6, 7).

1. The length of the captivity (v. 10). Their coming back was to be "after seventy years." From Daniel 9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive, among which Daniel was found.

2. Recovered by God (vv. 10-14). God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices. He assured them that when his purpose was accomplished he would visit them and convince them of his good purpose toward them. Their captivity he would turn away, gather them from all the nations, and bring them into their own land.

II. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled (Ezra 1:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus (vv. 1-4).

a. This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (v. 1). What God has promised he will do; he never forgets.

b. By divine initiation (v. 1). "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus." How this was done we do not know. Possibly Daniel brought to his attention the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12). Every impulse to do good in all men is caused by the Lord. It may have been that Cyrus only saw his own action as a piece of statecraft—the creation of a buffer nation between his kingdom and that of Egypt.

c. The content of his proclamation (vv. 2-4).

(1) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.

(2) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v. 3). He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord God.

(3) Lend assistance (v. 4). Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go. Many, no doubt, had lost their national spirit and therefore did not desire to go. All such were to lend friendly assistance in silver, gold, and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vv. 5, 6). The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing and ready to go. The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.

3. The royal favor (vv. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. Now to have 5,400 of these vessels returned to their owners and sent back to Jerusalem to be put to their original use, met a hearty response by the Jews.

III. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ps. 126:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1). They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.

2. Their laughter and singing (vv. 2, 3). They not only recognized this as the favor of the Lord upon them, but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.

3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4). They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting him for fruitfulness of the land.

4. Sowing in tears (vv. 5, 6). The seed which they were to sow in the land was so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow as they brought with them the sheaves of the harvest.

Monotony

Whether we are rich or poor, we all have to fight against monotony—doing the same thing over and over until it loses interest.

We can fight monotony with variety, and one way to do this is by making a wise use of leisure. If we wish to avoid the feeling that we are merely machines, we must become interested in many things.

Patience

Patience is bitter, but its fruit sweet. —Rousseau.

Life's Surprises

Life is always opening new and unexpected things to us. There is no monotony in living to him who walks even the quietest and tamest path with open and perspective eyes. The monotony of life is monotonous to you, is in you, not in the world.—Philips Brooks.

Sculptor Loses Fortune and Bemoans His Fate

A talented young sculptor was the last to arrive at the party. He seemed gloomy and dejected and the smile was missing from his usually cheerful countenance. As he seated himself beside the Woman she found it unnecessary to ask the cause for his dejection, for he immediately informed her ruefully, "I lost $2,500 today."

The Woman was surprised. Although he is a talented young man he has not yet reached the stage in his career where he can turn his talent into a means of livelihood. He has difficulty selling his work and the woman never would have suspected that he owned so much money. She said nothing and he continued, "I'm so mad at myself. It's all my own fault, too."

Her curiosity prompted her to put the question for which he was waiting. "What happened?" she asked.

He seemed glad to unburden his troubled soul. "I wanted to bet on the horse that came in first today and if I had, I'd have won $2,500. But I didn't have the $12 to put on him—darn it. I'm as mad as hops at myself—all that money lost."—New York Sun.

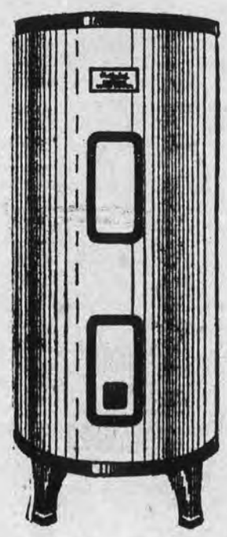
THAT'S NEWS!



WE DON'T claim to have the complete answer to the problem of keeping children clean, but we do say that having hot water ready ALL THE TIME—the way you have it with an automatic ELECTRIC Water Heater — will make a world of difference. Frequently the children will solve the cleanliness problem themselves.

Automatic ELECTRIC hot water saves time and eliminates annoyance dozens of times a day, with dishwashing, laundering, house-cleaning and baths all needing hot water. (The cost is only a few cents a day at the most—a small price for making cleanliness so easy.)

Electric Water Heaters—like Electric Ranges and Electric Refrigerators—may be bought for only a modest amount "down," the balance payable on the popular ECONOMY PURCHASE PLAN.

UNDER THE COURTHOUSE DOME

Remodeling the Courthouse has been one of the factors that have marked the progressive reign of J. M. Lyon, President of the Board of Revenue. The project has been a long needed one, and the tasteful and artistic work of the painters has added much to the marble structure which gives to Columbiana the distinction of having one of the most beautiful Courthouse buildings in the State. Commendations and congratulations to the Board of Revenue for sanctioning this progressive improvement are heard on all sides. Many modern improvements for the interior are now being considered.

Circuit Court swung into action Monday morning, with Judge James W. Strother, of Dadeville, Alabama, on the bench. Judge Wales W. Wallace was disqualified to hold the term of Court in Shelby County, on account of former interests in the cases docketed. Judge Wallace is in Opelika and Tuskegee, substituting for Judge Strother in the 5th District this week.

Statistics from Judge Len C. Walker's office show that several thousand automobile licenses were sold also, Driver's Licenses, but there are many delinquents, who will have to pay the added penalty for over stepping the time limit—November 14.

The new arm of what is called "The Drivers License Law" is now in full swing and we shall watch the results with interest. Here's hoping the huge fund which will be used to finance a numerous highway patrol, will make accidents fewer and the roads safer.

L. C. Abbott and Luther Fowler, Tax Collector and Assessor are spending their days making the rounds in various Beats of Shelby County for the assessing of property.

Occupying the spot light in the legal profession this week is the fifth trial of the Gunn vs. Woodmen of the World insurance case. The case grew out of an insurance policy carried upon the life of Mr. Gunn, who was killed, and whose wife, the beneficiary in said policy was charged and convicted of the murder of her husband. Three juries of Shelby County held by their verdicts, the insurance company to be liable to the beneficiary, under the terms of the policy, and one Jury was unable to agree. A mistrial was entered by the Court, and the cause continued.

L. H. Ellis, of Columbiana, is representing the Plaintiff, and McCullough & Gibson of Birmingham, are representing the Defendant.

Hon. Fred Ball, prominent attorney of Montgomery. and W. L. Longshore of Birmingham, attended Circuit Court in Columbiana on Monday.

Alex Scott, (colored) Janitor at Alabama College, Montevallo, is serving as a Juror for the Circuit Court during the Civil week. Four other colored men were drawn from the Jury bor, but were excused at their request.

A special election will be held on December 17, 1935.

HIGHLIGHTS FOR NEXT YEAR IN THE FARM OUTLOOK

Auburn, Alabama,—Some of the high lights in the 1936 agricultural outlook of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics follow:

Prices of farm machinery are likely to advance slightly in 1936, due to increases in the prices of materials, labor, and other costs.

The outlook is for somewhat lower fertilizer prices during the 1935-36 season tran in the 1934-35 season.

The demand for electricity on farms will continue to increase if the plans of the rural electrification administration materialize.

Hog prices between now and next September are expected to average higher than in 1934-35, but will not be as high as the peak prices last summer.

Farm wage rates are expected to advance in 1936 in view of the greater demand for hired farm workers now in prospect.

CARD OF APPRECIATION

We wish to express our deep appreciation for the sympathy and kind ness shown us in the loss of our husband and father, T. J. Weaver, and also for the floral offering.

May God's richest blessings rest upon each and every one of you.

Mrs. T. J. Weaver.
Mr. and Mrs. Lacey Weaver.

The Dorrietys, Chas. Z., Sr. and Jr. and Ross McBride, of Birmingham, were visitors in Columbiana on last Sunday.

Heart Drifts

QUERIES

Is it any body's business.
If a gentleman should choose
To wait upon a lady
If the lady don't refuse?
Or, to speak a little plainer,
That the meaning all may know,
Is it any body's business
If a lady has a beau?

Is it anybody's business
When a gentleman may call,
Or when he leaves a lady,
Or if he leaves at all?
Or is it necessary
That the curtain should be drawn,
To savev from further trouble,
The outside lookers on?

Is a person on the sidewalk,
Whether great or whether small,
Is it any body's business
Where that person means to call?
Or, if you see a person
As he's calling anywhere,
Is it any of your business
What his business may be there?

The substance of your query
Simply stated would be this:
Is it anybody's business
What another's business is?
If it is, or if it isn't,
We would really like to know,
For we are certain if it isn't
There are some who make it so.

We drew a circle that took him in.

HELPLESSNESS

There is no helplessness akin to this;
To feel another's pain you cannot ease;
To lack the means to give the wanted bliss;
And still be forced to hear his piteous pleas.

To see the need and know and understand
The misery of him who cries for aid;
To have the wish to stretch the helping hand
But lack the means by which the need were stayed.

Sometimes I think 'twere easier to bear
Whatever pains the body must endure
Than stand in health and look upon despair
And feel another's pain you cannot cure.

TODAY

I must live today, today.
If I live yesterday, today,
Tomorrow is only yesterday.
If I live tomorrow, today,
There s no tomorrow.
As I live today,
There is no tomorrow.
I make tomorrow.
Tomorrow and today
Are the fruits of yesterday.
So I must live today, today.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and suffering,
Here is a beautiful hope for you.

WILD ANIMAL SHOW TO VISIT COLUMBIANA

On Tuesday November 26, just about the time most of the people of Columbiana are thinking of getting up, the long line of trucks of the Mighty Haag Shows will begin arriving here, and start work pitching their vast city of tents on Cox's Pasture where they will give two complete performances.

The Haag Show this year will bring to Columbiana more wild animals, horses, pones and trained dogs than ever before exhibited. This year the Haag Shows are featuring such well known acts as the Tan Araki Japanese Troupe in a new act, Johnson Duo of Wire Walkers, Zeldo Troupe of head balancers, Fisher Family of Acrobats and Haag's Herd of Performing Elephnts, largest and best trained in the country, presented by Miss Ruby Risher, who takes her life in her own hands twice daily when she places her head in the mouth of one of the elephants.

There will be a street parade at 1:00 P. M. followed by a number of free exhibitions on the show grounds. Performances start at 2:00 P. M., and 8:00 P. M., but doors willl open one hour earlier so as to give everyone ample time to visit Hagg's big new zoo and be entertaned by Hagg's Gold Concert Band.

Admission will be at popular prices, and the public is assured of a whole evening of splended entertainment.

FARMERS ADVISED WATCH FOR PINK CORN WORMS

Auburn, Ala.,—To keep pink corn worms from damaging stored corn in Alabama as they did last year, farmers are advised to examine their corn at regular intervals and to fumigate with carbon disulphide as soon as the pests are found.

"Fumigation is by far the most common method of controlling this pest when damaging corn," says Prof. J. M. Robinson, head of the entomology department here. "Where a farmer fumigates his crib he not only destroys the pink corn worms and moths but he also rids it of other insects, such as corn weevils."

Farmers interested in fumigating their cribs against pink corn worms or corn weevils are advised to consult their county agents who will give detailed instructions.

PERSONAL MENTION

It will pay you to wait to purchase your new fall coat and dress from the exclusive and large stock now on its way from New York to Columbiana Leader. Max Lefkovits has been with you for the past 38 years. You can depend on what he tells you. New piece goods and ready to wead goods are arriving daily in the Leader. Watch the crowds as htey stop at the BUSY CORNER where Max Lefkovits waits to welcome you.

Knox Wooley, prominent Ford dealer, and ex-sheriff of Shelby County, is ill in the Veteran's Hospital in Tuscaloosa. Legions of friends will be happy to know that his condition is reported as not serious, and he will soon be back in Columbiana.

The great seal of the United States will be placed on the new dollar bill, which it is reported, will be the "handsomest" ever issued. Remember this Mr. Dollar Bill—"Handsome is as handsome does"—if these new products now being coined in Washington do not 'speak' any more often than the old "boys"—well, their chatter will not worry us any. The old "bucks" merely "whispered" as we passed them on. We are anxious t osee what the new ones will do.

We are grateful that the COAL STRIKE has been settled. A little bit of coal, mixed in with the crimson glow of the Yuletile logs is more comfortable to say the least of it. Concessions and sacrifice were made on both sides, and Gov. Graves is receiving congratulations in generous measure for the manner in which he handled the situation.

Watch for the appearance of the extra Christmas edition of the Democrat which will be off press on December 19, in time for Merchants to benefit from their advertising. Many prominent firms have alrealy signed up for space inthisattractive edition with the colored title page. This edition will be followed by the Chrstmas Good Wish edition. Pay up that delinquent subscription to Shelby County's leading newspaper if you want to receive these copies.

FARMERS SHOULD BUY FARMS NOW

Auburn, Ala.—Economic conditions are improving and land prices are rising, says Dr. L. N. Duncan,president, Alabama Polytechnic Institute and director of the State Extension Service, in advising farmers that now is a good time to buy farms.

Farmers with land, shelter, water. and firewood are assured of a comfortable place to live, regardless of the economic condition of the country he said. He also described landownership as an old-age insurance, guaranteeing an income in later years.

In describing the farm as an ideal place to live and rear a family, Dr. Duncan says: "I believe that it will be only a few years before electricity, farm-to-market roads, and other conveniences will revolutionize the farm home and make it by far the most desirable place to live."

Dr. Duncan advocates improving the land by terracing and growing winter legumes and providing a comfortable home by repairing the old or building a new. He says that county agents, extension service and experiment station officials, Auburn, and the soil division of the Department of Agriculture. Montgomery, will gladly furnish information about farm lands and will give assistance and advice in repairing and building farm homes.

By FRANK MACKNIGHT,
Columbiana, Alabama.

Pell City High and Shelby High fought to a scoreless tie last Friday. The two teams were very evenly matched and neither team made big gains on power plays but passes were used to a good advantage.

The Pell City team got within five yards of scoring on two occasions only to be held. Once when Pell City was on Shelby's five yard line, Martin, Shelby's quarterback, intercepted a pass and ran it back twenty yards before being downed.

Several passes were completed by Pell City men that looked like sure touchdowns but they never could get loose.

Davis, Shelby halfback was the principal ground gainer over the line but his running wasn't sufficient

Fowler got off several good punts for Shelby.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Thedford's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. . . Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Thedford's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Quezon Inaugurated First President of Philippines—Co-Ordinator Berry Has Troubles—Reassurances for Business Men—Armistice Day Celebrations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SELF-GOVERNMENT became a reality for the Philippines on November 15, according to schedule, and it is now up to the islanders to utilize their independence wisely and safely, with only general supervision by the United States. In the presence of a great throng of distinguished persons in the magnificent legislature building at Manila, Manuel Quezon, veteran advocate of independence, was inaugurated as the first president of the commonwealth. Representing the United States were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a large party of senators and representatives with their wives. Many foreign governments sent unofficial observers, and the leading statesmen of the islands were present.

Manuel Quezon

After Quezon had taken the oath of office, Sergio Osmena, vice president, and the members of the new unicameral legislature were sworn in.

President Roosevelt was personally represented by Secretary of War Dern, who made a pleasant speech and read the proclamation, simultaneously issued in Washington, terminating the old government of the islands and establishing the commonwealth government which is to lead to complete independence of the archipelago in ten years. A cablegram of congratulation also was received from Mr. Roosevelt.

Because of the danger of outbreaks by the extremist followers of Emilio Aguinaldo who have opposed Quezon, the constabulary was out in full force, thousands of its members being brought in from all over the archipelago.

The day before the inauguration the legislature held its final session and Frank Murphy, the last of the governors general, appeared before it to review the accomplishments of the American regime that lasted 36 years. "Having found democracy good for itself, America believes it will be good for the Filipinos" he said. Mr. Murphy was then sworn in as high commissioner of the new government.

The entire American delegation attended a grand reception and ball given by Mr. Quezon in honor of Mr. Murphy.

MAJ. GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial co-ordinator of the New Deal, is having a hard time co-ordinating industries. An industry-labor conference has been arranged for December 9 in Washington, but it is evident that some very considerable industries will not be represented. First, the Ford Motor company refused curtly to send a representative; then the Automobile Manufacturers' association objected to the affair, announcing its opposition to any revival of the NRA, though most of its members signed the old NRA code; and next came a sharp letter from the National Hardwood Lumber association, one of the country's oldest and largest trade associations, flatly refusing to attend the conference. The letter, written by J. W. McClure of Chicago, secretary of the association's board of directors, labeled any attempt to impose a new NRA on industry as "impractical, unworkable, unenforceable, a menace to respect for all laws and therefore opposed to public interest."

George L. Berry

Nevertheless, the conference will be held, and representatives of labor are expected to advocate a plan for licensing industry, a proposal that all government contractors comply with code provisions and the 30-hour week.

IF SECRETARY ROPER in addressing the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America in New York was speaking with authoritative knowledge of the intentions of the administration, business may feel considerably reassured. He said "the breathing spell which we are now enjoying is to be the end of governmental regimentation." He declared business was the "scapegoat" of the depression and he upheld the profit system. Of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a "breathing spell," the secretary said:

"This declaration of the President is clear-cut and concrete. It means specifically that the basic program of reform has been completed. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

According to a Washington dispatch in the New York Times, informal orders have been issued by President Roosevelt to administrative officials to cut federal expenditures under the 1937 budget to $500,000,000 less than the newly estimated total for 1936.

As a result, the dispatch says, the lives of many federal bureaus and agencies were reported to be hanging in the balance.

The economy wave is heightened by signs of better business, the Times says.

THAT story, originating with the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, that George Norris had said he would not seek re-election to the senate from Nebraska, seems to have been at least premature. The veteran senator says he will make his decision at election time next year, and not earlier.

"A campaign would be a small disturbance, compared to the trouble my not being a candidate has cost me," he said in Los Angeles. "I have received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States urging me to run next year."

ARMISTICE day was celebrated in the United States more generally and elaborately than it had been since the first of those occasions seventeen years ago. Chief of all the ceremonies, naturally, was that at Arlington National cemetery in Washington, where many thousands gathered to hear an address by President Roosevelt. Standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Chief Executive paid a brief but eloquent tribute to the gallantry of America's fighting men in the World war, set forth America's hopes and intentions for world peace, and announced the imminent signing of a trade treaty with Canada which Prime Minister King had been negotiating in Washington.

President Roosevelt

At exactly 11 o'clock the President bared his head and stood silent for a minute, as did millions of his fellow citizens all over the land. The President next placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb. For six hours, afterward, uniformed organizations marched up the hill in Arlington and laid their wreaths at the tomb.

The celebration in the national capital was culminated by a ball arranged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressional Medal of Honor men headed the list of guests, others being cabinet officers, diplomats and high officials of the army, navy and marine corps.

GOV. CYLDE L. HERRING of Iowa and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota made a bet of one hog on the football game between the universities of their states. Herring lost, and paid by delivering a fat porker to Olson. That seemed all right, but Virgil Case, a vice crusader and editor of a Des Moines monthly paper, immediately swore out a state warrant for the arrest of Herring on charges of gambling, and said he would file federal charges against Olson.

Under Iowa statutes, gambling is a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and a year in prison. The federal charge is a felony, Case said, punishable by a $5,000 fine and a prison sentence.

Neither governor appeared to be perturbed by the charges. Herring named Olson as his counsel, along with Senator Dan Steck of Iowa, who accompanied him to St. Paul to deliver the pig.

BRITISHERS went to the polls in the seventh general election since the World war, to elect a new parliament. Counting and publishing the vote over there is a deliberate process, so at this writing the results are not known. But there was no doubt of the victory of the government forces, though probably they would lose a number of seats. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was unopposed. But the Laborites made a hot fight to defeat Ramsay MacDonald and several other members of the Baldwin cabinet.

Stanley Baldwin

The government, in its campaign, urged support of its League of Nations activities and its program of unemployment relief and stimulation of national trade.

Liberals and Laborites took issue with the Conservative candidates on national defense questions, with Labor candidates particularly insistent on disarmament and international control of war materials.

PROMOTED by the powerful nationalistic party WAFD, riotous demonstrations against British domination in Egypt broke out in Cairo and other places. Several rioters were killed and many wounded by the police commanded by an Englishman. The WAFD party insists that Prime Minister Tewfik Nessim Pasha must resign. There is a large Italian community in Egypt, and for a long time it has been understood that Mussolini's emissaries have been stirring up discontent against Britain there.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—Even the Republicans are surprised at certain Democratic attacks on James A. Farley as a result of his pre-election claims. Demands that he resign, coming from an outstanding Democratic newspaper, put together with the fact that the Democrats registered a net majority in the Empire state of 360,000, cause some insiders here to wonder if there is something underlying the situation they do not understand.

It is perfectly true, they admit, that Farley's pre-election claims gave the Republicans a chance to do some crowing over their regaining of the control of the New York assembly. But it was pretty sad crowing, mostly done before the vote tabulation showed that huge Democratic majority.

Privately, Republicans were searching around for comfort next day as far as New York state is concerned. They finally decided that Tammany put forth all its effort because of its necessity for getting a strangle hold on the board of aldermen, and thus short circuiting Mayor La Guardia. Whereas there were no fights calculated to bring out a big vote upstate except in Erie county, where the Republicans did pretty well.

Actually, however, it always has been Farley's strategy to claim everything, concede nothing. He has explained his theory to newspaper men many times. For example, in 1932 Farley knew perfectly well there was no chance of Franklin D. Roosevelt's carrying Vermont. But, as he told friends at the time, if he conceded Vermont, publicly, all the party workers in that state would lay down. Whereas if he claimed it, and sent them speakers, money and assistance generally, they would be up on their toes fighting.

As a result, the shrewd Jim commented, "We might win a coroner here, and a sheriff there, and a member of the legislature somewhere else. Then, next election, these winners will be on the job working for our ticket," and will not have to be paid or cajoled. In fact, his theory is that three or four hard fights, even in hopeless territory, will be apt to produce a winning by and by.

Logic Accepted

Now the fact is that no politician who ever won a campaign disagrees with that logic. They may not practice it, because they may not have the time and energy to spare. Generally they think they haven't, anyhow, and so often they do not make these hopeless fights. But there is seemingly no limit to Farley's energy, and he has actually had all the money he needed in every campaign, regardless of plaintive statements to the contrary.

His strategy, incidentally, is abundantly justified by what has happened in upstate New York as a result of campaigning in hopeless territory. With a live, fighting Democratic organization in every upstate county, the old-time majorities above the Bronx have shrunk until they are swamped by the Democratic majorities in the big town.

This was demonstrated in this election, where despite a very sizable showing of Republican strength upstate, the net vote in the entire state was 350,000 Democratic.

In fact, the main hope of the Republicans about the Empire state, whose 47 electoral votes are so vital to any hope of beating the New Deal next November, lies in the belief that so many New Yorkers vote Democratic locally, but Republican nationally. This was certainly a factor in the Al Smith races for governor. Smith's record of running a million votes ahead of his national ticket in 1920 is still unmatched.

Those Wiley Poles

The government at Warsaw may not appreciate it, but it has a very effective embassy in Washington. In fact, a great deal more effective than is considered necessary by the milling interests of this country, not to mention speculators in rye.

The wily Poles, apparently, were just shrewd enough to realize that this administration does not like speculation, loves to see speculators get it in the neck, and lacks utterly any desire to help these "non-producers" pile up profits, despite the obvious fact that such profits would boost income tax receipts for the treasury.

All of which is concerned with rye and rye flour, not very exciting in themselves, but highly interesting to those who produce them, and those who buy and sell them.

It also concerns the feverish desire of many European countries, in the last few years, to make themselves self-supporting on foodstuffs, against the evil day when war might cut off their imports. In this particular case it has to do with the efforts of Poland in that direction.

This desire on the part of all European countries, practically, became very apparent to the farming interests of this country several years ago. Also to the milling interests and the grain trade generally.

They wept all over the shoulders of their senators and representatives, as a result of which congress passed a law which made it mandatory on the secretary of the treasury to add what is called a countervailing duty to the tariff on food products in certain circumstances.

The certain circumstance is when the producing country pays a bounty for the production of that foodstuff. The idea is to boost the tariff precisely that same amount, so that the payment of the bounty in the producing country will not give the foreign producer an unfair advantage over the American producer.

Rye Poured In

Last spring prices for rye were high in this country, and some of this Polish rye and also some Polish rye flour began pouring in. Whereupon there were loud cries from the grain trade for the treasury to put the "mandatory" countervailing duty in effect.

Treasury officials consulted with the State department. Also with the Polish embassy. The State department folks did not like it much. It flew in the face of Secretary Hull's well-known opposition to trade barriers. Mr. Hull himself talked about it with the Polish ambassodor.

One lieutenant of Mr. Hull was such a frequent attendant at cocktail parties of the Polish embassy that one of the underlings there humorously asked him if he "had learned to speak Polish yet." He tells this story on himself, so it is not a question of the Poles laughing about their own accomplishments. They are much too shrewd for that.

But the Poles made quite a point in their talk with our State and Treasury folks of the fact that the American farmer was not being hurt by this Polish competition in the slightest degree, whereas the American consumer was being benefited.

Hopkins' Faux Pas

The two people who are most dejected by Harry L. Hopkins' faux pas in attacking Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas, the resentment that the "never put up a thin dime" accusation aroused, and the prompt necessity for a backdown are, in the order named. James A. Farley and Governor Landon.

Farley's chagrin is natural enough. One of the cleverest organizers and politicians of our time, he naturally hates to see his shrewdly planned campaign messed up by bungling, even if he himself is not responsible.

Landon's disappointment is far more subtle, but just as sound politically. It can be explained in four words: It came too soon.

The point is that Landon knows perfectly well he is getting out in front far too quickly. He has been publicly advertised as the probable nominee in too many quarters. For instance, by William Randolph Hearst, who has been giving the Kansas Coolige plenty of publicity both in his newspapers and magazines. Then it was allowed to leak out that President Roosevelt told several friends on his way across the country to San Diego that he figured it would be Landon who would oppose him in 1936.

Which, incidentally, is the answer to the venom and force with which Hopkins struck.

Landon is a comparatively young man, but he has seen enough of politics to know that the old tradition about a candidate's getting too far out in front too soon is not just an old wives' tale. Most of the time it works.

A Bit of History

For example, 1920. When the Republican national committee met in Washington in December, just six months before the convention, it appeared that Leonard Wood was virtually nominated. A glance back at the newspaper files of that month will show that virtually every reporter in Washington, writing for out-of-town papers, and regardless of the slants of his own paper, was impressed by the Wood strength. In fact, if the convention had been convened the day the national committee adjourned, Wood would have been nominated on the first ballot.

All the other candidates "ganged" him. He made some bad mistakes, and when the convention met all but a few enthusiasts knew he had no chance.

Four years later William G. McAdoo was out in front for the Democratic nomination. Alfred E. Smith was a close runner-up. Both were wrecked by an issue which neither had anything to do with starting. It was aimed at McAdoo, but it prevented the nomination of either.

The nominations of Smith, in 1928, and Roosevelt, in 1932, seem exceptions to the rule, but they prove nothing. For Smith was given a nomination known in advance to be absolutely hopeless, and it was given to heal the religious breach made in 1924. Roosevelt got a head start very largely because the South and the Bible Belt were scared to death that Smith would take the nomination again. There are many who think that if Smith had taken himself out of the race, even at the convening of the convention, Roosevelt would never have been named.

Landon was sitting very nicely, indeed, up to the Hopkins blast, with Herbert Hoover and Senator William E. Borah virtually shooting at each other, Col. Franklin Knox harrying the administration, and Landon just getting a lot of good publicity. But the effect of the Hopkins boomerang may easily be to center the fire of friends of Hoover, Borah and Knox, to mention only three, on the Kansas governor!

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Gail turned and looked at her, sleeping. Even in her sleep Ariel's face wore a faintly discontented look, and she sighed impatiently, scornfully—Ariel to the end.

Then it was morning, and there was no more time for dreams. The house was astir in the foggy dawn. Gail appeared in the kitchen, rosy and tousled, just before Phil went.

"You'll be back early, Phil dearest?"

"Oh, Lord, I'll be here by ten!"

"Mrs. Bates wants to know if you'd rather have chicken or lettuce sandwiches, Gail!"

"The boy for the trunks is here, Gail."

"There's someone we forgot, after all!" This was Phil, departing.

"Oh, good heavens, Phil, who? Maybe I could telephone."

"The Formaldehyes!" Phil called over his shoulder.

"Gail—look at the roses."

"Gail—Miss Wells wants to bring her mother upstairs to see you in your wedding dress. She says her mother might have a stroke if she—"

"Listen, all the food goes here, see?—in this closet. Just stack it there, and while we're at church Mrs. Wiggin and Betsey are going to sort everything out."

"Wiff-waff, if you would eat it, and let me wash the bowl!"

"Here are the cakes from Lou. Will you look at the ten-layer cake!"

"Well, she wanted to come downstairs, too, the darling, and see what was going on, and help get her Aunt Gail married."

"Oh, look, fruit punch, two pails of it. Oh, that's marvelous! Look—two pails of it. Two pails of fruit punch, Lily, so that's all right!"

"Give me the baby," Ariel said. She sat holding the soft little drowsy armful.

"You look real cute with a baby, Mis' Murchison!" said Lily's mother.

"Mamma, will you lay off?" Lily demanded patiently. But Ariel only laughed. She was her sweetest, her gentlest self, on this busy morning. She had seemed to keep rather near Gail, and when the clock had raced as far as eleven o'clock, and Gail outwardly calm, inwardly madly agitated, went upstairs for the actual donning of the wedding dress, Ariel went, too, still carrying the sleeping baby.

The bedroom was a scene of mad confusion; Mary Keats was on her knees, finishing the packing, and holding everything up for Gail's approval before she laid it away.

The white silk gown slipped over her head; she was all in white. They who loved her thought they had never seen Gail look so lovely as she did now. Square-shouldered, straight, steady-eyed, she looked at herself in the old dim mirror that had reflected all the moods of her girlhood, and laughed contentedly.

"Somehow I can't feel that I'm getting married!"

The others straggled away, Lily taking her baby. Ariel was alone with her sister. Suddenly she came close, and encircled the sweetness and whiteness and glory that were Gail with her slender arms.

"Just one thing, Gail. I'm going on to Chicago tomorrow to meet Van, and I'm going—I'm going to be different, Gail. I'm going to—to make a go of it, do you understand? I'll be the nicest woman in the country club, I'll have a little girl baby that Van will adore, I'll study French and keep house—honest I will, Gail!"

It was complete surrender. Gail caught her little sister to her in the first real embrace they had known since Ariel had come back. Both their faces were wet.

Then Gail had to wipe her cheeks carefully and powder them again, and go downstairs to join the others, and to walk around the corner and across the tree-shaded street to Saint Mark's.

There were persons on the sidewalk—kindly persons who said, "Good luck, Miss Lawrence!" There were more clustered on the church steps, and she walked between them at her brother's side.

They were all there: old friends, old neighbors, library acquaintances. She felt their love about her like a protecting great wall as she went slowly up the aisle and saw Dick waiting.

The boys had been shepherded into a pew, and Lily, flushed and weary, was sitting there with little Gail restless and hot in her arms; Sam looked oddly grown-up in his new suit, standing beside Dick. And Dick looked—just Dick, big and lean and homely and kind, stooping down a little beside the shorter Sam, watching Gail, catching her eye as she looked at him. And at the sight of him Gail forgot everything else except that after this packed and flurried and extraordinarily emotional morning she was really getting married.

They smiled at each other. Gail's cold right hand caught at his left, and during the little ceremony their fingers were linked.

Afterward, when they were home again and the congratulatory crowds were surging about them, Dick went to the foot of the stairs to meet her as she came down hatted and coated for the trip. Tears and laughter had been so mingled on her wedding day that he thought she looked more like a blue-eyed child than ever: bewildered, grateful, touched, happy.

"Somehow I Can't Feel That I'm Getting Married."

"When we used to play 'round the old ranch together, twenty years ago, we didn't see this coming at the end, did we, Gail?" Dick said, as he caught her hand for the run to the waiting motor car.

"At the end!" she echoed, with a swift, shocked, laughing glance. "Dick, Dick, this is only the beginning! Don't forget that I'm one of the Lucky Lawrences!"

Badger Medicinal Plants Helped Guard Health of the People During a Century

The story of Wisconsin's wild medicinal plants, how the Indians used them more than a century ago, and how they are used today in the modern drug stores of the state, was described recently by R. H. Denniston, assistant professor of botany at the University of Wisconsin.

Nearly 40 Wisconsin plants having medicinal values are listed by Professor Denniston, who points out that the early pioneer settlers, taking their cue from the Indians, exclaimed "Thar's health in them thar plants," and constantly gathered them up to make their own home remedies. Early Wisconsin doctors also gathered the plants, Professor Denniston said, and from them made the medicines with which they hoped to restore health to stricken settlers.

Wisconsin's white settlers not only quickly learned of the medicinal properties of plants known to the Indians, but soon found other plants having medicine value about which the Indians had no knowledge. The Indians were using several plant medicines that were only mythical, and these were quickly discarded by the white people.

Among the principal plant drugs used by the Indian medicine men in early Wisconsin were the root of the skunk cabbage, which was dried and powdered and used as a poultice; the root of spikenard, which was boiled to make a drink used for stomachache; and the root of wild ginger, used as an aid to indigestion. One of the most important of Indian remedies was Butterfly weed, whose powdered root was used for cuts and bruises. The white settlers called it "Pleurisy Root," and used it for bronchial afflictions.

The leaves of another plant, Everlasting, were used in sorcery by the Indians. They were mixed with gall of beaver to make a smudge. This smoke was blown into the nostrils of one who had fainted. The smudge was also used to fumigate the tent where death had occurred, since it was supposed to discourage the ghost of the dead from returning to haunt the survivors.

White pine bark was one of the principal remedies of the Indians. Its bark was steeped to cure chest colds, or was shredded and applied as a poultice to wounds. The root bark of Prickly Ash was used to reduce swellings, Professor Denniston said.

Dutchman's Breeches was one of the love charms of the Menomini tribe of Indians, according to Professor Denniston. Blue cohosh was used in female disorders and to cure hysteria. The root bark of the Alder is very astringent and was used as antiseptic for sores. The settlers used this plant to make a gargle and also as a cure for saddle-gall in horses.

Other medicinal plants used by the Indians were the bark of the red elderberry, used in severe cases of constipation; the alternate-leaved Dogwood plant, used as a pile remedy; the leaves of wintergreen, which were steeped and used for rheumatism; and witch-hazel bark, which was used as medicine to limber up their sore muscles.

A Cheerful Briton
That German Steel
We Go Up to 14 Miles
Danger to Their Souls

Maj. L. B. Angas, British financier, addressing the American Bankers' association, says: "Confidence has returned to the United States, fear has declined, monetary velocity will increase. There will be an immediate boom—first, in consumer goods; second, in plant and machinery; third, in housing industries."

Arthur Brisbane

The British major—may all he says be verified and multiplied by ten—says truly there is any amount of money in America, but it "revolves" too slowly. It will soon speed up and "revolve," or change hands thirty-five times a year.

If Lloyds would insure the accuracy of the major's prediction, a good many would buy policies.

The particularly offensive plan to buy in Germany steel to build the Triborough bridge in New York will probably not go through. It is explained by those concerned that they can buy 1,000,000 pounds of German steel piling for less than half the American price; as a further "reason" it is said "American firms submitted identical bids."

The government's blue eagle was invented to prevent price cutting; but that is not the question, nor is the difference in price or the fact that work is taken from American workers to give it to German workers the most important fact. Buying steel in Germany, helping to finance the German steel industry and Mr. Hitler's program, with American dollars, would seem to indorse Hitler's program of persecution. That is the important fact.

Officers of the American air corps, Capts. A. W. Stevens and Orvil Anderson, rose above the earth into the stratosphere to a height greater than any human being had ever reached, with the possible exception, of course, of Elijah going up in his chariot of fire.

The American officers radioed: "We are at 74,187 feet, trying for 80,000 feet." They did not go higher, but broke all records.

Seventy-four thousand one hundred and eighty-seven feet is more than 14 miles, 2,000 feet higher than the unofficial Russian record of 72,200 feet.

A movie news reel photographer in Ethiopia, Edward Genock, was assaulted when he tried to make moving pictures of warriors at Harar. The Ethiopians beat the camera man, explaining afterward, "We shall lose our souls if we are photographed." That will surprise Hollywood, where the belief is the other way around. Once, it was generally believed, even by real Christians, that if you made a wax miniature figure of a man and stuck pins in it at intervals you would kill the original. Man is a superstitious biped.

Not long ago, when foreign countries were starving, America sent over American corn, and the foreign countries would not eat it. Even Russia refused.

Now, thanks to various devices for persuading our farmers to produce as little as possible, the United States imports more than 20,000,000 bushels of corn in one year.

Shortage of corn means shortage of food for hogs, and that meant expensive "hog meat," pork chops and bacon.

Somebody always has to pay the bill, and now it appears to be those that eat, a decided majority.

At Maryland's Pimlico race track a horse named Axican, winning the $1,000 relay steeplechase, paid $340.40 for a $2 betting ticket, 170 times the amount paid. That news will cause many unfortunate geese to lose several times $340. Nobody ever won at race track gambling in the long run. If that were possible, who would support bookmakers and tracks?

Speaking in Arlington national cemetery, the President warned the country that there is danger of war, urging "adequate defense on land, on sea, and in air."

He knows, as does everybody, that defense, first in the air, and second under the water, is most important.

President Roosevelt announced the early "consummation of a commercial agreement between Canada and the United States," referring to "our two peoples, each independent in themselves, closely knit by ties of blood and common heritage, with standards of life substantially the same."

While eleven lawyers and clients discussed the sale of a window-cleaning business in New York's Brownsville, four young gunmen entered, said, pleasantly, "Reach for the moon, gentlemen," meaning "Stick 'em up." The hands went up; the gunmen walked out with $2,261 in cash.

That was not playing the game. It is customary for lawyers to get money from gunmen, although, doubtless, these were not that type of lawyer.

POULTRY

OVERCROWDING IS BAD FOR POULTRY

Laying Birds Need Vitality to Produce Eggs.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, Extension Poultry Specialist, North Carolina State College. WNU Service.

Overcrowding the laying birds in winter robs them of their vitality and makes them susceptible to disease. Birds should be given adequate housing facilities, with plenty of ventilation, but no drafts. The colds and roup from which many flocks suffer may be traced to inadequate ventilation.

As cold weather arrives it is advisable to check the birds again for parasites, both internal and external. Infected birds should be treated at once.

Birds to be used for breeding purposes should be blood tested for pullorum disease.

It is important to keep accurate records on the flock. Records are essential to the development of a profitable poultry business.

Records help poultrymen ascertain which birds are good producers and which are falling down on the job. They show the cost of operation, and whether the poultryman is making a profit. They help him find weak spots in his system of management.

Body Weight Important; Keeping Tab Suggested

Did your hens ever go into a neck moult and stop laying during the winter right at the time when eggs are highest? Most poultrymen have had this experience and it is usually due to loss in body weight. So it is important that body weight be maintained and a good way to keep tab on it, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer, is to paint a spot on a number of hens, say ten out of every hundred or so, and weigh them frequently. While their weight can be averaged to determine the gain or loss in weight, a good way to do it is to band each hen with a numbered band and keep a record of their respective weights tacked up on the wall of the laying house. If they are losing weight, increase their grain ration if they have not had access to it continually, and if they have, feed them a daily feed of wet, crumbly mash. A feed of succulent greens each day will also stimulate their appetites and cause them to put on weight.

A fat hen is always preferable to a thin one but sometimes, especially with the heavier breeds such as the Rocks and Reds, hens become too fat and one will occasionally fall dead off the roosts at night. When the body weight rises above normal, the grain feed should be cut down.

Care of Pullets

Housing pullets early and being sure that they are comfortable are two of the main requirements for success in winter egg production, says Miss Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist, University farm, St. Paul. This means having the poultry house ready early and having it properly insulated, ventilated and equipped. The essentials in housing are that the house be dry, warm, light, sanitary, and of the right size. After all, these requirements are simple and not necessarily expensive. Many houses that are now very unsatisfactory could be fixed up at practically no cash outlay. New temporary quarters may even be made from baled straw.

Greatest Poultry Farm

Australia claims the greatest poultry farm in the world, that of James and Walter Carter, at Werribee in Victoria. In the season, 240,000 chickens are hatched, and 65,000 eggs are produced daily. Five tons of meat are eaten each day, and other food comprises corn, milk, wheat, bran and pollard. Eighteen acres are under sheds and the wheat silo takes 15,000 bags. The farm sells its eggs for eight months on the local market, and exports for four months in England. Legislation is contemplated in the state of Victoria to provide for organized marketing of primary products, including eggs.

Different Kinds of Lice

There are several different kinds of lice that attack chickens and the method of control is about the same for all of them, says a writer in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. A streak of nicotine sulphate the width of a pencil lead spread on the perches about half an hour before the birds go to roost, followed by a second treatment ten days later will control the lice. If whitewash has been applied to the roosts it should be removed before the nicotine sulphate is used.

Scratch Feed in Litter

Scratch feed in litter is unsanitary and dangerous to the flock from a health standpoint, says the North Carolina State college. The litter in the poultry house, as a general rule, is not changed as often as necessary and thus becomes soiled with the droppings. As this mixture of litter and droppings increase the danger from many poultry diseases also increase. Worm eggs and other internal parasites are picked up with the scratch feed together with disease germs.

HANDS INCREASE

The size of the American woman's hand has increased more than a full glove size in the last 20 years.

The gayety that marks the pre-Thanksgiving season is prevalent in Columbiana.. Gray days—with the chill of winter. Trees shedding their leaves. Skies low and brooding. But nobody seems to care—Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays are "just around the corner.'

It is the season when log fires greet you in the hospitable homes of Columbiana. People drop in for a fire side chat—Young collegiates arrive home for the week end. The new dial system of Mr. Telephone is constantly tin-a-ling linging. The keen anticipation of the traditional charm of a Southern Thanksgiving creates the happy atmosphere.

Clubs will celebrate the gala occasion with appropriate programs—Football fans will follow the trail of the "pig-skin". Dances, gay and festive are being planned. Families will be re-united for the day. Friends long gone from the town will return. So, if you are a bit "down and out"--remember that just around the next corner there is Christmas! What more could you want.

AT CALERA

The Wadesonian Theatre at Calera will offer a special matinee on Will Rogers—"Steamboat Round The Bend" on Friday afternoon at 2:30.

The many friends of Mrs. Claude Fore will be glad to learn that she is convalescing satisfactorily after undergoing a serious operation last week in Birmingham.

Wednesday was the all important lay for hunters. Open season for birds was declared legal. Many Nimrods around Columbiana were oiling their old guns, and making plans to "chuck" the cares of the day in an all day ramble after the quail.

Make your arrangements now to dine at Curlee Cafe on Thanksgiving. A special menu will be offered at this popular eating place, and it will be to your advantage to reserve your table early. Meet your frienls there on Thanksgiving Day—and be thankful you do not have to worry about cooking the traditional TURKEY DINNER. If you are no more of a kitchen mechanic than "Yours Truly" you will be doubly grateful for such a charming place to dine.

"A miracle is something that couldn't happen—but DID"—is a good definition of a lovely gift I should like to acknowledge, which has made Thanksgiving Day a happier occasion to anticipate. Thankful for FRIENDS who have made life worth living. Gratefully do I send my hearts deepest appreciation for the flowers, and the lovely card which accompanied them from a friend oft tried and true.

We acknowledge with deep appreciation a letter from our good friend Dr. Boper of Wilsonville, Alabama, Shelby County's oldest practicing physician, who hahs, by theh way, just chalked up another milestone along his useful pathwap. He is now 77 years of age. His letter is filled with cheerful philosophy, and also with good advice to the younger folk. I wish space permitted our reprinting his beautifully written letter—but since this is impossible, we send to Mrs. W. W. Carter and family the closing paragraph, which we are sure they will appreciate:

"Just at this moment, I hear with sorrow of the unexpected death of my good old friend, W. (Wash) Carter. I cannot help but think and hope that he is better off, than those of us who are left here in this world so ful! of hardships and disappointments. My heart felt sympathy goes out to his loved ones, and my humble prayer is that God will give to each one of them sufficient grace to comfort and keep them, and let them remember that "He doeth all things for the best." "The good news just reaches me that the North Alabama Methodist Conference has sent back to us our beloved Dr. G. F. Cooper as Presiding Elder, and the Rev. Mitchell as our truly belovel pastor for another year. Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

The above excerpts from the letter written on November 11, 1935, closed the well written pages of this personal missive which we shall always keep. Especially are we grateful to Dr. Boyer for his loyalty and encouraging remarks about the DEMOCRAT, which he states he enjoys reading each week.

Mrs. Myra Hamner Miles and Miss Nell Daviston were visitors in Birmingham on Saturday.

The Yellow Front is offering an exceptional lot of pre-Thanksgivving bargains thru Saturday, November 23. A visit to this friendly and dependable store will repay you.

Mims Roberts, who holds a responsible position with the Naitonal Park Service Department offices, now stationed in Birmingham, spent the week end in Columbiana with his wife, Mrs. Fay Benton Roberts.

Eddie Watson, Strand Theatre Manager of Montevallo, was a welcomed visitor in the Democrat office last week.

A letter from Jesse Hughs, who is studying for the ministry in New Orleans, states the DEMOCRAT is his "message from home" each week, and when it fails to arrive he is—"homesick." It won't be our fault Jesse, if we fail to come thru on time --we shall check this delinquency and see what the trouble is. The copies you state you missed have been forwarded to you—presto! And our good wishes for your continued success and happiness follow each issue of the paper. Thanks for your interesting letter.

The Four Mile P.-T. A. held its third meeting of the year last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Hendrix gave an interesting talk on P.-T. A. Work, after which a brief business meeting was held.

Plans were made for a Parent's Night, in the School auditorium next Friday night, November 22. All patrons of the school are urged to attend.

L. B. Riddle, Jr., who is attending the Georgia Military Academy in Atlanta, spent the week end with his parents, Judge and Mrs. L. B. Riddle.

Dr. and Mrs. Nickson are receiving congratulations from their many friends upon th earrival of a son last week. Mrs. Nickson and "Junior" are reported "doing fine."

Both the Doctor and the "Mrs." we understand, are delighted over the new addition to the family, but we also hear that Little "Miss Carolyn", 18 months old daughter, does not like the masculine encroachment on her territory. She has probably turned up her tiny nose, and in her usual disdainful way, told Junior where to "get off." She has more personality to the square inch for her size than any little Miss we have ever seen. We are eagerly awaiting her arrival in Columbiana, to hear what she has to say about the "blessed event."

"DUDES" WHO WASH BUT ONCE A YEAR REALITY IN KOREA

"One yard of eggs, please!" That's what the housewife says to her grocer in the Japanese colony of Korea. Eggs are here sold by the string, like sausages; they are tied together with long wisps of straw. One orders them to any length required. They cost less than a penny a dozen!

Korea is a land of unceasing surprises for the European. In a number of its villages the men wash only once a year; many are coal-mining villages, too! But these natives would be most indignant if one were to suggest that they were not well turned out, for they take great pride in their appearance.

The miner will come up from the depths covered in coal dust, then go home and change into spotlessly clean, beautifully pressed garments. He will spend a full hour "dolling himself up" before venturing out for the evening. But never, on 364 days of the year, will he dream of washing! The day when he does so is a national holiday.

There are many cows in Korea, but until the Japanese took over control of the land the people treated them entirely as pack animals. Nobody had any idea that they could be milked!

A Korean wedding is a very elaborate affair. It lasts for three days, throughout which the bride has to sit motionless on a throne, with her eyes demurely lowered, balancing an enormous headdress which weighs more than 20 pounds. Her husband is away from her most of this time; he ascends to a secluded spot in the mountains, and prays for hours on end that the two of them may be blessed with a large family.—London Answers.

Evening Silhouette Goes Classic

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AS THE exquisite and lovely evening gowns which our creators of fashion have designed for the coming winter social season, go on parade, one is forcibly reminded of art and sculpture, of the paintings of old masters or of figures in classic drapes and pleats sculptured in marble or colorfully frescoing ancient palaces and cathedrals of ancient Rome.

It is in these new fashions for formal occasion which are to grace opera and ballroom and smart functions galore, as if Italian saints were descending from old-master paintings, in flowing robes of rich velvets that are girdled and jeweled in dazzling splendor. Then again it would seem as if Greek goddesses were stepping down from their marble pedestals in garments that are draped and pleated along sculpturesque lines of grace and beauty. And again oriental princesses clad in harem-skirted costumes with softly draped and richly be-jeweled blouses seem to have come to life in array of gorgeous splendor. Verily "art in dress" holds sway this season.

The soft crepes, the supple superb velvets, the tissue-like, glamorous gold and silver cloths, the diaphanous chiffons and dainty silk sheers, all lend themselves beguilingly to the present movement in costume design which calls for floating scarfs, huge wing sleeves, and fluttering side pleatings that go all the way around the skirt or are captured in cascades of exceeding grace.

At all times in these classic gowns the feeling of simplicity is maintained, even though a resplendent note be sounded in richly jeweled girdles or golden sandals or sumptuous costume jewelry. See the group of evening gowns that are herewith illustrated and be convinced that the very loveliest after-dark fashions are playing up sophisticated yet classic simplicity to the nth degree of perfection.

The eye-impelling gown to the left which so unmistakably bespeaks inspiration of the Italian rennaissance is a Jeanne Lanvin creation. This glamorous robe is of magenta crepe, its rich beautiful tone matching up to the dark vibrant coloring in old master paintings. It is full, falling in generous folds starting from massed shirrings. The wide girdle and armlets are of cutout gold kid. The rich magenta coloring of this dress speaks eloquently of the present color trend, which stresses the rarely beautiful dark reds and purples and green that have come down to us through the ages via Italian art.

Hammered silver cloth fashions the adorable gown centered in the group. The glittering fabric falls with exquisite grace from the gathered waistline and is draped in a harem hemline. The wide belt worked in multi-colored jewels is a climaxing touch of artistry. Silver sandals are worn. The graceful wrap which this silver-gowned lady has in her hand is of royal blue velvet. It is fashioned with a surplice that ties at the back.

To the right in the picture, sculpture-like draping distinguishes a Grecian gown of classic beauty and simplicity. Sheer gray silk that looks like wool is edged with embroidered bands worked in coral, gold and turquoise beads.

Style notes which tune in to the classic trend tell of low-heeled Grecian sandals such as the smart Parisienne takes delight in wearing. The sari scarf is another item of interest. It is of tissue metal-shot weaves and sometimes it is richly embroidered with sparkling sequins.

METAL CLOTH

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Glittering silk lame makes this long-sleeved dinner gown. It is typical of the trend toward elegant fabric that is fashioned with utmost simplicity. The influence of the Far East is traced in the tall turban also fashioned of silk lame and the long-streamered sash in a vivid hue, that falls in a cluster of fine side pleats to the hemline of the skirt. Note the new low-heeled sandals.

FUR BLOUSE IS NEW WRINKLE IN STYLE

The fur blouse is a new wrinkle in the fashion picture.

They've used fur for everything else this season, from coat sleeves to hats, and now the fur blouse emerges as a swish accessory for the velvet cocktail suit.

It's done in white galyak, with a black velvet ascot and belt. The blouse is a brief peplum style, with short sleeves and a yoke.

Matching it is a white galyak topcoat, with breast pockets and a belt, and a little Cossack turban of matching fur.

Nothing could be more effective for those in-between occasions when you can't wear formal evening clothes, but still want a slightly dressy costume.

The fur vest, of black galyak, also is seen with some of the season's newest suits. It's effective with suits in the new renaissance tones of wine and green, with matching black accessories.

And if you want to do the thing up brown, you may have a matching muff of galyak.

Small fur ascots, styled to match the fur turbans and muffs of the season, are seen about town.

Elaborate Trimmings Now Feature Shoes for Evening

The trend in evening shoes is toward elaborate effects, according to a recent report from Paris. They not only show original shapes and graceful straps, inspired by Greek sandals, but are made of unusual materials.

One house is showing Salome shoes in a glass-like acetate fabric from Colcombet.

Velvets Hold Sway

For dresses, coats, suits and hats, noncrushable velvets will hold sway in all forms.

Lesson for November 24

THE MESSSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:2-8; 2:3, 9; Zechariah 4:6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalm 122:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New House for God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Building a House of Worship.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Build Churches.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Building Adequate Churches.

After the returned captives had settled down in the towns surrounding Jerusalem, the people were called together for the purpose of establishing the worship of the Lord God. This movement was led by Joshua the priest and Zerubbabel the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifices might be offered at once to God.

I. The Laying of the Foundation of the New Temple (Ezra 3:8-13).

This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with impressive ceremonies.

1. The priests in their official apparel (v. 10). These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). Trumpets were used in calling the people together.

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). This was according to the arrangements made by David (I Chron. 15).

4. They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively.

5. Mingled weeping and singing (vv. 12, 13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent temple of Solomon wept when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad because of the favor of God which had brought them back.

II. The Building of the Temple Hindered (Ezra 4).

The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people, the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive. The three perils which delayed the building of the temple for about fourteen years reveal the persistent methods which the enemies of God use to hinder the building program of God's people in every age.

1. An unintelligent pessimism (3:12). Because things were not as promising as they should be, some were not disposed to go forward with a constructive program and even hindered those who possessed a hopeful outlook. Under the circumstances, a glorious beginning had been made which had promise of great things in the future.

2. Worldly compromise (4:2, 3). The adversaries said, "Let us build with you: for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method. The help of the unregenerate in forwarding the Lord's work should not be accepted by the Lord's people.

3. Open opposition by the world (4:4-24). When refused a part in the work, open opposition was resorted to.

III. Assurance of the Completion of the Second Temple (Zech. 4:6-10).

By means of the golden candlestick is represented the restoration of the Jewish nation and the fulfillment of its divine purpose. It was to be a light in the world. There were insuperable difficulties in the way of accomplishing their restoration, represented by the great mountain, but assurance was given that God by his Holy Spirit could easily accomplish their restoration. The mountain would be displaced by a plain. The two olive trees represent Zerubbabel and Joshua. The Holy Spirit was to accomplish this work through them.

IV. The Temple Finished (Ezra 6:13-15).

Through the ministry of the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 5:1; Hag. 1, 2), the people were encouraged to resume the work of the building of the temple. When the temple was finished, they solemnly dedicated it to God (Ezra 6:16-22).

V. The Blessedness of Dwelling in God's House (Ps. 84:1-4).

1. The longing of the soul for God's house (vv. 1, 2).

2. The sparrow and swallow find protection in the sacred precincts of God's house (v. 3).

3. At home in God's house (v. 4). Those who have a heart for God find their chief delight in dwelling in his house.

The Future

Don't estimate your future by the little troubles that comfort you now. The black clouds which shut out your sun today will be gone tomorrow. Learn to look at life at long range and put the right value on things in general.

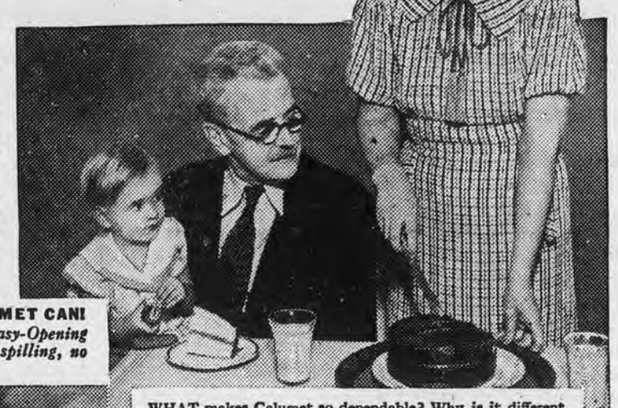
Religion

Some men want to have religion like a dark lantern, and carry it in their pocket, where nobody but themselves can get any good from it.—Henry Ward Beecher.

CHILDREN'S FEAR

Sometimes a child will develop a phobia or fear indirectly. A case in point was that of a child who feared rabbits, with which it had played for years, after being startled during such play by the beating of a gong. Another case was that of a boy who grew to manhood with an intense fear of confined spaces because, when very young, he had been frightened by a dog in a narrow passage.—Collier's Weekly.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold



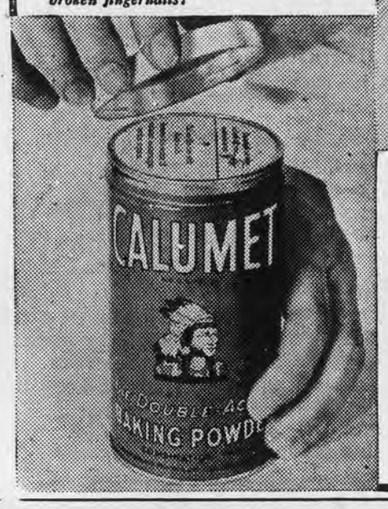
Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

"Calumet sure gives you your money's worth, with that Big New 10¢ Can!"

SAYS MRS. W. W. HICKEY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.



"THERE'S a lot of good baking in that 10c can of Calumet," observes Mrs. Hickey. "It's worth more than a dime any day!

"Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25c now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!"

Grandfather Rommel, who was a baker for 40 years, says: "Calumet takes the guesswork out of the job nowadays."

LOOK AT THE NEW CALUMET CAN! A simple twist . . . and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHAT makes Calumet so dependable? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat. This Double-Action produces perfect leavening.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history...The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25c! And ask to see the new 10c can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods.

A BULL'S EYE FOR DAD

"WHY was coffee bad for you, Dad? . . . I thought it was bad just for us kids!"

"Oh, no! Many grown-ups, too, find that the caffein in coffee upsets their nerves, causes indigestion or keeps them awake nights!"

If you are bothered by headaches, or indigestion, or can't sleep soundly . . . try Postum for 30 days. It contains no caffein. It is simply whole wheat and bran, roasted and slightly sweetened. It's easy to make . . . costs less than half a cent a cup. It's delicious, too . . . and may prove a real help. A product of General Foods.

"COME INTO MY PARLOR"
. . . said the Spider

"COME into my parlor," said the Spider to the Fly, making attractive offers the while. The Fly, recalling previous narrow escapes, replied, "You entice me greatly, Sir Spider, but I fear you would put me in bondage."

Whereupon the Spider offered the Fly a contract in which would be included all the promises of a rosy future and freedom from care.

"Very pretty, very pretty," said the Fly, "but spiders have a reputation of being careless with their promises to flies. I think I'll take my chances rather than put myself under the domination of a Spider."

Rosy promises and dazzling inducements are offered by politically inspired promoters of public power enterprises. Assuming the honesty and sincerity of some public power enthusiasts, can they give any guarantee that their political successors in office will have similar high ideals?

After they gain their end of gobbling up the light and power business, what is to prevent officials in charge of public power plants from increasing rates, or taxes, or both? (Taxes already show a heavy increase.)

Alabama Power Company, under regulation by public bodies, has a record of steadily reducing its rates. The average rate per kilowatt hour paid by its customers for all residential uses has declined from 7.9c in September, 1926, to 3.6c in September, 1935.

During the same 9-year period the taxes paid by the company to federal, state, county and municipal governments have increased from 6.4c to 14.4c per dollar of total money taken in.

While taxes have gone UP 180%, average rates for electricity in the home have gone DOWN 54.4%.

You can readily see that the auto killed 143,679 more Americans in 15 years than War killed in 159 years. Last year the automobile took 36,000 lives, permanently disabled 105,000 and temporarily disabled 1,150,000.

Gov. Bibb Graves has announced that December 1st, 1936, will be the mobilization date for the new highway patrol, to be financed thru the sale of automobile driver's licenses.

The State has contracted for 25 automobiles, 40 motorcycles and 90 uniforms for the patrol which will be headed by Walter K. McAdory.

A. H. Collins, Alabama commissioner of public welfare, said Monday he expected definitely to begin dispensing old age pensions January 1st, but expressed the opinion not more than 12,000 to 15,000 of the state's 105,000 persons over 65 years of age would be eligible for payments "more likely to appriximate $15 than $30 a month."

Cotton Consumption Highest Since 1929

Auburn, Ala.,—World mill consumption of all cotton during the year which ended July 31 this year was the largest since 1928-29, reports the United States Department of Agriculture in its 1936 farm outlook.

Current conditions indicate that world consumption of American cot ton this season will probably increase although consumption might be materially affected by further war developments, the report says.

Exports of American cotton show a gain of 119,000 running bales in October, 1935, over the same month in 1934 with the outlook that exports should be somewhat greater for this season than last, says the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Exports in October, 1934, were 592,000 bales and in 1935, 711,000 bales.

CROTALARIA SHOULD BE TURNED DURING WINTER MONTHS

Auburn, Ala.,—To get the greatest good from a crop of crotalaria, farmers should turn the crop in December or early January.

This is advised by Dean M. J. Funchess, director of the Alabama Experiment Station, who says that "if plowing is delayed until spring poor results from the crop following the crotalaria are sometimes obtained.'

The plants should be cut with a stalk cutter when they are thoroughly dry, he advises. "This makes the heavy growth easily turned under."

In advising farmers to save their cotalaria seed, J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist, says that "the seed may be stripped by hand or the plant may be cut and the seed thrashed or flailed out."

Census report shows that there were 5,584 bales of cotton ginned in Shelby County from the crop of 1935 prior to November 14 as compared with 4,977 bales ginned to November 14, crop of 1934.

Heart Drifts

SOME ONE LIKE YOU

"Some one like you makes the heart seem the lighter,
Some one like you makes the day's work worth while,
Some one like you makes the sun shine the brighter,
Some one like you makes a sigh half a smile.
Life is an odd pattern of briars and roses,
Clouds sometimes darken, or sun shining through,
Then the cloud drifts and the sunlight discloses
Near to me, dear to me, some one like you.

"Some one like you, who stands, steadfastly near me,
Knows me, and likes me, for just what I am;
Some one like you, wh oknows just how to cheer me,
Some one who's real, without pretense or sham.
Some one whose fellowship isn't a fetter
Binding my freedom—who's loyal all through,
Some one who's life in this world makes it better—
Blest t ome, best to me: some one like you.

"Never a trouble, but you help me bear it,
Just by the fellowship you have with me;
Never a joy but I want you to share it—
How far you are, or wherever you be.
Never a burden but you make it lighter
Just by your smile that I see creeping through,
Never a glad hour but you make it brighter—
Heart of me, part of me, some one like you.

"How come the thoughts of you joyously welling
Up like the waters of springs bubbling clear;
What a new joy every time in the telling,
Something I always want you to hear.
Roses of June, or snows of December
Gray be the skies, or like azure the blue,
Far be the day that I may not remember,
Near to me, dear to me, some one like you."

—JAMES W. FOLEY.

Dear Lord, I do not ask for gold,
For shelter from the rain and cold,
For wool and bread, for health and skill—
Just give me strength to do Thy will.

Dear Lord, I do not ask for years
Untouched by grief and burning tears
For joys that folks so rarely find—
Just give me wisdom to be kind.

—Kramer.

I DID NOT THINK

I did not think when you came yesyesterday
And we were talking in our usual way,
Out in the garden where the larkspur's blue
Is misted by the drifts of meadow.... rue,
Of loving words I had long meant to say.

I noticed how your hair was turning gray—
How tired your eyes; and when you went away,
I le tyou walk; I might have driven you—
I did not think!

And as we passed a long white jasmine spray,
You stooped to breathe its fragrance where it lay
Against the wall, all glistening with dew.
I let you go without that flower, too-
But laid it in your cold, dead hand today.
I did not think!

—Barney.

LOVE OF YOU

I thought if I locked up the love
You left behind you, dear,
In some safe place removed from touch,
Why, then, some distant year

When it was merely something sweet
Like clover in a book
Pressed dry by time—it wouldn't hurt
At all the day I took

It out to reminisce with me
About your eyes, your smile.
There'd be no pain to look at you
In retrospect awhile.

But love won't be confined, dear one,
At least not love of you—
It sings and beats and weeps its way
Through anything I do!

My teacher wants us to come back and tell theh other children about it—those that could not go.

I hope I can make a good letter so it will get in the Democrat.

I am going to the circus tomorrow afternoon. What I like best at the circus is the elephant standing on his head. When we come back, we are going to tell the children about it.

What I like to play best is Dodge Ball. The way you play it, is some people throw the ball and try to hit some one.

Montgomery, Ala.,—Records for the past ten years show that cotton prices average as high or higher during the harvest season as any season of the year, reports F. W. Gist, state and federal agricultural statistician.

"The average price from August to December, inclusive, during the past 10 years was 13.25 cents per pound while the average price from January to July, inclusive, was 12.57 cents per pound,' he says.

"It will be seen therefore that the farmer who sold his cotton during the harvest season from August to November, inclusive, would have received the highest price obtainable during the 10 years, an average of about $3.40 per bale over the average price from January to July," Gist comments.

EXPORT INCREASE EXPECTED FROM FARM AGREEMENT

Auburn, Ala.,—Agricultural exports from the United States to Canada will increase in consequence of the recent Canadian trade agreement, predicts the United States Department of Agriculture. "In addition the domestic market for farm products should expand on account of increased domestic payrolls,' says the department.

After pointing out that exports to Canada declined from $50,000,000 to $15,000,000 during the past five years Secretary Wallace expresses the opinion that the new agreement will benefit "the whole of agriculture."

"The United States has always had a greater volume of trade with Canada than with any other country except the United Kingdom," Mr. Wallace pointed out. "This extremely profitable mutual relationship, amounting on the average to over a billion dollars a year, was rudely boken by our Tariff Act of 1930 and by the retaliatory Canadian tariff shortly thereafter. It is my opinion that the new trade agreement with Canada is beneficial to all people of the United States, and especially to farmers."

"There are a few farm groups which will fear they are being hurt by the new agreement, but actually in those cases the tariff reductions are moderate and in addition there are quota restrictions of such a nature that imports from Canada cannot affect the American price structure by more than 1 percent. This small effect in my judgment, will as a rule be more than offset by the increased payrolls of industries established along the northern border and in the Northeastern States. These increased payrolls will stimulate the demand in the United States for most of the farm products in which there has been a slight reduction in duty. I am thoroughly convinced that the Canadian treaty will prove of benefit to the whole of American agriculture, and that no particular branch of farming will be seriously, if at all, disadvantaged."

SHARING THE WEALTH
(An Editorial)

The trouble with most of us is that we know so many things that aren't so. Just now a great many people are saying, and a lot of the rest are believing, that if we could only redistribute wealth in some way everybody's troubles would be over. But when a careful study was made recently of the incomes above $5,000 a year, it was shown that if all of the surplus of every individual income above that figure were to be distributed among the forty million breadwinners of the nation, it would amount to less that $100 a year for each family.

Most of us have been letting ourselves be "sold" on the idea that one of the causes of our economic trouble is that we produce more goods than we can consume. But when we look at the actual figures it would seem as if the truth were the other way about. We are not producing, and never have produced, enough goods to go around.

The better distribution of wealth has got to come about by producing more wealth to distribute. The trouble with most of us is that we don't recognize the distinction between wealth and money. Wealth consists only of commodities produced by the application of labor to the land and to raw materials. Money is only a convenient medium for the transmission of wealth from one person to another.

Japan Suddenly Squelches North China Autonomy Scheme—Italy Struggles Against Economic Sanctions—President Talks to Mayors About Taxes.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

JAPAN suddenly learned that the autonomy movement in the northern provinces of China, fostered by the Japanese army commanders, was likely to prejudice her case in the naval conference soon to open in London. Therefore the army high command in Tokyo told its subordinates on the continent to "lay off," and the ambitious schemes of Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara came to naught, at least for the present. That plotter, who had become known as "the Lawrence of China," quietly departed from Peiping and his early return was not expected.

Kenji Doihara

Thus, for the first time in recent years, the Japanese militarists have been checked, by the Tokyo government, which informed them that the mission of the Japanese army in Manchukuo did not include intriguing for separation of the Chinese provinces and that it would not be permitted to pass south of the great wall without an imperial order.

Instead of the autonomy coup, the Nanking government was told by the Japanese authorities in China that it must institute reforms in the northern provinces. Akira Ariyoshi, Japanese ambassador, had a long conference with Dictator Chiang Kai-shek in Nanking, and told the press he had received assurance that the Chinese government was adequately prepared to cope with the situation in north China. Ariyoshi said he had also received assurance that Nanking desired to continue friendly relations with Japan.

Neutral observers in China are not convinced that the autonomy movement will not be revived at the first opportunity.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has gone to Warm Springs, Ga., for his annual visit, and for three weeks will divide his time among rest, politics and work. He was to deliver one speech at Atlanta; and after his return to Washington he will journey to Chicago to deliver an address on December 9 which probably will be an argument for a permanent AAA.

Following his Chicago speech, President Roosevelt will go to South Bend, Ind., to accept an honorary degree and make a brief address at the University of Notre Dame. The acceptance of this invitation was considered an adroit political move because of his recent refusal to take any action concerning the Catholic persecutions in Mexico.

SOMETHING new under the sun is now being tried out—an economic war to put a stop to a military war. Fifty-two nations are united in the imposition of sanctions against Italy, which became an outlaw nation on November 18 by decree of the League of Nations. Four league nations, all unimportant, refused to participate. They are Austria, Hungary, Albania and Paraguay. Indirect support is given the league by two non-member nations, the United States and Germany. Nearly all the world's chief ports are closed to Italian goods, and exports to Italy of arms, war materials and a long list of key products has stopped. Loans and credits for the Italian government, public bodies, corporations and individuals are forbidden.

Gen. Badoglio

Should this momentous action succeed, it would seem that the end of Benito Mussolini and the Fascist regime in Italy is in sight. Should it fail, the League of Nations fails, the British communications in the Mediterranean would be threatened, and the peace of the world would be menaced.

Standing steadfast against the sanctions, Premier Mussolini proclaimed the day on which they were established "a day of ignominy and iniquity," as had been declared by the Fascist grand council. The day was made a holiday, flags flew from all buildings and there were numerous angry demonstrations against the member nations of the league. The frontiers of Italy and its ports were closed to goods of those nations except for certain necessities. Restrictions of food, fuel and light were put in force.

It was announced in Rome that 100,000 of the recently mobilized soldiers would be given a furlough of three months to aid industrial and agricultural production.

There were new negotiations for peace, fostered by the British and French, and the Italian authorities were deeply interested but said the war would not stop until Italy had possession of a large strip of Ethiopia.

As for the Ethiopian war itself, Mussolini announced an important change in commanders. Gen. Emilio de Bono was recalled with warm praise for having achieved his mission "under extremely difficult circumstances" and was to be elevated to the rank of marshal. Gen. Pietro Badoglio, chief of staff, was appointed to succeed De Bono as commander in chief of the invading armies.

Emperor Haile Selassie made two airplane trips to the fighting fronts visiting Harar and Diredawa and inspecting his troops in the South. The government at Addis Ababa denied Italian claims that 2,000 Ethiopians had been killed in a terrific battle with Italian fliers. The communique said: "Information from the commander of troops in the region of Makale states the recent intensive bombardment of their positions by ten Italian planes caused thirty deaths and slightly wounded fifty, instead of the 2,000 killed as mentioned in the press communique from Asmara."

POPE PIUS surprised the world by naming twenty new cardinals, who will be installed at a secret consistory December 16 and a public one December 19. In the group are fifteen Italians, two Frenchmen, one Argentine, one Spaniard and one Czechoslovakian. With these additions the sacred college will have sixty-nine members, the largest number in the history of the church and only one short of the full complement. The sacred college will now be composed of thirty-nine Italians and thirty non-Italians.

The pope also named the Most Rev. Joseph C. Plagens, recently auxiliary bishop of Detroit, as bishop of the diocese of Marquette—Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, auxiliary bishop of Philadelphia, as bishop of the Savannah diocese.

WHEN a hundred mayors, assembled in Washington to discuss the work relief program, called on the President, he talked chiefly about taxes, which he said "have grown up like Topsy in this country." He then announced that he planned to call a conference of city and state officials late in the winter for the purpose of studying the whole system of taxation which, he said, should be simplified.

Mayor La Guardia

Concerning the matter of continuance of relief, Mr. Roosevelt told the mayors:

"It is a question that you have to combat. My answer, and I am sure yours will be the same for city governments, is that we do not propose to let people starve. Some people will be surprised to find that the gigantic works program will be substantially carried out by the end of November, just as it was planned last spring."

The mayors elected F. H. La Guardia of New York president of their annual conference and Edward J. Kelly of Chicago vice president, a position usually leading to the presidency the following year. La Guardia succeeds Daniel W. Hoan of Milwaukee.

The mayors recommended that the social security act be amended to include old age pensions for municipal employees and urged co-operation by cities with the Department of Justice for the suppression of crime.

CHAIRMAN HENRY P. FLETCHER of the Republican national committee issued a call for a meeting of the committee in Washington on December 16 to fix the time and place of the party's national convention of 1936 and to consider the apportionment of delegates. It was reported that Chicago was in the lead among the cities seeking the convention.

Mr. Fletcher also announced the appointment of a committee of sixteen prominent industrialists and lawyers to raise a big campaign fund. William B. Bell of New York, president of the American Cyanamid company, will be chairman of the committee, and Charles B. Goodspeed, assstant treasurer of the Republican national committee, Chicago lawyer, will be vice chairman. Many of the members have never before participated actively in national politics.

DAVID A. REED, former senator from Pennsylvania, heretofore considered a possibility for the Republican Presidential nomination, has eliminated himself from the competition, explaining that he lacks "political sex appeal." What that is he couldn't exactly define, but he said: "Roosevelt has it. But I discovered last year that I didn't. I'm not a candidate for any public office."

JESSE H. JONES, chairman of the RFC, let it be known that the New York Central railroad has agreed to repay $15,600,000 which it borrowed from the corporation. The loan, which matures December 1, will be repaid out of the road's $25,000,000 cash balance. The repayment will be the largest ever received by the RFC from a railroad. In return the RFC agreed to extend until July 1, 1941, the remaining $11,899,000 which the New York Central owes to it.

ANOTHER prominent figure of the World war passed with the death of Earl Jellicoe, who commanded the united British fleet in the great battle of Jutland and was severely criticized because he did not succeed in completely defeating the German fleet. Jellicoe, who entered the navy as a cadet at thirteen years of age, had a colorful career on British ships and in administrative positions throughout the world until at the end of four years as governor general of New Zealand in 1924 he practically retired from official public life.

PLANS to establish a three hundredth anniversary fund at Harvard university this year, for the awarding of large annual prize scholarships to boys in each state of the Union, were announced by President James B. Conant in a letter sent to 65,000 Harvard alumni. The fund will also be used for the creation of pioneering professorships of an entirely new type.

AMERICAN business generally is pleased with the terms of the new trade treaty with Canada, made public simultaneously in Washington and Ottawa. Farmers and the lumber men of the northwest will not like it. High tariff advocates in congress are sure to attack the pact, but its terms cannot be affected for three years, even were congress to repeal the reciprocal trade act under which President Roosevelt acted in negotiating the agreement. It is considered a trade agreement rather than a formal treaty, and goes into effect January 1 next.

Government officials, foreseeing adverse reaction in some quarters because of some of the sliced American duties, sought to show the pact would lead to greatly increased trade and employment which would benefit the country.

An analysis of the pact shows that the United States grants concessions to Canada on 79 major commodities, including:

Tariff slash on four-year-old whisky from $1 to 50 cents per fifth of a gallon.

Reductions in duties on specified quotas of beef cattle (from 3 to 2 cents per pound on animals over 700 pounds); dairy cows (2½ to 1½ cents); cream (56.6 cents to 35 cents per gallon); white or Irish seed potatoes (75 to 45 cents per 100 pounds); Douglas fir and western hemlock (50 per cent).

Reduced duties on lumber and timber of other kinds; cheddar cheese, turnips, apples, hay, maple sugar, live poultry, horses, halibut and some other fish; some leathers and ferro-manganese.

A pledge to keep on the free list Canadian pulpwood, newsprint, unmanufactured wood, shingles, lath, lobsters, certain furs, crude asbestos, artificial abrasives and fertilizers.

A promise to maintain the present 10 per cent duty on feedstuffs for animals.

On the part of Canada the duties are cut on 180 commodities, some of the leading concessions being: Reductions on wheat (from 30 to 12 cents a bushel); off-season fresh vegetables (50 per cent); vegetables imported in marketing season (35 per cent); most classes of farm machinery (50 per cent); industrial machinery (35 to 25 per cent); mining and textile machinery; radios (30 to 25 per cent); electric refrigerators; tinplate manufactures; dressed lumber; building materials; motor vehicles; cotton fabrics, furs, chemicals, silk fabrics, cotton manufactures, electrical apparatus.

Also rate cuts on oranges, grapefruit, nuts, iron and steel manufactures.

Place magazines and potatoes on the free list.

A pledge to grant the United States, on 767 articles, the lowest rates paid by any non-British country.

A pledge to liberalize the system of establishing arbitrary valuations on American products.

A promise to keep raw cotton on the free list and to put tractors on that list.

PRIME MINISTER STANLEY BALDWIN and his Conservative government party won an impressive victory in the British parliamentary elections, although the Laborites succeeded in decreasing the Conservative majority in the house by about 60 seats. Baldwin himself was unopposed for re-election, but Ramsay MacDonald, lord president of the council and former prime minister, was badly defeated, as was his son, Malcolm, who has been minister of colonies. The elder MacDonald left the Labor party to form the national government, and the Laborites had been after his scalp ever since. The government party will have a majority of about 250 in the next house of commons.

NO CANON of ethics was violated by the lawyers' committee of the American Liberty league when it offered to defend gratis the constitutional rights of any citizen unable to pay fees for such defense. Moreover, the lawyers' committee is justified in preparing and disseminating "opinions upon legislation with particular reference to the constitutionality of such legislation."

Such is the opinion of the American Bar association's committee on professional ethics and grievances, given in response to a complaint made by C. N. Davie of Atlanta, Ga. The bar committee emphasized that it expressed "no opinion as to the soundness of the conclusions reached by the national lawyers' committee."

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—To observe strict neutrality—but not to benefit by it—is the rather paradoxical attitude in the United States Department of Commerce. This applies not only to trade with Italy— trade with Ethiopia was never important—but to trade in other parts of the world. The thought, apparently, is not to take too much advantage of Italy's occupation with her war by sneaking away a part of her international trade!

The whole thing seems rather nebulous, though also very high-minded. But apparently it does not apply to South America. Perhaps because Washington has always regarded southern American trade as belonging to this country—not by divine right, nor even by geography, but perhaps because of some expected gratitude for the Monroe Doctrine. Though as a matter of fact that doctrine has been resented rather than appreciated by our Latin-American friends for many years now. In fact, it began to cool shortly after Washington forced France to withdraw its support from Maximilian, not long after the American Civil war.

So the best minds interested in furthering our international trade began several weeks ago to think about the possibilities in South America, now that Italy is very busy in Africa. In fact, it was decided to have a new head of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, and that this new head should be some one capable of taking advantage of this golden opportunity in South America.

As this is written the name of this new "sales manager" for Uncle Sam has not been announced, but it has already been discovered by our consuls from Panama down to Cape Horn that Great Britain apparently had the same idea. Whether it occurred to the best minds in Downing street before our Brain Trusters thought of it, or whether, having thought of it, the British merely went into action without waiting for a lot of conferences and on the selection of a suitable person to direct it, is not only not disclosed—it is not known. But the fact is sadly admitted, in whispers, that the British beat us to it. And the comment is sadly added—"as usual."

Not "Cricket"

It is rather interesting that the official who disclosed this situation to the writer, in discussing what he thought this country ought to do in observing the amenities, long before he mentioned the British, said that to expand our trade all over the world at the expense of the Italian international trade would not be "cricket." Which happens to be a distinctly British expression, though widely used here.

Just why it would not be "cricket" to take advantage of Italy's preoccupation in some parts of the world, and not in others, is not clear. In the Department of Commerce there is a certain theory about it. This is to the general effect that Latin-American trade belongs naturally to the United States, and that therefore anything we can do to cement it is justifiable at all times, whether the nations from which we take it are engaged in a war or not, and whether we approve of that war or not.

It may be that in London the exporters and the government figure the same way, on the theory that on account of Sir Francis Drake, or maybe Sir Henry Morgan, Latin-American trade naturally belongs to Britain, and hence any means of taking it away from some other nation is justified.

There is a widespread suspicion, however, that "cricket" does not interfere with Britain's commandeering all of Italy's foreign trade that she can get her hands on. Even during the World war, some State department underlings recall, "business as usual"—which means get all you can—was quite a motto in the tight little island.

Canadian Treaty

On the whole the administration expects to benefit enormously, at the next election, by the effects of the Canadian reciprocity treaty. Its political ramifications are legion, but, now that time has been allowed for estimating its economic consequences, let's take a look at the political aspects, which were very much in mind at the White House, if not at the State department, while the problems were being weighed.

The worst liability to the administration is the dairy section, which will let a much larger volume of Canadian milk, cream, butter and cheese into this country, and hence will irritate the dairy farmers of New England, New York, Wisconsin and Minnesota, particularly, and all other dairy farmers in general.

Incidentally it was rather odd that there was such a rush to sign the treaty that the ceremonies almost synchronized with those attendant upon the delivery at the White House of the 1,250-pound Wisconsin cheese, drawn by "Dunder and Blitzen" and the rest in a Santa Claus sleigh. Which, by the way, had been intended as a high light of National Cheese week.

The dairy concessions to Canada are much worse politically than the lumber section, although actually opponents of the lumber section were more vocal. The reason is that every domestic dairyman is on the same side of the dairy controversy. He wants all the protection he can get from foreign competition. Whereas the lumber industry is divided into two groups, with best opinion being to the effect that the stronger group, as far as votes are concerned, favors abolishing all restrictions against Canadian lumber and shingles.

Perhaps the best evidence is that the group favoring no tariff on lumber won every fight in congress until the very last. Then the tariff group won, but only by combining with the oil, copper and coal groups in a log rolling operation, which resulted in the imposition of the so-called "excise" import taxes, that really are tariff schedules.

Lumber Tariff

Actually the interests favoring a higher tariff against Canadian lumber are not politically important, save in the extreme Pacific Northwest. Midwestern lumber interests, which might be supposed to be allied actually are not, for the simple reason that in the days before they thought there would ever be a lumber tariff, they bought huge tracts of forest land in Canada!

Number one among the assets of the treaty, politically, is fruit. Canada's willingness to take our oranges, prunes, apricots, peaches and raisins just makes the difference between good times and bad in highly important areas in California. Incidentally, the orange schedule appeases Florida, overcoming—it is hoped—her anger against the administration for the Cuban reciprocity treaty, which let in early fruits and vegetables that compete with Floridian products.

Florida, of course, is not important politically. Not certainly when a Presidential election is being considered. But never forget California! Not because she elected Woodrow Wilson in 1916, but because her 22 electoral votes are absolutely essential to any G. O. P. hope, so far outlined, of ending the New Deal and retiring Franklin D. Roosevelt from the White House. Not even Henry P. Fletcher can count enough electoral votes to put a Republican in the White House—while AAA checks keep flowing—without California.

Figuring on Lodge

Massachusetts Democrats are figuring that Henry Cabot Lodge, grandson of the famous statesman who "broke the heart of the world" in his fight against Woodrow Wilson on the League of Nations, will be the G. O. P. candidate for senator next year. They are so sure of this that they are already shaping individual political plans to fit in with that picture.

Incidentally, they are not particularly happy about this situation. Despite his youth, they are not discounting young Lodge's ability as a vote getter. On the contrary, they point out that he has all the advantages of a great name, and none of the liabilities.

The famous Massachusetts senator, as a matter of fact, had accumulated a lot of enemies before his death. In his last race for the senate he barely pulled through. At his last national Republican convention, that at Cleveland, far from being the dominating figure he had been at such gatherings for nearly a generation, he was rather obviously sidetracked. In fact, that sidetracking led to animosities which rose to plague William M. Butler, at the time Republican national chairman and representative on the ground of President Coolidge, when Butler later ran for the senate against David I. Walsh.

None of these old feuds are believed to linger on, however, by Democrats interested in holding a senate seat, and some of them in winning that seat for themselves. They do not expect young Lodge to lose any Republican votes on account of them.

Democratic Fears

Moreover, Massachusetts has eight Republican members of the house, more than any other state at present except Michigan, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. And more than such historically Republican states as California, Illinois and Ohio!

So their fear is that, with evidences such as the Rhode Island election and that Massachusetts has backslidden on the New Deal, young Lodge, with nothing against him, may poll the full Republican vote.

The tremendous majority of Gov. James M. Curley in 1934 does not reassure them. They point to the fact that Curley was strong enough to nominate his own candidate for mayor of Worcester, over the sitting mayor, but then the Republicans won the office on November 5.

All of which might point to the logic that the Massachusetts Democrats would be glad to let Senator Marcus A. Coolidge have a renomination, especially as they could count on him to contribute handsomely to a campaign fund which might pull other candidates through, whether it saved him or not. But human ambitions run contrary to that notion.

Ever since it became fairly certain that Curley would seek renomination and re-election as governor, passing up the chance to come to the United States senate, there have been lightning rods put up by other Democrats.

The Day Before Thanksgiving

New England Thanksgiving Busy Time

THANKSGIVING day! How these words spelled days and days of work and worry for the colonial housewife! A festive holiday it was called by proclamation, observes a writer in the Boston Herald, but actually it represented a day which demanded more preparation than most any other in the year. Our old New England traditions required it—the Puritans did, so must we—was the common understanding of the day.

In days of yore grandmother would start her Thanksgiving preparation weeks in advance. The pies must be made. Of course she wouldn't serve mince pies that hadn't "ripened." They were made in quantity and put down cellar where they frequently froze to a solidity overcome only by a hot oven just before the feast.

In passing it might be well to remind you of the custom in one New England family to have three pieces of pie for breakfast on Thanksgiving morn. Mince, apple and squash were the three dictated by tradition.

Well in advance of the traditional day one would see grandmother take down the seasoning used but a few times a year, the crackers would be ground up and gradually the stuffin' for the turkey was prepared—this also went down cellar to ripen. We mustn't forget the plum pudding which was made well in advance and hung in a bag up in the attic suspended from a nail so interested mice could not approach.

Then came the days before Thanksgiving. Sons were drafted to collect and crack the butternuts, walnuts, beechnuts, etc. (and more than one finger was smashed in the process). Daughters were drafted to peel squash, turnips, carrots, potatoes, sweet and white, and of course the proverbial tear-producing onions.

The turkey must be caught, killed, plucked, singed and hung up for a day before he was brought to the kitchen. Grandmother must make her famous nut bread for William ("he does like it so when he comes home"). "Sadie, you make the fudge—Alice, you make the molasses candy—Sue, you make—" and so it goes. Everyone hustles, all wanting the same dishes, the same stove cover, the mixin' spoon, etc.

"Johnnie, Oh Johnnie! Go down to the village and get me some more crackers—Glory me! I've run out of seasoning"—and the errands start.

These were typical New England days of preparation for the Thanksgiving feast, all of which must be executed in addition to the regular chores of making butter for market twice a week, churning the cottage cheese, collecting the eggs, etc., etc.

Then came the day—the house must be spic and span. Dozens of pictures must be dusted, the parlor must be opened up, wood brought in for the extra stove, chestnuts gathered to put on the fireplace hearth—and on went the great process of preparation.

The folks came, hugs and kisses went the rounds, the new baby was chucked under the chin and an immediate retreat to the kitchen by the feminine members took place. By one-thirty or two the feast took place—and then the dishes. Stacks upon stacks of dishes, pots and pans (usually the turkey pan went under the sink for scouring the following day).

Games, gossip, etc., occupied a brief period until time for supper, when again the kitchen staff swung into action and made turkey sandwiches, poured the cider and cut up the pies.

As the lights were blown out it was unusual to hear the women folks say, "Didn't we have a good time, but isn't Thanksgiving a tiresome day!"

This was the Thanksgiving of yore contrasted to the modern Thanksgiving of a restful morning, a motor ride through the country or a ride "in town," a sumptuous dinner prepared by chefs who have vied with grandmother and her recipes until even she is forced to admit that she has been surprised—a delightful matinee at the theater and an evening in the game cellar at home. What a contrast—and what a pity that grandmothers of old couldn't be here now to reap the benefits of the advance of New England family traditions!

Death From the Air Barring the Inventor The Republican Odds To Starve Italy

Warfare in Ethiopia consists largely in surprising the enemy in some narrow gorge or valley. Ethiopians have thus surprised Italians on a small scale. Now the Italians have shown that the thing can be done from the air by killing 2,000 Ethiopian warriors, of whom 20,000 were massed in the Mei Mezoid valley, south of Makale. Ethiopians withstood, with fine courage, the attack with machine guns, incendiary and explosive bombs.

England really has free speech. On your soap box in Hyde Park you may say what you please, if you do not advocate crime.

But England does not like free speech from another country, through the ether. The British Broadcasting company will not let Marconi talk from Rome to Englishmen over the radio. He might convince them that it is preposterous to try to starve out Italy for doing in Ethiopia what England has done in many places. The ruling seems hard on Marconi, considering that he invented radio. Without him there would be no "British Broadcasting company."

Those that make betting a business are often sound in their political judgments. They are at least cold, calculating; sentiment does not cloud their vision.

On the Republican Presidential nomination the betting now stands:

Senator William E. Borah, 8 to 1. Governor Landon of Kansas, 10 to 1. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, 15 to 1. Col. Frank Knox of Illinois, 15 to 1. Governor Hoffman of New Jersey, Ogden L. Mills, Senator David A. Reed, all 20 to 1.

Professional bettors agree that Governor Landon is gaining, and will probably lead the procession at 6 to 1 in a few days. Band wagon climbers are more and more polite to Governor Landon.

The "sanctions" wall thrown by England and France around Italy, smaller nations co-operating, to "suffocate and starve Italy," as Mussolini puts it, is now complete. Two million young organized Italians protest against the effort to punish Italy for doing to Ethiopia what England and France have done to other, more nearly civilized countries.

H. G. Wells, aged sixty-nine, younger and more brilliant than when he wrote "Doctor Moreau's Island" and "The War of the Worlds," now in America on his way to see Hollywood, says, "The film is a finer art than the novel, stage or the opera."

Mr. Wells' open mind proves his youth. The moving picture is greater in its possibilities than book, stage or opera, because it contains all three, plus the marvelous power of photography.

Britain's ambassador is conferring with our State department concerning Japan's plan to seize Chinese provinces, containing 95,000,000 Chinese, 35,000,000 more than the total population of Japan.

If the Japanese could control, arm and use 100,000,000 Chinese in the air and on the ground, that would be interesting. But it would not be our business, and it is to be hoped that the British will not persuade our State department that this country ought to attend to it.

Spiritually, politically and otherwise important is the proposed "merger" approved by bishops of the three branches of the Methodist Episcopal church. Together, the Methodist Episcopal church, Methodist Episcopal church, South, and Methodist Protestant church would number 7,500,000 members, the largest Protestant group.

Young men are coming back into fashion. Dr. Alan Valentine, only thirty-four, former master of Pierson college at Yale, is made president of Rochester university and starts well by denouncing the "ballyhoo" of college athletics, football especially. He speaks with authority, not as a weakling bookworm, for he was a college athlete at Swarthmore, member of the Olympic team at Paris in 1928.

The American Bankers association reveals the interesting fact that our banks hold fifteen thousand million dollars' worth of government bonds—in figures, $15,000,000,000.

Well might a most important official of the government say: "Inflation? We have it now, biggest ever seen, frozen in the banks. Wait until it breaks loose."

After the Tory election in England prices went soaring on London's stock exchange. Companies that make war weapons and materials were most buoyant. The masses had voted for more, bigger and better battleships, and war, if necessary.

SPURNED SUITOR ADMITS SLAYING SCHOOL BEAUTY

Youth Confesses He Killed Her "Because She Was So Beautiful."

Monticello, N. Y.—Glen Brasser of Rochester, captured near here, confessed that he strangled Muriel Hall, nineteen-year-old Rochester high school girl "because she was so beautiful." Seated in police headquarters the youth told a tragic tale of puppy love.

"Why did I kill her? I'll tell you why. We were going out four and five times a week. We even got it up to five and six times a week. I didn't want to hurry into marriage until I got a good job.

"Then there were others taking her out. Crowds of others. I couldn't stand it. She told me it was all over—I mean between us—and I lost my head."

He puffed a cigaret, adjusted his glasses, and added:

"She was so beautiful that I killed her."

Courted by Many.

The girl, chosen apple festival queen because of her beauty, courted by a score of admirers, was choked to death at her home in Rochester after high school was out.

Only a scratch on her neck and an open library door were clues. The girl lived with her father, Leonard Hall, factory manager, in the remodeled mansion that was once the home of George K. Eastman.

Telling his story slowly and calmly, the boy went on:

We were standing in the hall when she told me she had never loved me, and I went out of my head, I grabbed her by the throat and held her there for ten minutes—(he crushed his strong fingers together)—like this!

Struggles With Girl.

"She struggled, all right. We struggled back to the library, and then she was still. I let go. She was on her back, never moving.

"I lost my nerve after she was lying there so quiet, and I got into my father's station wagon and drove to the Rochester Airport. I wanted to say goodby to a friend of mine. Then I went to a drug store in Rochester and got some poison. I was going to kill myself."

Seeks Edelweiss for Mother; Falls to Death

Munich.—Seeking to pick an almost inaccessible edelweiss blossom "for his mother," a twenty-six-year-old Bavarian, fell from an Alpine cliff to death. Frank Kinker was climbing Mount Aggenstein in the German Alps with some comrades when he saw a rare edelweiss halfway up a sheer cliff. Just as his hand was reaching for the blossom a fall of rocks made him lose his hold and he toppled to the valley below.

Twins Are Born at Sea; Skipper Gets Radio Tips

San Francisco.—Without benefit of medical aid, a sea-going stork carrying two tiny passengers made a safe landing on the British motorship Silver Beech, bound from San Francisco to Manila.

The twins were born to Mrs. J. C. Closson, wife of a Manila dentist, while physicians at the Guam naval hospital wired instructions to the master of the Silver Beech.

POULTRY

ARTIFICIAL LIGHT AIDS EGG OUTPUT

Care Is Advised by Expert in Use in Houses.

Because experiments have shown that artificial light on fowls increases their production by means of a stimulating effect rather than causing any increased consumption of feed, lights should be used with a considerable degree of caution, warns an authority in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

If artificial lighting is used excessively, birds may be forced to produce at a rate beyond their capacity which will not last. Under normal conditions a flock of pullets should reach a production of 50 per cent between six and eight weeks after the first eggs are produced. The increase is uniform every week and when a flock of birds shows a normal condition there is no necessity for using artificial light, regardless of the season of the year.

When production shows a tendency to drop off each week rather than advance, however, it is a good practice to use some artificial light. One hour of light each day in addition to normal daylight is sufficient. This rule applies to all birds, whether they were hatched early and came into production in early fall or whether they were late hatched and are coming into production later.

All night lights may be used successfully with birds that fail to respond to the one-hour treatment.

Moult Can Be Avoided by Feeding Fattening Mash

When pullets come into production they frequently lay at a high rate of speed and their body weight tends to go down. A fall moult may then result.

This can be avoided, says a writer in Wallaces' Farmer, by feeding a fattening mash, consisting of 65 parts or ground yellow corn, 30 parts of ground oats or middlings and five parts of dried milk, either early in the morning or at noon. If liquid milk is available, the mash may be moistened with it rather than using the dry milk.

Since the use of fattening mash tends to cut down the consumption of the laying mash, the amount fed should never exceed two pounds per hundred birds. Feed only the amount the hens will clean up in 15 to 20 minutes, the amount being increased gradually up to the maximum or as the condition of the birds might require.

Housing Leghorn Pullets

When leghorn pullets are housed it is best to keep them confined until spring. They form a strong attachment for their old roosting places and will return after several weeks in the laying house. This causes confusion on the poultry farm and makes a lot of extra work if the birds have to be gathered up and moved back to the laying house in the face of a storm. Pullets that will not roost in colony houses at night will often go into the houses and roost during the day if a strong wind is blowing. Then the trapdoors can be closed and the birds confined until night when they can easily be caught. When catching the pullets, avoid as much confusion as possible. They are sensitive birds and the poultryman who does not frighten them will find it easier to manage the flock in confinement and they will eat more laying mash and produce eggs at an earlier date than the flock that is half wild.

Eggs Broken to Test Packing

Dozens of eggs are deliberately broken every week at one packing plant. Boxes of 180 are put into a machine, jolted about and the number of broken eggs noted. Research experts there are hoping to save poultry farmers hundreds of pounds a year in breakages of their eggs in transport. "The 'smashing machine' was devised so that data could be collected about the resistance of different types of containers," an official said.

Poultry Notes

Palatable mashes are consumed eagerly.

Turkeys when ready for market are usually twenty-six weeks old.

Three and a half to four square feet of floor space is needed per bird in the house.

Poultry houses need storm windows and storm doors, just as dwellings for humans do.

Changes of feed or the method of feeding must be avoided as far as possible while birds are in heavy production.

Birds that molt in late fall or early winter are always the best producers and breeding hens should be selected from them.

* * *

Give the growing birds plenty of water and plenty of shade on clean ground along with a good ration of mash and grain and good pullets should be the result.

More Humble About Our Opinions in New Kinship

At the moment, many people are deploring "a lack of leadership" in religion, says Lloyd C. Douglas in Cosmopolitan. "In my opinion, the confessed bewilderment of the churches is a sign of health and progress. The recent use of the soft pedal has made the prophet of more value to the people. They sense an intellectual kinship with the honest man who admits he is a bit at a loss to know exactly where we are.

"Editors who were used to saying the last word necessary for the adequate instruction of their constituents are writing in phrases tempered by a new shyness. Statesmen, teachers, parents, even half-grown children are no longer laying down their beliefs with a bang. We are all becoming humble about our opinions. This is the type of kinship we have needed more seriously than any other. It is somewhere along this road that we may find our peace."

PLOWING UNDER MEN AND PIGS

The charges that the New Deal's AAA is based on a "philosophy of scarcity" have aroused those who see in the program the hope of adjusting farm production to consumption.

In answer to the critics who decry the "killing of little pigs", Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has cited the "industrial reduction program which plowed millions of workers into the streets."

"The pig iron reduction control of the big steel companies in 1933 was in principle 1,000 times as damnable as the pig reduction campaign of 1933" Wallace said.

Certainly there was no great condemnation of industry when it began to turn jobless men into the streets by the thousands. The nation has spent billions caring for this "controlled production" of industry.

Why, then, should there be such opposition to the efforts of the farmers of the nation to adjust their production to consumptive needs? Are our farmers supposed to be philanthropists, responsible only to the public and not to their families?

Over production of farm commodities hurts industry and labor so much so as agriculture. The wage-earner may benefit from a 5-cents a pound decrease in the cost of meat or a 3-cents drop in the price of eggs, but he more than pays for the advantage when the farm income of the nation drops millions and even billions at the same time.

The AAA aims to adjust farm production to our needs. It aims to create a shotage no more than it aims to create a huge surplus. The plan is to provide an ample supply to fit our needs. It is no more than the manufacturers of automobiles, typewriters, or shoes do. Unlike the producers of these products, the farmer cannot set the price for his commodities so as to guarantee a fair profit. He must take what he can get, which in most cases, as everyone knows, has been too little. The nation cannot prosper by forcing the farm population to suffer.

Heretofore, the farmer, because of lack of any suitable means of organization, has been unable to make any effort at adjustment. But the present scarcity of hogs is not the first shortage of necessities this country has faced. We have had shortages before. The AAA is the farmer's agency to adjust his poduction in order that there will be neither shortage nor surplus.

Social and Personal Mention

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE, Social Editor

THANKSGIVING DAY NOVEMBER 28, 1935

It is a long trek back thru the centuries to the year 1621 when a cargo of sturdy, courageous New England Pilgrims landed on our shores, gave thanks to Almighty God for a safe journey, and "entertained and feasted for almost a week' in honor of the occasion.

Will you turn with me a few pages of history and let us trace together the origin and significance of this glorious season we are on the eve of observing?

Harvest festivals and special days for Thanksgiving, we find, date back to Biblical times. Many nations observed them. Hebrews, Greeks, Romans, and the Harvest Home Festival of England was a part of the life of the Pilgrims of Plymouth. However, the first Thanksgiving Day proclaimed, after the national government was established, was made by George Washington on November 26, 1789. He emphasized the need of Thanksgiving to God, "that great and glorious being, who is the beneficent author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be."

The second Thanksgiving Day occasion, recorded in the United States, was celebrated on February 19, 1795. From this date, the annual holiday follows an erratic course, jumping to a Thanksgiving Day proclaimed by President John Adams which occurred on Wednesday, May 9. President Madison follows, with a preference for Thursday, and changes the day and the date during his administration back to Thursday, however, he selected a different Thursday in a different month each year during his term of office.

We owe our modern Thanksgiving Day to a proclamation given by President Lincoln, the rail splitter. In 1864, he issued an edict appointing the 4th Thursday in November, intending that this day be observed annually. After his untimely death, President Johnson appointed the last Thursday in November, and since that time each President has followed this example. Thanksgiving Day, by the way, is the only religious festival celebrated in the United States by authority of its government. It appeals to all people whatever hteir religious creeds may be.

So we come to Thursday, November 28, 1935! It is interesting to have our friends drop in and relate their plans for this happy occasion. Many will take advantage of the holiday and enjoy it according to their own "moods and fancies." To some, it will mean —"going home"—happy reunion. To others, a cessation from work! Several devotees of out door sports will enjoy a day in the woods and fields, hunting the elusive Bob White. A prominent fox hunter whom we know and like, will let his "hounds" run! Highways will be crowded with automobiles bearing congenial parties to the foot ball clas sic in Nashville. Picture shows in the County have arranged exceptionally attractive and entertaining features. Other people we know, regard the TURKEY as the all important "back ground", and will enjoy the far famed Southern Turkey dinner. Ball room floors will be crowded with happy dancing feet treading with rhythmic step their favorite melodies. Right here—an old town pessimist saunters in, looks ovve my shoulder as we continue pounding out this copy, and remarks, "Yes, but there will be plenty of empty "pews" in all the churches" —Well, my friend, maybe so—maybe not so! People who THINK are usually people who THANK. Both words are derived from the same root. They may have their own particular way of saying "Thank you". They may have their own way of proving their gratitude to an All Wise Father for His many blessings. It may not be, "according to rules and regulations", laid down by self appointed arbiters—but we personally believe that deep in each human heart there lies a spirit of gratefulness and appreciation for the manifold blessings we enjoy today. And there are many reasons for expressing gratitude in this year 1935. Shall we not pause and mention just a few outstanding reasons?

We are not involved in WAR! We have self government in America. We are not afflicted with dictatorship. Our leaders are endowed with the same fortitude and courage to meet our current problems as were those Pioneers who broke the trail across a rugged, unknown land and faced the hardships of the bleak frontier. It is still a glorious privilege just to be able to "Live—to know—to listen—to sing—to work—to look up at the blue sky; to see the sun sink slowly beyond the line of the horizon. To feel the breath of Spring, to watch the unfolding of flowers, to be a part of this great universe. To just be happy and to be able to:

"Give thanks for simple things
That all may share—not only Kings:
Beautiful star-strewn autumn skies;
Delicious home-made pumpkin pies.
The sunshine of a baby's smile,
Making everything worthwhile.
Snow flakes drifting to the ground;
Every little common sound.
The waving branches of a tree;
Over the air—a symphony.
An open book, the fire red;
The fun of being a sleepy head.
The wagging of a puppy's tail;
The coming of the morning's mail;
Freckled faces and boyish grins,
Little pug noses and double chins.
Friends who are thoroughly tried and true,
Folks who sincerely believe in you.
Pattering dops of spingtime ain,
Playing a tune on the window pane.
Flowers peeping thru the sod,
Turning their faces up toward God.
A kitten playing with a string;
Birds that wake us as they sing,
The precious gift of each new day,
Our daily work, our daily play.
We may not sit on a throne and reign
But we can be thankful just the same.

Now, here is the answer to several inquiries regarding the identity of "the good looking young fellow with the big brown eyes," you have seen entering the Democrat offices during the past two weeks. It is our happy privilege to present to you POWELL BLAIR, the new Mechanical Superintendent, Linotype operator, Job Pressman-et cetera, who will be with us—we hope, from "now on out!"

Mr. Blair hails from Woodlawn, Alabama, and has for the past few years held responsible positions with leading newspapers in the Birmingham district. He succeeds George Richardson, who is now in Tuscaloosa

We cordially invite you to come by and meet the newest addition to our congenial staff of writers and printers! We shall happily introduce you. Answering a question from MISS..... he is not MARRIED! We do not know his ideas on the subject, but will introduce you and—maybe, if you are lucky, you can find out!

The Legion Turkey Shoot Tuesday was a success from every standpoint. Many "sharp shooters" of World War fame had a chance to prove their skill, and did not fail to "bring home the bacon." One old Turkey "gobbler" was heard to cluck as he saw Mr. Alex Etress step up, place his gun in positin, and take aim, "It is all over but the stuffing." And, my friends, those were his last words.

Mrs. Esther Christian has returned from a visit to her brother, I. P. Mason, in Stockton, Alabama.

If you do not think Old Man Santa Claus knows his "fashions", you have only to visit the glorious toy shops this year. Modern children will find this old gentleman strictly up to date with stream lined electric trains and mechanical automobiles. And dolls? My dear little ones, he would not think of just leaving one that could only perform the "go-sleepy" eyes trick of old. No sir-ee, they are just like humans—walk, talk, smile and there isn't any little tricky string to pull. They just "do it." And if you are REAL maternally inclined, you can get a duplicate of the Dionne Quintuplets, high chairs and all. So, place your order early, Kiddies, he told me he had plenty for everybody, that is everybody who is "good as good can be" from now until Christmas.

Speaking of Christmas? Have you renewed your subscription to the Democrat? The extra large edition will be off press on December 19th, and we hope you will let us come to greet you with this issue, which we are planning to send you with "some thing to please every member of the family". It is up to you—and the little "American Eaglet."

Mayor and Mrs. Harry Gordon, Harris Milton Gordon, A. D. Gordon and Mrs. Zera Walton will form a congenial motor party bound for Nashville on Thanksgiving Day! They will be joined in this city by Homer J. Walton, who is studying thru the winter months—that is all except "week ends' which he frankly admits are his "strong points", for they bring him back HOME! Who can blame him? We personnally miss this gentleman, and will be glad when he learns enough "Funeral Directing" to assure us our departure from this "vale of tears" will be properly looked after when we "put out to sea."

Mrs. E. B. Cooper, of Birmingham, spent Sunday in Columbiana, the guest of her husband, Dr. E. B. Cooper, who states he is returning her call on Thursday when they plan to take in the Birmingham Southern-Howard Foot ball game.

If you happen to be one of those smugly sure people who serenely tell you "I live for my work"—please forget it! Doing your work efficiently is O. K. by me—but confidentially, playing around zestfully and competently and enjoying it, is just as important—maybe more so! Plenty of folk to take your place just as soon as you leave! Better take "time out" occasionally—you are missing a lot!

Thirty or more rosy cheeked youngsters, happy and eager, will accept the gracious hospitality of popular Little Miss 7 year old Becky Wees Holcombe as she pilots them into the Dixie Theatre on Thanksgiving Day and celebrates her birthday anniversary.

That it is going to be a "blue" Spring with the whole color range of blues leading, is the latest Fashion note from Paris! Spring is not worrying us nearly as much as an enchanting red velvet dinner gown recently seen in one of the smart shops in town. I shall possibly be "blue" before I get it! However, there is a new moon—and I did not see it between the treetops. It was over my left shoulder, and the wish was made —"Your Honor"! (The case will likely be "CONTINUED".)

Mrs. "Al" Carlisle of Louisville, Ky., is the holiday guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis. Mrs. Carlisle is a former resident of Columbiana and her many friends have been busily engaged in welcoming her back to former haunts. Her breezy chatter, and we'll wager complete stock of new jokes, which even "Pop" Christian and "Uncle Bill" Davis can see thru, will brighten Thanksgiving Day for all of us who know her and so happily and devotedly remember her as both "neighbor" and friend.

You can say "Merry Christmas" for one cent as far as Uncle Sam is concerned, but if you want to add "love and kisses" to your greeting cards—it will cost you two cents more. Cards in unsealed envelopes for one cent—as long as you do not cover too much verbal terrltory. If you want to say anything other than "Happy New Year" or "Merry Christ mas"—it will cost you three cents.

And speaking of Merry Christmas, do not fail to phone or write or call for advertising space in the Christmas Edition of the Democrat to be released on December 19th. And if you like, you may greet your friends throughout the County and State with the Merry Christmas card run in the Good Wish edition which will be released on Tuesday, December 24 —just in time to express your good will to men", etc. Let us hear from you.

The Rev. and Mrs. Henry Hurst have been receiving a cordial greeting upon their return to Columbiana for another year, and the 'Rev' grows poetically eloquent over his royal reception when he returned from Conference: We happily reprint his 'sen timents," and join a host of friends in sincerely welcoming him—HOME again!

THE PARSON'S POUNDING
By Henry M. Hurst

It was after the conference was over,
And all was calm and serene,
That a knock was heard on the parsonage door
And a smiling face was seen.
The parson answered the fervent knock,
And quickly went to the door,
A lady pointed to a purring truck
And the burden that it bore.

The driver brought the stuff inside,
There were coffee, peas, potatoes,
Sugar, meal, rice, fruits and such,
Flour and canned tomatoes.
The parson's wife then ups and says,
"The folks in Columbiana
Are the best to be found in any town
From 'Frisco to Savannah,"

Then the parson said, "Take another route,
From Detroit down to Tampa,
If you would beat the folks we've got You'll certainly have to scamper."
Right here and now with one accord
We give for publication,
A hearty hand for every one,
With thanks and obligation.

Memories of a recent delightful visit to South Alabama, and especially to that quaint old town known as Tuskegee, will always bring happy thoughts. Tuskegee beautifully typifies the spirit and the traditions of the Old Southland. Immediately after we entered the hospitable gates of this picturesque old town, we realized that all the legends and stories regarding the lovely Colonial homes of these charming South Alabama people had come true, and we were enjoying a panoramic view of the many interesting places of which we had long heard, but had not had the pleasure of seeing. We shall never forget the many courtesies so generously extended us while visitors to this graciously cordial and friendly town. We only regret our "judicial stay" could not have been indefinitely prolonged.

Misses Beth Wallace, Ruth Luck, Charlie Verne Tinney, Mary Moore Hurst, Jane Fowler, Idell and Odell Turner, Louise and Bertha Ellis, and Margaret Ellis, Alice Roberts, Keener Roberts, A. D. and Harris Milton Gordon, Jack McGhee and other mem bes of the College set, are expected home to brighten the holiday season. Of course, some of the above named "Collegiates" are no longer "Collegiate"—they having donned the "cap and gown" some months ago, and are, at the present time, busily engaged in "teaching young americanos"—but their visit home is eagerly awaited by—Personal Mention-et al! Their newly acquired "dignity" doesn't worry us any! We have always been duly respectful!

Thanks, Mr. Postman, for bringing me a lovely letter from my good friend, Louise Ellis, who is making an enviable record as Physical Director in Lanette, Alabama. She wants to know what has become of the "Kiddie Kolumn"—and states she enjoys reading the Democrat each week. Now, about the time, I finished reading this letter, and began wondering just what had happened to the "kiddies"—why they had failed to write me, and what it was all about—in walks a little gentleman by the name of John Curlee Jr., with a hand full of letters from the Kiddies. This gives me something else to be thankful for on next Thursday, and I happily refer you to the "Kiddies Kolumn" printed elsewhere in this issue of the Democrat.

We have personally missed the "kiddies" visits to the office, and we have had many requests regarding their whereabouts. We hope they will continue to contribute to this little corner we have made for them to be used for fostering their own interests, and giving pleasure to the "grown-ups."

There is nothing I enjoy more than hearing of the success of a native of Shelby County. It is my happy privilege to send congratulations to Miss Irene Reynolds of Wilsonville, Ala., for winning one of the best prizes in a recent Fiction Anthology Contest. The volume "Outstanding Short Fiction," is a book compiled of short stories and poems published annually for tre past four years. The book will be combined this year with the American Short Story, and will be the largest volume and most comprehensive survey ever attempted in Short Fiction. The work by Miss Reynolds was chosen for its "fine literary quality." The volume, when completed will sell for $5.00.

Irene Reynolds will be remembered as a former brilliant student of Shelby County High School, and her many friends trroughout the County will join the Democrat in extending best wishes for continued success along the journalistic route.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Walters, owners and operators of the Dixie Theare, who have made many friends since coming to Columbiana, were called to Selma last week end on account of the serious illness of Mrs. Walter's mother.

It is now time to close the little print shop. This little old office which you have so often brightened with your friendly visits and personal interest—but, before we go, we want to express our deep gratitude TO you and FOR you—and we leave a lovely old legend regarding this Thanksgiving occasion which we believe you will enjoy reading.

"There is an old legend which tells that two angels leave Heaven every morning for a visit to earth—one the Angel of Petition, and the other the Angel of Thanksgiving; each carrying a basket; and that at night the Angel of Petition returns with her basket heaped full and running over with petitions to the Almighty for his blessings, while the Angel of Thanksgiving returns with her basket almos tempty."

Can it be possible that we are too prone to—just take things for granted?

Fishing Fleet Conducts Funeral for Ghost Ship

The Flying Dutchman, encountered usually in the neighborhood of Cape Horn, and prophesying disaster at that most dreaded ocean corner, is the most famous of ghost ships, but now we hear that another sinister vessel has taken to appearing and disappearing in the South seas. It takes the form of a phantom launch, which haunts the fishing grounds near Chatham islands, a lonely outpost 400 miles southeast of New Zealand.

Four years ago the craft was first reported, and soon afterwards a launch in which 11 fishermen were going to a football match foundered, all being drowned. More recently a lonely fisherman claimed to have seen it; a few days later he was swept overboard to oblivion by a heavy sea. Perhaps with the idea of exorcising this grim visitant, the whole fishing fleet assembled on the approximate spot, and held a solemn funeral service. The ghostly launch is said to appear in misty weather and to travel at supernatural speed.

Air Service to China Will Force New Travel Concept

You can now buy an air ticket to carry you to the Orient. It will put you on board the "China Clipper" in San Francisco bay late in the afternoon. You will be settled in a comfortable compartment in time for dinner—dinner beneath a star-studded sky far above the highest clouds of the eastern Pacific. You will roll out of a larger-than pullman berth to thrill at the early morning sun splashing gold over Honolulu harbor.

Then on again, by daylight now, over a necklace of surf-ringed coral keys to the little Midway islands, where a well-appointed inn awaits your overnight stop. A short flight next day to Wake island, a tiny dot in the vast Pacific. There, too, you pass a night. Another daylight flight. A night on Guam. The next night finds you in exotic yet modern Manila. Then the following morning you step ashore for luncheon, in China itself.—W. L. Van Dusen and Daniel Sayre in Cosmopolitan.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

Designers in a Mood for Pleating

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLEATS, pleats and nothing but pleats, is the message of many of the smartest fashions this season. Turn where one will in the realm of costume design, there's an orgy of intriguing pleated effects "carrying on." So let's keep up with the mode while we talk about pleats, pleated and being pleated.

French designers, especially, are not leaving anything unpleated that could, should and must be pleated according to their idea of things. Their pleated mood pertains to daytime fashions as well as those of highest evening formality. The all-over pleated gown reflecting Grecian inspiration is a highlight in evening modes. Evening capes to go with these lovely creations are also completely pleated in waistline or longer lengths. In daytime fashions the all-over pleated dress, has also been received with acclaim.

However, all-over pleating is only one phase of the subject, for the use of pleats is embracing every sort from the tiniest of sprightly pleated edgings which run hither and thither about hemlines and up and down, flanking each side of neat buttoned closings which sometimes extend from head to foot. Some designers there are who make a feature of pleated tiers and apron fronts and pleated sleeves.

The new fabrics are entering into the pleated conspiracy with a noble gesture. Most of them seem made just to be pleated—fairly invite one to pleat them. Take the all-silk black crepe which is so ultra smart for daytime dresses. It pleats to perfection. A statement that does not need a second telling after one glimpses the stunning gown in the center of the illustration. Pleated every inch of the way is this black silk crepe afternoon dress. The pleats are stitched down at the neck, shoulders and waist, giving a fitted well-groomed appearance to the frock. A green clasp at the throat and a suede belt in the same color provide bright contrast. This dress is the much talked-of Molyneaux which is meeting with such outstanding success this season.

An effective treatment of wider pleats in a black silk crepe dress for the young girl, is pictured to the left. The pleats are stitched with tailored precision about the hipline and released half way down the skirt so as to slenderize at the same time that it provides a flared hemline. The bodice is a modified shirtwaist with tiny metal buttons in front.

Speaking of the new materials adapting themselves so readily to the pleated mode, the new silk lame weaves, many of which are sheer and tissue-like in texture, enter into the scheme of things with infinite grace. If you are wanting a lovely gown for prom gayety, here it is at the right in the group pictured. Shirrings and pleats go fifty-fifty in the instance of this ultra chic and adorable evening dress made of silver silk lame. The shirred top is held by narrow double straps, and the decolletage is outlined by a tiny band of pleats. The pleated theme continues in the skirt, held well in place by the crispness of the silk lame. The only trimming is the metal and jeweler buckle of the belt.

Among the pleated triumphs in evening fashions are the perfectly charming airy-fairy floating visions of silk chiffon, most lovely, perhaps, in white but which set your heart throbbing at faster pace in any of the new jewel colors or pastel shades. Sometimes only the skirt is pleated, but when it is, it's done so artfully it flutters out like a fleeting cloud or a mist enveloping the figure.

WEAR TO SCHOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Is the "what to give for Christmas" problem beginning to disturb your peace of mind? If it's Junior or little sister you have in mind, the answer will be found in the picture. To become the happy possessor of a pig-grain three-quarter length coat just like big brother's is enough to bring a big smile to any little boy. Little girls have a liking for leather coats, too, for no doubt they have heard their elders declare that leather's the thing for smart sports wear.

FUR CAPES RICHER; OF MANY VARIETIES

Fur capes are richer than they have been in years. Full-length evening models are made of strips of silver fox running from shoulder to hem—one very elegant one boasting twenty full-sized animal skins. Knee-length day capes are fashioned of mink, silver fox, dyed red fox or moleskin, while any number of shorter capes appear in astrakhan, nutria or broadtail.

Occasionally the fur capes for day wear are cut with broad shoulders and little fullness below so that they hang straight, though more often they have some flare.

New Soft Wool Weaves Are Proving Popular Just Now

With wool increasing in fashion importance, and women's insistence on being comfortable indoors as well as out, something pretty definite has been done in this year's weaves for the interests of all concerned.

This year's domestic weaves are as soft as chiffon, warm enough for all normal purposes, and have taken on an additional silky finish, adding to wearing enjoyment.

Colors have never been more flattering. That day has gone when winter means somber tones, and the "little wool frock" to wear underneath the tweed coat or the fur sport coat may be as gay and colorful as one's temperament demands.

Whiter Blouses

White silk blouses should never be hung out to dry as it will yellow them. Wrap them in towels until ironing. If they become yellowed in spite of your precaution, use a little whitening in the rinse waetr.

Sharp Contrast

Paris is wearing black afternoon frocks with billowy white sleeves—a style becoming to many women.

Lesson for December 1

EZRA'S MISSION TO JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 7:6-10; 8:21-23, 31, 32.

GOLDEN TEXT—The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him. Ezra 8:22.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Bringing Gifts for God's House.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ezra's Long Journey.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How God Helps.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Purposeful Prayer and Courageous Action.

I. Who Ezra Was (7:1-10).

1. A priest (vv. 1-5). He was from the line which was to stand between God and the people. The leader of the first company was Zerubbabel, a sort of military governor. The great need now was for a religious leader, for the people had gone far from God, as we see from the noble reformation which Ezra effected.

2. A ready scribe (v. 6). He was a teacher of the law of God.

3. His high ambition (vv. 7-10).

a. He set his heart to seek the law of the Lord (v. 10). He set out definitely with the purpose to know God's Word. No one who purposes in his heart to seek the law of the Lord can fail.

b. He set his heart to obey the Lord (v. 10). He was not only concerned with knowing God's Word but obeying it. God's Word cannot be known in its fullness by the intellect; it must be experienced. An essential qualification for a teacher of the Bible, a preacher, or Sunday school worker, is obedience to God's Word.

c. He set his heart to teach in Israel God's statutes and judgments (v. 10). He not only had a love for God's Word but a desire to implant it in the hearts of others.

II. Ezra's Commission (7:11-26).

Ezra went forth backed by the decree from King Artaxerxes. The king gave him a copy of the decree which authorized him to lead a company back to Jerusalem. This decree empowered him to

1. Collect funds (vv. 15, 16);
2. Levy tribute (vv. 21, 22);
3. Appoint magistrates and judges (v. 25);
4. Execute penalties (v. 26).

So great was the king's confidence in Ezra that he delegated all these powers to him. For this great favor Ezra lifted his heart to God in thanksgiving (vv. 27, 28). He was mainly concerned with the fact that he was to beautify the Lord's house and acknowledged that God had put his purpose into the king's heart.

III. The Company Which Returned With Ezra (Ezra 8:1-20).

This company was comparatively small, only 1,754 males, but including the women, children and servants there were perhaps 6,000 or 7,000 people. Before proceeding on the journey Ezra was careful to find out as to whether any of the Levites, the ministers of God, were with them (v. 15). He knew that the success of their enterprise depended upon the spiritual condition of the people. Temporal blessings and prosperity of the individual and the nation depend upon the people's attitude toward God.

IV. Ezra's Prayer and Fasting (8:21-23).

The first thing that he did was to seek God's guidance. The reason Ezra sought the Lord's help was that as far as possible he desired his mission to be free from human dependence. He did not minimize the dangers attending his journey, but since he had assured the king that the hand of the Lord would be upon all for good who sought him, he was ashamed to ask the king for a military escort to protect them from the marauding Arabs. His desire was to prove the reality of God's help, as God's honor among the heathen was at stake.

V. The Successful Journey (8:24-32).

God heard their prayer. The treasure entrusted to them was great. Perhaps the entire value of money and sacred utensils was nearly five million dollars. For a small caravan to go through a country infested by these robber bands carrying such an amount of money was most perilous, but Ezra knew that God was able and would protect them. Observe

1. The care and honesty (vv. 24-30). The money was weighed unto them at the start and was to be weighed when turned over to the authorities at Jerusalem. The incentive to honest and strict accounting of the trust was that they were holy men and were entrusted with that which belonged to God.

2. Their safe arrival (vv. 31, 32). Some four and one-half months were required to make the journey. God brought them safely to their destination, thus proving that he is faithful to those who put their trust in him.

Perfect Love

Perfect love is distinguished by the character of its enjoyments. It craves the spiritual, the holy and Divine. Its enjoyments are purely religious; they are sought by prayer, reading the Scriptures, pious meditations and acts of Christian duty and usefulness. The enjoyments of a pure heart are sweet, rational and unwasting.

Objections

Nothing will ever be attempted if all possible objections must first be overcome.—Johnson.

All Around the House

A little olive oil rubbed over paper that has stuck to a polished surface softens paper and makes it easier to remove.

Rings of canned pineapple browned and sprinkled with chopped green peppers and pimientos make an attractive garnish for steak, chops or roasts.

Always iron ecru linens on the wrong side. Ironing on the right side robs them of their luster.

When pressing neckties, cut a piece of cardboard the shape of the tie and slip inside of it. Cover tie with a cloth and press with hot iron. There will then be no marks left by seams and hems.

House palms should not be exposed to the direct rays of the sun nor should they be placed near a radiator.

When potatoes are baked in their skins the moisture in potato supplies the steam that makes the texture of the vegetable soft and mealy, at the same time preserving the flavor.

Some stucco walls may be washed with soap and water, but a coat of stucco sprayed over the whole surface is much more satisfactory than washing.

Gravy will not soak through the lower crust of a meat pie if the white of an egg is brushed over lower crust of pie.

* * *

Put the fork in the fat of steak when turning it. If put into meat, the juice will escape.

Varnished dark woodwork will have a fine gloss if washed with warm water and kerosene. Add a cup of kerosene to a large pail of warm water.

Fill ugly cracks in furniture with beeswax and then varnish over.

Sheer wool crepe in the brighter colors makes very attractive side draperies. They are lined with eggshell sateen.

GAS-PROOF CAVES

Mystery surrounds the origin of the famous Chislehurst caves, Kent, which were recently fitted up as a gas-proof shelter for civilians. The caves comprise a great labyrinth which honeycombs the chalk hill upon which Chislehurst stands. It is said that you can walk for 20 miles in this strange underground world. During the war the government commandeered the caves and stored great quantities of high explosives there.—Pearson's Weekly.

Farm and Merchants Bankruptcies Lower

Auburn, Ala.,—Farm bankruptcies declined 20 per cent during the past fiscal year compared with the previous year, reports the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. This was a greater relative decline than for any other occupational group in the country, except merchants.

Dr. and Mrs. H. T. Hamner, of Camp Hill, Alabama, and Mrs. Annie Lane, of Atlanta, Georgia, were the guests of Mrs. Myra Hamner Miles on Tuesday.

FARMERS LEAD IN PURCHASING NEW AUTOMOBILES

Auburn, Ala.,—Farmers are leading the nation in purchases of new automobiles, reports the United States Department of Agriculture. The gain in car sales on farms and in small towns during 1934 increased by 38 per cent over 1933, as compared to the gain of 18 per cent in cities.

New auto regisitrations increased from 1,276,524 in 1932, the year before the AAA program was launched, to 1,738,663 in 1933, and to 2,292,443 in 1934. During the first eight months of 1935 new car registration topped 1934, with 2,336,630 cars recorded reports the department.

GOOD PORK IS DEPENDENT ON QUALITY HOGS

Auburn, Ala.,—With the coming of "Hog killing weather," J. C. Crimes, head of the animal husbandry department of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, offers farmers a number of points for improving their meat.

Hogs of medium condition and weighing from 200 to 250 pounds pro duce the most satisfactory meat for curing on the farm, he says. "Hogs from 6 to 9 months of age are usually best for butchering."

Meat from boars has a strong, unpleasant odor and flavor, he advises. "Before butchering they should be castrated, put on a full feed until entirely healed and then fed for at least 30 days longer."

Over-fat, heavy hogs will not produce a high-class cured pork. Smooth evenly-fleshed hogs will produce a finer quality of meat and will cut up with less waste than rough, coarse, wnirkled and flabby individuals, he says.

For full information on curing pork, farmers should ask their county agent or write the Agricultural Experiment Station at Auburn, asking specific questions.

Alumni Association Organized

The "Yellow Jackets" held up an undefeated record recently to the alumni of the High School when they assembled for the last game of the season and remained for a buffet supper prepared by Miiss Patterson and the F. H. A. Girls.

After supper the alumni, teachers and guests were invited into the auditorium where Prof. A. L. Horton acted as master of ceremonies and an impromptu program was enjoyed.

An Alumni Association was organized with Jimmie Gorman as president. The following were elected as vice presidents: Sara Elliott, Nell Moore, Davis Hunt Thompson, Robert Hunt and Gertrude Gilbert. Frances Elliott was elected as Secretary and Treasurer. Committees were appointed for publication of Alumni News and Entertainment at the next annual meeting, date to be announced later. Much interest and enthusiasm was shown at the first meeting and the organization would like to enroll all of the "Old Grads' at the next meeting.

Heart Drifts

RITUAL FOR DREAMERS

Guard well the dream. Let no conspiring day
No hour of triumph quench the hesitant spark
Of beauty within the mind that seeks its way
Like a slow flame that struggles out of dark.
Cherish the dream. Hold to that nameless joy
That children capture on a sunlit hill.
A thousand hands are striving to destroy;
Defend each door with all your strength and will.
Remember, all the glory, all the power,
Some day shall be as chaff within the hand;
Guard well the vision. Then, some distant hour
When fools, bewildered, empty-hearted stand,
You shall walk down the morning streets of time,
Clad in your princely robes of song and rime.

(Scruggs.)

THE LAMP

If I can bear your love like a lamp before me
When I go down the long, steep road of darkness
I shall not fear the everlasting shadows
Nor cry in terror.

If I can find God, then I shall find Him;
If none can find Him, then I shall sleep soundly,
Knowing how well on earth your love sufficed me,
A lamp in the darkness.

(Teasdale)

KISMET

Two shall be born, the whole wide world apart,
And speak in different tongues,
And have no thought, each of the other's being;
And have no heed—
And these o'er unknown seas
To unknown lands shall cross
Escaping wreck, defying death, and all unconsciously
Shape every act to this one end—
That one day out of darkness they shall meet—
And read Lifes meaning in each other's eyes.

And two shall walk some narrow way of life, so nearly side by side
That should perchance one turn so little space to right or left—
They needs must stand acknowledged face to face —
And yet, with weary eyes that never meet
And groping hands that never clasp
Calling in vain to ears that never hear
They seek each other all their weary days—and die—unsatisfied!
And that is FATE!

TWO MEET

Leather Boots got up at dawn
And went to bed at even—
What he's missed of joy on earth
He hopes to find in Heaven.
Silver slipper had small faith
In anything hereafter
So all her days were turned to song
And brittle, careless laughter.
Boots and Slippers met and loved
One day of wind and weather
And heaven's gates swung wide that hour
And both passed in TOGETHER.

MONTEVALLO GAME

The final game of the high school football season was played in Columbiana last Wednesday, when Shelby High defeated Montevallo High by the one point margin of 19-18.

Playing one of the cleanest and hardest fought games of the season. Shelby High was never behind, as they scored in the first, second and third quarters.

Starring the brilliant running of Davis, Wallace and Martin. The Shelby team scored before five minutes of the first quarter was gone. Montevallo came back in the second quarter to make six points via end runs by Villadson, fast halfback and line smashes which carried the ball over. Perfect interference was given Villadson, who ran twenty yards to set the stage for the first Montevallo touchdown. Wallace made a second touchdown for Shelby in the last few minutes of the second quarter after the ball had been brought to the Montevallo five yard line. The half ended with Shelby leading 13 to 6.

Shelby High started a passing game in the third quarter to net their third touchdown. Hughes, Shelby end caught a pass on Montevallo's ten yard line and went the remaining distance to put Shelby in the lead 19 to 6. Montevallo came right back to score after gaining on wide end runs. There were no more threats until the last few minutes of play when Montevallo had control of the ball at mid field. Passes were being thrown as a last resort. A touchdown and extra point would only tie Shelby, as the score was 19 to 12. There were four minutes to play when Green, fast Montevallo end, reached up and caught a pass out of several Shelby men's hands and seemingly went through the whole Shelby team to score. Their chance to tie Shelby was to make the extra point. The first try, which was going around end, was called back because both teams were off-sides. On the next play, the Shelby line held and the extra point was not made. Montevallo lined up to kick-off to Shelby. Only a few plays were run before the final whistle was blown.

Rarely ever have the fans seen such a good game as this on the local field. Both squads fought a hard clean game.

Chino-Japanese War May Come From Autonomy Movement—Oil Embargo Against Italy Postponed—President Busy With the Budget.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

DOWNRIGHT war between the Chinese armies of Dictator Chiang Kai-shek and the Japanese appeared almost certain when the autonomy movement in north China was revived in eastern Hopei and Chahar provinces by Yin Ju-keng, the administrative commissioner and friend of Japan. Leaders of the rest of the region were undecided on their course, but Japanese troops began to pour in by the trainload. Three thousand of them with full war equipment arrived in Tientsin, and the garrison at Peiping was more than doubled. The Fengtai railway junction a few miles from Peiping was seized, Colonel Takasashi, military attache, asserting this was necessary because the rolling stock was being moved south, threatening the isolation of the Japanese forces.

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek

In Nanking officials said the National government was determined to meet with force any attempt to force autonomy on the territory south of Hopei and Chahar provinces, and the executive Yuan proclaimed five sweeping reforms designed to stop the spread of the movement. Chiang was hurrying large bodies of troops to the northward. He also sought to hold the support of the Shantung war lord, Han Fu-chu, by entrusting him with the defense of the northern Honan and Shantung frontiers and promising him money and supplies, if needed, to stem invasion. Han Fu-chu of late has been wooed assiduously by the Japanese.

Wang Ching-wei, premier and foreign minister of the Nationalist government, resigned as president of the cabinet. He has not fully recovered from the recent attempt to assassinate him.

BRAZIL was experiencing another revolt, in the northern part of the country. Latest advices said the rebels had control of the city of Natal and that a hot fight was on for possession of Pernambuco. The uprising was laid to the Communists and was believed to be led by Luis Carlos Prestes, Communist leader for all of South America. It was said he planned to spread the movement all over Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Chile.

Under command of Gen. Manuel Rabelo, the federal troops, army and navy airplanes and two cruisers were hurriedly sent northward to combat the rebellion.

Several days later a revolt broke out in Rio de Janeiro, the capital, despite extraordinary precautions. The principal participants there were the aviation forces. They seized the aviation field but government troops recaptured it and it was announced this outbreak had been suppressed.

Finally the Brazilian government announced that the revolt in the North also had been crushed and that 138 persons had been killed in the four days of fighting.

THERE was terror throughout Germany when Hitler started what apparently was to be another "purge." Hundreds of persons were arrested and taken to prison or concentration camps, those taken including some minor officials of the Nazi party in Berlin. Many others were known as Socialists. The Association of Nationalistic Jews, composed of war veterans, was suppressed and its leader jailed.

NOVEMBER 29 had been set as the date for a meeting of the League of Nations sanctions committee to consider the impositon of an oil embargo against Italy, but Premier Laval and British Ambassador George Russell Clerk, after a conference in Paris, recommended that the session be indefinitely postponed, and this action was taken. The statesmen feared early oil sanctions would seriously aggravate the political situation, and Laval thought if he were given more time he might bring about the conciliation of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel.

Premier Laval

There were good reasons for the uneasiness of the French and British governments. Benito Mussolini had bluntly told the world that the imposition of an oil embargo would mean war in Europe, the warning being given through his ambassador to France, Vittorio Cerruti. Furthermore, there was doubt in London and Paris concerning the ability of the United States government to prevent the shipment of oil to Italian ports. In Washington it was reported that Ambassador Augusto Rosso had discussed the matter with Secretary of State Hull, suggesting that attempts to choke off exports of oil, copper, cotton and other commercial articles did not constitute "orthodox" neutrality.

Emperor Haile Selassie made two airplane flights to the fighting fronts in Ethiopia and cheered up his forces so that their resistance to the invasion was measurably stiffened, especially in the South. The government at Addis Ababa announced that its armies had driven the Italian troops back from Gorahai, recapturing the town of Gerlogubi by encircling movements. In the northern sector, according to the official communique, a thousand Italians occupying Makale retreated 60 miles to Adigrat. Losses on both sides were increasing.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES has revived the controversy between the New Dealers and the big steel corporations concerning steel prices. Mr. Ickes said there was "prima facie evidence of collusion" in identical bids on a Florida public works project. The PWA administrator said the four companies bidding $185,000 each on 3,300 tons of steel for a Miami dock—Inland, Carnegie, Jones & Laughlin, and Kalman (a Bethlehem subsidiary)—were the same that submitted identical bids on an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C., and the Triborough bridge in New York city.

Sec'y Ickes

In the two earlier instances German concerns underbid and were awarded the contracts. Amid protests from industry and labor Ickes then halted all additional foreign purchases and raised the differential in favor of domestic materials from 15 to 25 per cent.

There was no foreign bidder on the Miami project and Mr. Ickes said the contract would be awarded to the concern "that is farthest away and has to pay the highest freight bill—the object is to spread prosperity around."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT was mighty busy at Warm Springs studying the departmental estimates for the budget of 1936-37. Representative James P. Buchanan of Texas, chairman of the house appropriations committee, took part in the first conferences and told the correspondents that he would carry a budget of not more than $500,000,000 in excess of estimated revenues through the house by "a devil of a fight." Then Mr. Buchanan, who didn't appear to have White House support for this stand, left suddenly for Washington, refusing to explain his departure; and the conferences continued with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Acting Budget Director Bell and Mark Shields, clerk of the appropriations committee.

The President told the press they were making distinct progress in arranging the federal finances, having already cut the departmental estimates by $400,000,000. He contradicted reports that he was contemplating division of the Ickes PWA and the Hopkins WPA to ease the friction between the two New Deal officials.

ELEVEN American diplomats and naval officers, selected by Secretary of State Hull, have sailed to represent this country in the coming naval conference in London. At their head is Norman H. Davis, the President's ambassador-at-large for Europe, who participated in the preliminary conversations last year. Acting with him will be Undersecretary of State William Phillips and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations. Advisers to the delegation will be Ray Atherton, counselor of the American embassy in London, and E. H. Dooman of the State department, who knows all about Japanese and other Far Eastern affairs.

N. H. Davis

Noel H. Field of the division of western European affairs, who attended the last naval conversations, and Samuel Reber, secretary of the American legation in Bern, Switzerland, will act as technical assistants.

The navy's four technical experts will be Capt. Royal E. Ingersol, Commander Roscoe E. Schuirmann, Lieut. Arthur D. Ayrault, and Lieut. J. R. Fulton.

MEETING in St. Louis, the Mississippi Valley association adopted resolutions opposing any attempt to limit the "right of water carriers to establish and maintain such port to port rates as they see fit."

The convention, which again went on record as opposing the co-ordination of transportation agencies under the interstate commerce commission, criticized I. C. C. rulings "which have the effect of permitting railroads to cut rates . . . for the purpose of killing off waterway transportation."

The delegates, representing midcontinent agricultural, shipping, and industrial interests of 25 states, again opposed ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph of Chicago was elected president of the association.

SOME interesting views on current problems:

Raymond Moley, former member of the "brain trust," told the Association of Buying Officers in New York: "I have said many times that the whole problem of government relief and work relief is a necessary temporary expedient; but it is also a shaky and dangerous one. Every one is willing to recognize that work relief in itself is no curative. It is narcotic in its effect."

Harry W. Nice, Republican governor of Maryland, declared in Chicago that America's constitution is no more in need of change than are the Ten Commandments. The issue in the coming election, he held, is that of free institutions versus dictatorship.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, told Milwaukee Rotarians that the administration is proceeding to the "left," that 97 per cent of the business men of the United States are against it because of the New Dealers' attitude toward the profit system. As prime exponents of the government's present philosophy, Johnson cited Rexford Tugwell, Aubrey Williams, and Harry Hopkins. "The idea of dividing the nation's wealth, as proposed by these gentlemen, is not the way out," he said. "Rather, the thing to be done is to create wealth, with more persons working and each creating new wealth."

PAN-AMERICAN Airways opened a new chapter in the story of aviation when its huge China Clipper carried the first consignment of air mail from Alameda, Calif., to Manila, with stops at Honolulu, Midway islands, Wake island, and Guam. Capt. Edwin C. Musick, veteran chief pilot of the company, was in command of the craft and was aided by a crew of six men. Fourteen passengers started on the flight and twelve were dropped off to relieve the staffs at Midway and Wake. The 1,700 miles between Guam and Manila had not been flown heretofore.

Capt. Edwin C. Musick

After one or two more flights to Manila the clipper will continue to China and operate on through schedules thereafter.

The Philippine Clipper, second of Pan-American Airways' trans-Pacific air fleet, arrived at Alameda from the Atlantic coast and her crew began preparations for a flight to Manila beginning December 6.

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN'S attorneys assert that some of the Lindbergh ransom money has been found in Massachusetts and that their investigators also have discovered some pieces of evidence that are of great importance to the defense. The doomed man himself issued a statement calling on Dr. John F. Condon ("Jafsie") to "make a full confession" of what he knows concerning the kidnaping and murder of Colonel Lindbergh's little son.

GOVERNORS of the federal reserve banks, in the bulletin of the reserve board, have sounded a most cheerful note concerning business conditions. Summing up facts gathered all over the country, they concluded that the United States was undergoing the most substantial economic recovery since the depression began, with every sign pointing to its continuance.

Business activity has been sustained for ten months near the high level it reached the first of the year, the bulletin said, "in contrast to the course of business in the three preceding years when advances were not sustained but were quickly followed by declines."

FOR a long time it has been apparent that there would be a split in the American Federation of Labor over the issue of industrial unionism versus craft unionism. That split now has occurred, and in the ranks of organized labor there is coming a great battle between the two elements. The matter was precipitated by the resignation of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, as vice president of the federation. He is the chief protagonist for unit unionization of mass production of industries, and his opponents, the craft union advocates, are led by William Green, president of the organization. The latter have had a majority in the late conventions of the federation, but Lewis has a lot of followers and is a determined fighter. He has set up separate headquarters in Washington and seven international union leaders joined him immediately. It was reported that the "rebels" had a war fund of $10,000,000. Four-fifths of this came from a special assessment of $1 each on the 4,000,000 United Mine Workers this fall.

John L. Lewis

President Green sent a stern rebuke to Lewis and those associated with him.

ONE hundred years ago Andrew Carnegie was born in Dunfermline, Scotland, and the anniversary was celebrated not only in that town but in Pittsburgh, Pa., and in scores of towns and cities to which the iron master donated public library buildings. In Dunfermline everybody participated in the festivities, for Carnegie practically transformed that city by his gifts and his memory is highly honored. John Finley, associate editor of the New York Times, was a speaker at a formal banquet there.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—There is more desire on the part of President and Secretary of State Hull to co-operate with the League of Nations in the sanctions against Italy than has appeared on the surface. Both regret exceedingly that the neutrality law passed by congress did not go further. They wish that the word "munitions" had been used instead of "arms, ammunition and implements of war," which phrase is so narrow in its strict definition that it could not possibly be stretched to include oil, or copper, for example, without subjecting the administration to another upset in the courts.

But despite this lack of legal authority, the government has been bearing down hard on exporters and would-be exporters of war materials. One of the latest incidents is that the shipping board bureau of the Department of Commerce—survivor of the old shipping board—warned a certain concern about to ship a cargo of oil to Italy that the proposed shipment was "disapproved."

The excuse here was that the ship and cargo would have to run the gauntlet of the League sanctions, and the government had an investment. It so happened that the ship the would-be exporter desired to use had been subsidized.

As a matter of fact, the only risk involved is that in the time elapsing after the sailing and before the ship reached her Italian destination an actual blockade of Italy might be declared. For up to now there has been no more than a hint of actual blockade. No ships have been stopped by British or French warships in the Mediterranean. No threat has been made that any will be.

Nevertheless, insurance on ships traversing the sea that Mussolini claims the British now dominate, but that the Italians ought to, has jumped tremendously. For example, an American importing firm, which brings cargos of figs and dates from Persian gulf ports, has been seriously considering sending this freight overland to Atlantic ports, or else around the Cape of Good Hope.

Change World Cruises

Further, most world-cruise ships for the last month or more have been advertising visits to South Africa, and have been eliminating the Mediterranean entirely, although normally most world tourists want particularly to visit Italy and Greece and the Holy Land.

So that the government, in this raise of insurance rates, which is interpreted naturally enough as a danger signal, is perfectly within its right in seeking to restrain shipments. Yet everybody knows that this is not the real reason at all, but merely an excuse. For the government could be just as much protected in its investment—through subsidy—in ships making the journey through the "war zone" as it is from any other maritime danger.

Questioned about the situation, officials of the shipping bureau replied blandly that the bureau "must conform to administration policy." That is the real answer, although the interesting fact is that the policy has never been stated. It has merely been hinted.

The first hint came when the State department, with no hint of publicity, sought to restrain the Standard Oil from shipping oil to its Italian subsidiary. The company made the thing public by giving out its answer. Standard's real point is also concealed. It would be perfectly willing to stop shipping oil to Italy if it were protected by public action on the part of this government against its Italian subsidiary.

Keen observers here figure the government will do something to restrain copper shipments also, perhaps using the same tactics.

Copying Wilson

President Roosevelt is taking a leaf from the book of Woodrow Wilson in talking over the shoulders of the diplomats to the peoples of the world. The President and his advisers know perfectly well that there is going to be no curtailment of armaments at the disarmament conference to be held in London. It has been a long time since there was the slightest hope of it. Hence the administration's objective has been switched to the future, and from the world's rulers to the world's peoples.

While there is considerable pessimism about this accomplishing anything, no one is particularly disposed to criticize it publicly. Army and navy officers have some bitter words about it in private. They agree with the general feeling that no one now living will be here when the fruit is borne, if ever. But they add that this propaganda will also reach the taxpayers, and through them the congress of the United States.

Hence, they fear, the net result may be to make no change whatever in the armament spending of any other nation, but to tend very directly to slow down such spending by the United States.

In particular, they point out that the one nation which has given less heed to world opinion than any other, for some years, has been Japan. Naval officers, especially, have always believed, and still believe, that war between the United States and Japan is inevitable.

It is commonly known that the Japanese are oppressed by very heavy taxes to carry their armament load. But there is not the slightest indication that the Japanese people intend to rise in their might and demand that their government curtail its military expenditures. On the contrary, all indications are that the Japanese people approve Nippon's militaristic course, believe it to be essential to their future, and are fiercely willing to make any sacrifice for their country.

Military Rule in Japan

Even those most optimistic about America's contention that armament cost should not be increased by any nation concede this. What they hope for is a change of sentiment, perhaps a year from now, perhaps later on.

The answer of the army and navy to this is that if the opinions of the Japanese did change, it would not make any difference. It has been demonstrated too often, they insist, that the Japanese people believe what they are told, and are absolutely under the thumb of the military oligarchy.

In this respect, in the American military view, they differ sharply from two of the most military powers in Europe—Germany and Italy. For the present there is no one to oppose the will of Hitler in Germany or Mussolini in Italy. But no one knows what will be the situation in either country ten years from now. Or even one year from now.

Italy and Germany are each dominated for the time being by one strong man. And no one can venture a prophecy as to what would happen after that strong man passes from the stage.

There is nothing comparable to that in Japan. In Nippon it is a group of high army and navy officers who dominate. The death of any ten of them makes no material difference in the general objective. The policy has been adhered to for many years. It is to dominate China, and make Japan a world power. Ever since the Russo-Japanese war it has been one forward step after another, with an occasional sidestep such as the abandonment of Shantung after the Washington armament conference.

The navy does not even feel that the freedom of the Philippines lessens the danger of war between the United States and Japan.

Canadian Treaty

Down underneath all the clamor against the Canadian reciprocity treaty, expert detectors of popular sentiment here believe the country will approve it. Further, they believe that if the treaty is approved in Ottawa—which incidentally seems by no means certain despite the majority by which MacKenzie King so recently came back into power—the net effect will be a Roosevelt asset at the polls.

Should Ottawa reject the treaty, on the other hand, feeling here is that the net effect will be injurious to the administration in the election next year.

This is based on a fundamental political factor—human nature. Many business men, economists and experts in international trade have figured that if the reciprocity treaty negotiated with Canada in the Taft administration had gone into effect, the net effect would have been beneficial. But no politician who was active at the time doubts that it was a serious handicap to Mr. Taft when he faced re-election.

Had the treaty gone into effect, it is reasoned, and had the opposition to Mr. Taft promised the country to abrogate the treaty, then every one who was directly benefiting under the treaty would have been driven to Taft's defense, to protect their selfish interests.

But there was no possibility, as it appeared when Taft was running for re-election, that the treaty could be revived. Hence there was no selfish element to be driven to Taft's aid, while all and sundry who thought they would have been hurt by the treaty were still resentful at what they thought Taft had tried to do to them, and were easily inflamed against him. This was especially effective in the Northwest.

Lumber Interests Howl

This time the loudest outcries are coming from the Pacific Northwest, where the lumber interests think they would be badly hurt by the treaty. Applying the 1912 chapter to the present situation, if the treaty is rejected the northwestern lumber interests will influence a heavy vote against Roosevelt next year for what he tried to do to them. It is not a question of big special interests affecting the electorate. No one ever accused former Senator Clarence C. Dill of Washington, representing the big interests. He worked for a high lumber tariff because it would benefit his state, and he figured the folks out there would appreciate it. So much has been said by Dill and others that a very considerable segment of the Washington voters are now convinced that Roosevelt simply is not the type to understand their problems.

On the other hand, if the treaty is ratified by Canada, although the feeling in Washington and Oregon on lumber, and perhaps in upstate New York and Wisconsin on that million and a half gallons of cream which may be brought in at reduced duties, will be no different, there will be offsets. For example, the orange growers of California, to say nothing of the producers of other fruits, will want to know if the opposing candidate proposes to abrogate the treaty—to take away the advantage they will be enjoying under it.

We Trust She Remained a Lady Despite Her Loss

A woman, once a great beauty and the talk of two continents, has fallen on hard times. This autumn, unable to replenish her wardrobe as she would have liked, she spent nearly all her tiny clothes budget on a very handsome pair of gloves, because, according to her credo, gloves make the lady. The first time she wore them was at a luncheon party given by Baron Rothschild. Unfortunately, she lost one of them, and observed its loss only after she had arrived home. That evening she received a telephone call from one of the guests at luncheon.

"You lost one of your gloves at luncheon today, dear M . . ." he said. "I picked it up and put it in my pocket. I shall keep it as a token."—June Provines, in Chicago Tribune.

Paging Japan
Black Gold Best for War
The Mighty Airplane
Two Kinds of Treasure

When the Japanese plan to absorb a section of northern China with population of 95,000,000 seemed to have been abandoned, chaos broke loose in northern China. Industrious bandits, without fear of Japan's efficiency, began looting stores and Chinese merchants begged Japan to restore order. Eleven Japanese divisions quartered outside the Great Wall are ready to move in, and Japan will hardly have the heart to stay out under such circumstances. Later Japan will not have the heart to stay out of the Philippines. Japanese confidence in the sun goddess seems justified. The drift is Japan's way, with westerners busy planning to kill each other.

Arthur Brisbane

There are, California tells you, several kinds of gold: yellow gold that took crowds to California in 1849; another yellow gold that grows on orange, lemon and grapefruit trees; the white gold water power rolling from the mountains, to produce black gold, power and fertility, and the oil in the ground.

Mussolini's determination to keep oil flowing into Italy, even at risk of European war, shows that oil is more important in war now than yellow gold. It moves great tanks, keeps the planes in the air; it means motion, and successful motion means victory.

Mighty is the airplane in northern Brazil, where the "elbow" sticks out into the Atlantic. Soldiers said by the Associated Press to be guided by Communists decided to run the government and make it better. They locked up their officers and were just starting the new "better" government when official airplanes came along with bombs.

"Bang" went one or two bombs, aerial machine guns said "rat-tat-tat" a few times.

The revolutionary soldiers said, "That will do," and scattered in the interior. It is hard to "rise and throw off your chains" while capitalism is dropping bombs.

In Jacksonville, Fla., gentlemen fitting out an expedition to hunt for pirate treasure think they know where the gold is. They may find it; probably will not.

Other gentlemen are figuring out similar treasure expeditions in Wall street, regardless of what happened when they did that in 1929.

Men hunting pirate treasure and Wall street treasure will have plenty of excitement, and that probably is well worth the effort. "A dull life is no life."

The great Jonker diamond, biggest uncut stone on earth, is to be cut into smaller pieces, since no one rich enough to buy it now would wear so big a diamond.

It might have been sold to a Russian czar, Turkish sultan or Ethiopian emperor for use in a crown, "to increase majesty." But czars and sultans have vanished, Ethiopia's ruler is short of cash.

The big diamond will be cut into small pieces and sell for about $1,500,000. The largest "piece" will weigh 100 carats, the rest from 10 to 50 carats. Interesting opportunity for deserving Hollywood stars.

John S. Ciemiengo, sixteen, sentenced to die next January in the electric chair, helped George H. Hildebrand, twenty-six, to rob and murder an old poultry farmer.

Sixteen seems rather young for an electric chair candidate, but the judge and jury felt that by disposing of the young murderer now they would avoid robberies and murders in the future. Recent history of youthful criminals makes that probable.

"Foreign observers" in Ethiopia believe that Ethiopia is fighting a lost cause; also that, as the number of wounded increases and the case looks more and more hopeless, there might be a general massacre of whites. If this should happen the "50 to 1" gentlemen of the League of Nations would have themselves to blame.

The "sanctions" and boycott will not prevent Italy defeating Ethiopia, but they do make the Ethiopian ruler overconfident, persuading him to sacrifice lives unnecessarily.

The order for steel made in Germany, to be used in New York's Triborough bridge, which would use taxpayers' money to make jobs abroad, has been canceled definitely.

So all is well that ends well, there.

The response to that piece of foolishness in the way of publicity was emphatic.

Bishops of England's Anglican church, the archbishop of Canterbury leading, denounce Chancellor Hitler's persecution of German Jews, as they well may, and they hope that Christians in Great Britain and elsewhere will "exert their influence."

GHOST STORY

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

"OF COURSE it's ridiculous," Rufe Hitchins said, and then he thrust forward his jaw and glared belligerently at Tom Everson.

"I ain't sayin' it ain't, but, Mister, you ain't gonna git me to sleep all night with you at the old Metcalf place. It's ha'nted!"

Young Tom Everson wanted to laugh, but he didn't.

"So I've heard," he said. "That's why the Evening Post sent me up here in the country—to get the story. Listen, Mr. Hutchins, you're the constable in this bur—town. Don't tell me you're afraid of ghosts!"

"Mebbe I am an' mebbe I ain't. Young feller, the folks of Hammock mountain may be superstitious right enough—I ain't sayin' they ain't—but they ain't fools! An' when men like Lafe Andrews an' Joe Haverhill say they's ghosts in the old Metcalf place, you can lay to it they's ghosts. Lafe an' Joe is smart jiggers an' nothin' much would skeer 'em."

"Just what was it Lafe and Joe claimed they saw the night they took shelter from the storm in the old Metcalf place?"

Constable Hutchins scratched his head.

"It wasn't so much what they saw as what they heard. Noises, like the clankin' of chains. Low moans, like the cry of a lost soul. Footsteps. Deep breathin'. The rattle of skeletons! The sound of—"

"Skip it!" said Tom.

The corners of his mouth twitched as he looked into Constable Hutchins' wide, startled eyes. But he didn't laugh. Something about the way Rufe looked, a dim memory of the look that dwelt in the eyes of other residents of Hammock mountain forestalled the threatening burst of mirth. He turned away instead, strode across the street to his roadster and drove out of town.

Following the directions which had eagerly been given, Tom turned off the main highway a mile north of the business district, followed a weed-grown cartpath into the woods for a mile or so and presently came to a clearing, in the center of which stood what was once a prosperous looking farmhouse.

Neglect and the elements had wrought their havoc, however.

The roof of the porch had fallen in at one end, most of the down-stairs windows were broken; an eaves trough had come loose and was swinging by its good end, producing a creaking sound.

Tom grinned.

"This is the place all right," he muttered. "And what a setting!"

His face became rueful as he cautiously crossed the rotting veranda floor and tried the door.

He was hoping fervently that there would be something in the tale of ghosts Rufe and the others had told him.

Ridiculous, of course, but, man, what a story it would make!

Darkness was setting in fast within the web-canopied living room.

It was already quite black.

Tom produced a candle and lighted it.

Fantastic shadows danced on the walls.

A rat poked its nose from a hole, turned at the strange apparition and retreated with a weird rasping sound of tiny claws on wood.

A spider, suspended from the ceiling like a chandelier, and casting a shadow almost as big as one, began rapidly climbing back to its spun web.

Outside, the swinging eaves trough creaked, and a rising night wind stirred the trees.

Tom looked around him and laughed aloud, knowing vaguely that he had done so because the sound of his own voice was reassuring.

He shuddered and caught himself, not blaming Rufe Hutchins or any one else for refusing to stay the night with him there.

Ridiculous! Absurd! And yet, you couldn't help sensing a certain eeriness!

The atmosphere induced queer thoughts and hallucinations.

Tom lighted his second cigarette and tried to think of other things.

Mary, for example. What a swell kid she was!

Why, last night when he'd said—he broke off thinking and became suddenly rigid, senses attuned, breathing stilled.

From overhead had come a sound. . . . Foolish imagination. . . . No, there it was again. No doubt of it.

Chains dragging across the floor. A padding sound. A groan.

The rattle of bones.

The chain again, nearing what was probably the hall doorway of an upstairs chamber.

Tom bared his teeth in what he thought was a grin.

Unconsciously he wiped sweat from his brow.

Without being aware of it, his knuckles of the hand that gripped the chair-arm had become white.

His eyes, wide and horror-filled, were riveted on the open door, through which he could see the foot of the stairs.

Clink-clunk! Clink-clunk! . . . Gad! This wasn't imagination or mind trickery or anything of the sort.

It was real! Genuine!

Something was coming down those stairs:

Something with chains.

Something mysterious and unreal!

Clink-clunk! Clink-clunk!

Tom was on his feet.

He felt in his hip-pocket, and his fingers closed over the butt of the revolver he had decided to bring along at the last minute. Amusing it had seemed at the time.

Wind whistled around the eaves.

The candle on the table flickered.

There was a rasping sound that Tom knew presently was his own breathing.

Clink-clunk!

The thing was half way down the stairs.

Slow, measured, relentlessly it came.

Tom clutched his revolver, fought mightily against the terror that threatened his sanity.

Sheer will-power caused his feet to move.

He wanted to scream, to cry out, to turn and flee wildly. But he didn't.

He moved toward the hall doorway and looked out. And the thing that he saw caused his flesh to creep. . . .

Constable Rufe Hutchins came to the door with a gun in his hands when Tom knocked and called to him an hour later.

"Oh, it's you?" said Rufe.

"Yes," said Tom grimly. "It's me. Let me in."

Inside the constable's snug living room, Tom said:

"Mr. Hutchins, I've discovered what your ghost is. It's a dog!"

Rufe blinked his eyes.

"Now, look here, young feller, I ain't in no mood to be kidded—"

"Moreover," said Tom firmly, "I found out who the dog belongs to. I carried it to the owner of the house nearest the Metcalf place. A man named Oliver. Oliver admitted the dog was his and proved ownership by beating it nearly to death. Now, get this, Hutchins: That dog had been caught in a steel trap. Oliver, its owner, had been treating it so cruelly that the beast thought the thing on its leg was just another method of abuse devised by its owner. Crazed with pain, it sneaked into the Metcalf place and has been living there ever since, subsisting as best it could by making a painful and nocturnal sortie to neighboring barnyards. Naturally, every time it moved, the chain of the trap made a clanking sound on the floor, which was what you folks thought was a ghost.

"Now, Hutchins, down where I come from we don't let a man get away with abusing dumb animals. We do something about it. And I'm telling you, as constable of Hammock mountain, to do something about Oliver. No, don't think up excuses. I'll make a bargain with you. I'm a newspaper man and I came up here to get a story. If I should write a story about a constable who was afraid of a mere pup caught in a steel trap—well, Hutchins, I don't have to tell you what would happen. On the other hand, I don't have to write the story, that is, if you see your duty about Oliver, I mean."

Constable Rufe expectorated and scratched his head. He eyed the young man thoughtfully, noted the grimness in his eyes, and said:

"It's a bet, young feller. I never did like Oliver nowise."

Philosophically, driving back to town, Tom thought:

"No one would have believed the story anyway. I'll tell the chief there was nothing in it."

He grinned. "I'll tell it to Mary. She likes dumb animals."

Black Eye May Be Start of Serious Affliction

Whether it is only a little mishap or merely a sign of friendly interchange, the much joked about "blinker" or "shiner" may be the beginning of serious eye trouble, according to Dr. Hyman Cohen in "Injuries and First Aid to the Eye" appearing in Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

Lacerated lids may leave disfiguring scars and result in poor closure of the eye. If both the eyeball and the cornea are ruptured, serious consequences follow. Detachment of the retina, hemorrhage behind the eyeball and tearing across of the optic nerve may all result from a pernicious blow on the eye.

The commonest of all eye injuries is caused by foreign particles in the eye. Workers in shops and factories are especially exposed to flying particles and frequently suffer from foreign bodies forcibly driven into the eye. The removal of these particles should not be left to sympathizing friends or to the proddings of drug clerks. It requires the expert attention of the oculist.

Rest is the mother of recovery, no matter what the disease. The eye is naturally a roaming, restless organ. In serious inflammatory conditions it is all the more important that the patient stay in bed and keep the sick eye from trying to follow along in a busy world.

Ground nuts, cultivated in most warm countries, are remarkable in that the pods of the nuts are first formed in the air, and are afterward forced into the ground as they increase in size, and there ripen.

Girl's Fatal Beauty Causes Seven Deaths

Belgrade.—Seven men have died because of the beauty of a young Albanian girl in the frontier village of Vusanja, Jugoslavia.

The girl, Fatima Balidelitch, in 1928 violated the custom of her district by marrying some one in her own village. Up to that time there had been no intermarriage in the village, but a young man in the neighborhood, Shaban Shuti, fell violently in love with the girl and they were married despite the opposition of relatives and public opinion.

The union so offended the feelings of the girl's brothers, that one of them, Suljo, killed his brother-in-law.

In the feud which followed between the families seven men have now been killed.

BRIDE, 76, GROOM, 31, "HAPPY AS LARKS!"

June-December Romance Holds Up After Two Years.

Kansas City, Kan.—Two years of married life has not tarnished the glamour of the June-December romance of Mr. and Mrs. Maynard O. Curtis, who eloped eight days after the divorce of Mr. Curtis was granted in Wyandotte county two years ago, they agreed.

Mrs. Curtis, now seventy-six years old, gazed fondly at her husband, now thirty-one, who resembles a studious grandson rather than a still indulgent bridegroom.

"We're happy as larks," Mrs. Curtis averred, bright eyes blazing. "I still love him and he still loves me.

"If God sees fit to sanctify our marriage I don't see why mere mortals choose to attempt to interfere with our happiness. Even my daughters still won't speak to me, but that doesn't make any difference to me. He is a good boy and takes care of me wonderfully.

"You can tell everybody that we had a lovely celebration of our second anniversary. We stayed home, just the two of us, and enjoyed each other's company. And we'll still be enjoying each other's company as long as we live. This is one marriage that is going to last."

Mr. Curtis was no less enthusiastic about the wedded bliss of the couple. Curtis said:

"She is everything to me a wife should or could be.

"She has a temper but I have not, so we get along all right. We haven't had a single 'fuss' since we got married and I'll bet not many married couples can say that.

"We started out to make this marriage a success and despite the criticism that has been thrown in our way since we were married, I believe we can.

"She's the best housekeeper I know," he continued, disdaining her protests, "but she lost her teeth some time ago. We're having some new ones made, though, and she'll soon be able to eat steaks right along with me. And because she's been so nice about me kidding her about her teeth I'm going to take her to see her sister after she gets her new teeth."

Girl Conquers Paralysis and Walks to the Altar

Kansas City, Mo.—Life has taken on a new meaning for the former Miss Madeline Ruhling of Independence, a suburb of this city.

She was stricken with infantile paralysis when a child. Last year one of the most difficult surgical operations was performed. Several operations followed during which she acquired the title "the girl of many operations." One operation required six months before its success could be determined.

During the many operations Miss Ruhling received letters and flowers from persons in various parts of the country attracted by her courage. One who sent flowers was Bernard Rauchwerk, Irvington, N. J.

She answered Rauchwerk's letter. Fox six months he wrote her daily, sending flowers weekly. When the success of her numerous operations seemed in the balance he hurried to Independence to see her. His visit cheered her up considerably.

Today she can walk and is now Mrs. Bernard Rauchwerk. They were married at Rauchwerk's home.

Pet Doe Is Jealous of Dog; Tramples Youngster

Gold Beach, Ore.—A pet doe deer, thought to have become jealous because the two-year-old son of Charles Billings, farmer, paid more attention to his puppy than to it, trampled the child painfully. His mother killed the animal with a rifle when it chased her from the boy as she attempted a rescue. The doe belonged to a neighbor.

Dog Obeys Traffic Light

Edmonton, Alta.—Edmonton has a dog which obeys traffic signals. It is a little wire-haired terrier. When it goes romping around in the downtown area, the pup stops abruptly when the red traffic light flashes and waits for the green before crossing the street.

Good Dairy Cows Pay Best Profit

Low Producers Money-Losers; Should Be Replaced by Better Stock.

By R. H. RUFFNER, Head Animal Husbandry Dept., North Carolina State College.—WNU Service.

Ten good cows are more profitable than twenty low producers. In fact, low producers are often an expense rather than a profit. A cow giving six quarts of milk a day just about pays for her feed. She pays nothing for stable rent or for the labor required for her care and milking.

But a cow giving ten quarts of milk daily will yield a net profit of $40 a year. Ten such cows will produce a clear profit of $400 a year. Cows giving more milk produce an even larger return. The exact figure will vary with local conditions, the price of milk, and the cost of feed.

Many dairymen who did not make money last year are thinking of buying high priced cows. In many instances they would do better to sell their lowest producers to raise the efficiency of their better animals.

Every dairyman should seek to develop a herd whose average production is at least 8,000 pounds of milk a year or more.

Proper feeding and management of the herd will do a great deal to stimulate milk production and keep it at a high level. And good feed, much of which can be produced at home, need not cost more than the wrong kind of feed.

Another important step in herd improvement is the breeding of cows to bulls which can transmit to their daughters a capacity for heavy milk production. As these calves mature, they may be kept in the herd while their somewhat lower producing dams are sold.

Expert Tells Why Horses' Feet Require Great Care

Horses are shod primarily to prevent the hoof from wear, although many farm horses working in fields and on dirt roads are never shod. In addition to protection, says R. B. Cooley, professor of animal husbandry at Purdue university, shoes, if calked, provide a grip on soft ground or ice, if calks are sharp. By virtue of the weight they impose shoes serve to balance and govern the stride and to accentuate the size and shape of the foot.

Hereditary transmission plays an important part with the foot of a horse. There is probably no serious defect in conformation that is transmitted with any more regularity than are small, shallow, shelly feet. Obviously, it is important to mate good footed seed stock in order that one may reasonably expect the offspring with good feet.

In a state of nature wear does not exceed growth. Even when born with good feet, most colts require their feet trimmed and leveled occasionally, more especially during their period of rapid growth. This aids in preventing the development of rather serious foot and leg malformations not easily corrected later.

Protecting Fruit Trees

The only safe way to prevent rabbits from gnawing the bark off the trunks of young fruit trees is to wrap the base of the trunks from the ground to a height of about 18 to 20 inches. Where the branches are less than 18 inches above the soil, the wrappers should include both trunk and branches to a height of about 18 to 20 inches. Various kinds of wrapping material may be used, advises a writer in the Missouri Farmer. Some of the most common are 1-inch mesh poultry wire, galvanized window screen wire, galvanized wire netting having 3 or 4 meshes to the inch, hardware cloth, old newspapers, gunny sacks torn in strips 6 to 8 inches wide, and cornstalks.

Around the Farm

Oats, barley and spring wheat furnish the better cereal straws for feeding, in the order named.

Rhodes grass from South Africa, first planted by Cecil Rhodes, is a perennial very useful in alkaline sections.

Hay, corn fodder, and even oat straw may be used in large part to reduce the cost of wintering the idle horse.

The boll weevil has been known in the cotton belt since 1892, when it first entered the United States from Mexico.

Texas plans to have 2,500,000 trees ready for planting next spring on a 300-mile shelter belt designed to reduce wind erosion.

The most intensely cultivated ground is believed to be in an area of 1,000 acres in Hertfordshire, England, which is entirely under glass.

Heavily russeted apples tend to shrivel in common storage.

Except for regular cold storage, the best place to store cabbage is in a specially-built, above-ground warehouse that is well insulated to prevent rapid changes in temperature.

Yellow corn, in addition to being an excellent source of heat and energy producing nutrients in the ration, is also valuable as a carrier of vitamin A. This vitamin is not found in white corn or in other cereals.

Social and Personal Mention

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE, Social Editor

"Christmas—the season for kindling the fire of hospitality in the hall, the genial fire of charity in the heart."

December! Bluebirds! Christmas! Happiness ahead! Don't you love it? The hurrying, busy days planning scheming, shopping, waiting, hoping, dreaming bout Old Santa Claus?

Immediately after Thanksgiving everybody begins planning for that joyous season known as Christmas! Something positively electric gets in the atmosphere. Collegiates begin their tasks a bit happier, for just around the corner is "Home again for Christmas"! Everybody is on the "up and up". As far as I am personally concerned, something in me goes absolutely "hay wire" and concentration is a thing of the past. Counting off the calendar days until Christmas is my happiest occupation. Plain old "Christmas spirit" is the diagnosis and when it "hits you"—you might just as well get going! There is no such thing as keeping your mind on things that should be done. It is just the time to do the things you have wanted to do all the year, and on account of so many things you HAD to do—you could not get around to it! I like to go browsin garound, ringing a few friendly door bells—smell the fruit cake cooking. Draw up a chair into a congenial group and chat by a log fire. Let memories of those early Christmases come crowding up for review—when you stood a shadowy little figure on the long-winding stairway, about dawn, and found your way into the fire-lit living room, and beheld the "doll' of your dreams—just waiting to be clasped into eager arms and the little buggy to take her for a ride! Oh Boy—can you ever forget it? Never!

Now listen you Mothers and Dads—You owe it to your kiddies to take them to the Magic City for a day anyway! In Loveman's window they will see life sized figures of Mother Goose as she tells her stories about the little brown bear—Old Humpty-Dumpty, and other well beloved figures of your childhood days—all electrically operated and you, too, will love—just watching them!

Now, if December no longer charms you as far as toys are concerned—You might draw the old arm chair up close to the fire, draw the curtains against the cold, frosty night—and take stock of yourself—See what the matter is— Grow retrospective! Check up on your failures and successes. The glow of the Yule tide logs will doubtless make success seem brighter, and even the failures you have known and the disappointments you have encountered will lose their sting under their cheerful radiance.

Christmas time, is to us the happiest, brightest, most beautiful season of the whole year—but we will tell you more about it in the Christmas issue of the Democrat—on December 19th! Watch for it!

The mail bag today yielded one of the cleverest letters we have received since traveling the journalistic route. For its originality, sincerity, and unusual style of expression—and the lasting quality of the closing remark, "Your friend until "Calamity" (his wife) strikes". We reprint it for your entertainment, and wish for our friend on Sassafras Farm a long life and a merry one.

Sassafras Farm,
December 1, 1935.

"Dere Miss Wallace:-

Yesterday, I sez to my old woman, sez I—"What the Shelby County Democrat needs is another Will Rogers." Will wuz just a old country hoosier like me, and I think perttv near every body liked him, and I don't see why we can't have more men like us.

Course my old lady don't think Will and me is in the same class, guess she thinks I am a little bit higher up than him, but anyway, I'm broadminded and I liked his style. Only thing I didn't like about him wuz, he had to read everything he knew in the papers. He didn't no nothing fur hisself, like me, cause he allus sed "All I know is what I read in the papers." Couse readin is alrite, I aint got nothin' agin it, I can read some myself. I could fore I got so fur in the hole, trin' to raise ennuf cotton to buy enuf meat t eat with my corn bread for breakfast, that I had to quit takin' your paper to read. I couldn't read it in the day time cause, as I sed before, I didn't have the time, and it's jes naturally to hot in the summer, to read by a pine not fire, like Abe Lincoln an Ben Franklin did. So you see, I jes have to get most of what I no outten my head. Sometime when my old lady (who is named CALAMITY) has one of her cranky spells, she sez I aint got nothin' in my head but hot air an I would be jest as well off without one, and she'd be a whole lot better off, but we kaint agree on that either...'Cause I think the head is a mighty importnat piece of machinery specially MY head. Take your thinkin' apparatus for instance, it is something you kaint control, it jumps out when you least expect it to, and fer myself it's a powerful good thing for me that so much of what goes on in my head kant be spoke out loud. I only let a little of my life come to the surface for the old woman to see, but I guess it's alrite for us to dream and keep our thoughts to our self in secret, if they don't leave us with no guilty feelings.

Well, guess I'd better close for this time, jest thought I'd rite you a few lines, course if you think Jedge wont git jealous, and if you agree with me, instead of my ole lady, and if she don't ketch up with what I am a doin' I'll try and write you agin every chance I git. Cause I like to be a good neighbor especially to good lookin' women. Please do not cut out HEART DRIFTS.

Don't try to find out who I am and I'll be yore friend, until———CALAMITY strikes."

(And so my good friend, there you are. I shall risk the Judicial jealousy and you can take care of—CALAMITY. At any rate the "article" is published as it!)

The many friends in Shelby County of the Rev. Russell Johnson, former resident of Columbiana, will be delighted to learn that he has recently been installed as pastor of the Oakhurst Presbyterian Church in Atlanta, Ga. Although Mr. Johnson is only 29 years of age, he has been preaching for the past twelve years, and has held pastorates in six fields in the Birmingham district. He is a former honor graduate of Shelby County High School. He is also a graduate of Birmingham-Southern, Princeton University and Columbia Seminary.

Our good friend, Postmaster C. E. Niven, has strongly called our hands on a statement we made regarding the mailing of Chriistmas cards, and the amount it will take to say "Merry Christmas' etc. It seems we are in error, and that you can't even say "Merry Christmas" to any body anywhere in town or out unless you place a ONE and ONE-HALF cent stamp on the envelope. We were mis-informed when we said you could send the age-old greeting for one little "copper". We beg pardon for the error, and the only good part about it is, that we have learned from Mr. Niven that he was kept so busily engaged in contradicting what we said that he did not have time to "wait on the customers at the window"—This spells the fact to us that YOU and YOU read the DEMOCRAT, and this encouraging knowledge was worth "going wrong on facts and figures" to find out!

The most striking messengers that come to plead for our attention are the little Christmas Seals. This year marks their 29th appearance through out the United States in the interest of tuberculosis. Tuberculosis is still the country's greatest health problem. It causes 70,000 deaths annually.

Christmas seals offer us the opportunity to help others, to protect ourselves and to assist in spreading "good will to men" by their chereful appearance on our letters and packages. We heartily endorse the statement "It takes Christmas Seals to make it Christmas mail." Buy your quota today!

One of the most unique and useful gifts for Christmas is a Utility Package composed of various indispensable toilet articles you will need for a week end trip. All compactly arranged in an adorable little "kit"—just to fill your requirements when needed. Mrs. A. R. Cooper, who represents the Company specailizing in these articles, wilil be delighted to show them to you—and we will guarantee, if you see them, you will buy one. Both "gents" and Ladies will be delighted to own one. Take this tip from Personal Mention, and look them over.

Jack Cooper, who has been away from the "old home town" for the past several months, is at home until after the Christmas hloidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cooper.

Mrs. D. S. Lightcap delightfully entertained the Culture Club on Thursday, November 21. Mrs. Homer J. Walton had charge of the program, and gave an interesting talkette on Walt Disney and hiis famous "Silly Symphonieis". Boston Rook was then played and after the social hour, a delicious salad course was served to 14 members who enjoyed Mrs. Lightcap's always charming hospitality.

The new book by Kathleen Norris, "Three Men and Diana", was presented to the Club Library.

Mrs. Alice Carlisle and Mrs. Nolan after being delightfully entertained in Columbiana, by their hosts, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis and numerous friends in Columbiana, returned to their home in Louisville, Ky., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Davis entertained at a dinner party on Thanksgiving in honor of Mrs. Alice Carlisle of Louisville, Ky.

From fruit cocktail through turkey (and everything that goes with it) there was one round of merriment. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are ideal hosts, and "Lulabelle," the chef-ess (:) excelled herself in preparing the delicious viands.

Enjoying this hospitality were: Mrs. Charles Meroney, Miss Eloise Meroney of Montevallo, Mr. Hardegree of Ashland, Mr. and Mrs. Levert Christian and Mrs. Rosa Teague of this city, and the honoree; Mrs. Carlisle.

It was a day ever to be remembered—Mr. and Mrs. Davis rank first, last and all the time in making their home a most attractive and delightful spot for their many friends.

One of the happiest gatherings we have heard of on Thanksgiving, was the birthday anniversary celebrated in the hospitable home of our friends Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Bearden, when Mrs. Bearden was the honoree. Mrs. Bearden's birthday falls every seven years on Thanksgiving Day, and especially joyous was the occasion this year when intimate friends and mem bers of the family met to pay loving tribute to this dear little lady, who received graciously the good wishes of members of the dinner party grouped around the festive board.

May we personally add our hearts best wiishes for continued happiness and many more 'thankful' occasions?

Mr. and Mrs. Nath Atchison are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a little baby girl in their home on December 2nd.

By the way—we are wondering WHO the New Year Baby will be this year. Each year since the Democrat came to make its home in Shelby County, we have given a years subscription to the first little "blessed event" that Mr. Stork brought in Shelby County. Send in the name—"Mr. and Mrs."....

The members of the Young Matrons Class of the Methdist Church. Mrs. D. S. A neat sum was realized to be used for benevolent purposes during the Christmas season.

Clay Lester and Mr. Cartright of Birmingham, were pre-holiday visitors in the Democrat offices this week. Mr. Cartright was hunting quail in the hills of old Shelby--where we understand they are plentiful this season.

The Rev. and Mrs. Henry M. Hurst entertained the stewards and their wives on Saturday evening, November 30th, from 8to 10:30 P. M. The house was beautifully decorated with colorful autumn leaves. Mrs. Hurst, appropriately gowned in a black velvet dinner gown, was assisted in receiving the guests by her daughter, Miss Mary Moore Hurst, beautifully gowned in a blue velvet dinner gown. Lively games and contests marked the evening of congenial enterainment. By popular vote, Prof. E. H. Childs was declared 'the best looking' Dr. James Crawford 'the best dressed,' James R. White, 'the most dignified,' W. L. Christian 'the most popular.'

A delicious salad course was served the guests, by Mrs. Howard Whittaker and Mrs. Doyce Mitchell who assisted the gracious hostesses on this gala occasion.

"A few years ago most of us had too much money in closed banks; now we hardly manage to keep anything in the open ones.'

The movement to light and decorate Columbiana for the Christmas holidays is meeting with full cooperation from all citizens. Well lighted towns prove a wonderfully valuable trade incentive. Illuminating Columbiana last year, under the artistic direction of Mr. Patterson, of the Alabama Power Company's official staff, made Little Old Main Street one of the most beautifully lighted thoroughfares in the State. Progressive towns and cities over the State are giving increased attention to this holiday detail.

Stores along "Your Little Main Street and Mine" have already caught the holiday spirit and the windows are taking on a festive air——New stock of goods and toys of all descriptions are arriving daily, and we personally have found so much fun peeking in the mysterious looking packages received in the Yellow Front Store that it has been hard to remain in the office long enough to write and tell you all about all the wonderful collection of Christmas goods your own stores in your own town will offer for your approval. Visit them before going elsewhere to buy.

Don't miss "China Seas" at the Dixie Theatre on Thursday and Friday nights. Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow and Clark Gable will star in this excellent production.

Mrs. Claud Fore, after a series of weeks in the hospital, we are delighted to report, is at home again.

The many friends of J. B. Turner are glad to know he is able to be in town again. He is one citizen in Columbiana who is always missed when he fails to appear on Main Street.

"So Red The Rose," which you have been waiting to see, will be shown by Eddie Watson at the Strand Theatre in Montevallo on next Monday and Tuesday nights. Matinee performances every day at 3:40. See Will Rogers in his last picture, "In Old Kentucky", at this popular Theatre tonight and Friday night.

Judge W. W. Wallace and Harold Harlin spent Thursday in Ashland, attending official duties in Clay County.

Miss Jo Barefield, after a delightful visit to Washington thru the holiday season, has returned to Columbiana.

Did you hear that unanimous round of applause? Want to know what it was for? All right, here is the perfectly good reason. The hearty and cordial welcome from practically 2000 readers of the Democrat which L. H. ELLIS, prominent attorney, received when he drew up his chair into the friendly circle of Democrat readers. On this happy note we shall close this page this week--with thanks and appreciation for all friends who have made possible the success we have known in the production of "Alabama's Most Distinctive Weekly, and Shelby County's Leading Newspaper."

WATER IMPORTANT TO PRODUCE EGGS

Tests Reveal Laying Birds Must Drink Often.

By H. H. Alp, Poultry Extension Specialist, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

It takes water as well as feed to produce eggs. This means that since hens have very little water storage capacity, water must be supplied at all times if the flock owner expects to take advantage of higher egg prices now in prospect.

Approximately nine pounds of water are required for each dozen eggs laid, according to records of daily water intake of 60 White Leghorn pullets over a period of four weeks.

Another significant fact brought out by the trials was that egg production increased almost in direct proportion to increased consumption of water. During the first week the hens drank approximately 2.16 pounds of water each. Egg production during the same week averaged 2.99 eggs to the hen.

During the last week of the trials water consumption averaged 3.08 pounds, or about 138 per cent of the first week's average. Egg production during the last week averaged 4.19 eggs, or approximately 140 per cent of the first week's production. These figures indicate that where the ration is adequate, plenty of drinking water will help boost the laying efficiency of hens.

The water furnished should always be clean. Where possible it is advisable to replenish the supply often so as to keep the water in the containers fresh. Fountains of fairly large capacity are the most satisfactory, especially if they are of the type that prevents the birds from contaminating the water.

Gather Eggs Often, Says College Poultry Expert

Frequent gathering of eggs is one important way of preserving egg quality, says D. C. Henderson, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college. To prevent broken eggs and dirty eggs and to prevent the first egg laid in a nest from being warmed by the body heat of other hens using the same nest, it is advisable to gather the eggs frequently during the day.

In a recent survey on this subject it was found that 64 per cent gathered their eggs twice daily, 25 per cent gathered three times daily, 7 per cent four times a day, 2 per cent once a day and 1 per cent five times a day. Where poultry was kept as part of a general farm business the eggs were gathered ordinarily twice daily, usually at noon and again at night. Those who gathered their eggs more frequently were generally the producers who specialized in the poultry business.

House Pullets Early

Fall and winter egg production may be improved by housing the pullets early. Thoroughly clean the laying house and cover the floor with straw or some other suitable litter, however, before moving the birds from the brooder house or range shelter. Numerous poultry diseases may be carried over if the laying house is not cleaned and disinfected. The house should be dry when the pullets are moved into it. Separate houses and ranges for old hens and pullets will also help to prevent the spread of disease and parasites from old birds to the young flock of pullets.—Wallaces' Farmer.

Keeping Monthly Record

All things considered, the monthly record is to be recommended over weekly, or seasonal records, says a writer in the Rural New-Yorker.

To force oneself to check up on what has been happening in each poultry flock at the end of each calender month is good business and worth doing. It is vitally important to know both good and bad points in the poultry flock performance at least that often, in order to make changes, if necessary, to stop leaks or improve weak places, or to stress stronger points.

The Minorca Breed

The Minorca breed belongs to the Mediterranean group of fowls. Some authorities claim that they were the foundation stock from which the Black Spanish have come. Edward Brown, the foremost English authority on poultry claims that a fowl known as the Castilian was the original type of all Mediterranean breeds. In Spain, he writes, it is believed that it was introduced during the time when the Moors held that country and it is often called "the Moorish fowl."

Producing Heavier Turkeys

Heavier turkeys are produced at the greatest cost per pound and usually represent 65 to 70 per cent of the total weight of the birds marketed, so this increased price for heavy tom turkeys will mean a material increase in returns to the producer. Since the last holiday season, according to an authority, the turkey market has shown a good, healthy condition, with more birds being consumed in the past year and with higher prices being paid for the birds.

PEOPLE FEAR THE THINGS THEY DO NOT UNDERSTAND

The beautiful voice of a famous opera singer issuing forth in song caused a panic on board a ship!

Seriously—that is the content of a news dispatch from off the coast of Australia where an American ship carrying explorers was recently anchored. The voice of the singer came through a gramophone, and the audience among whom it caused a panic was composed of natives, who ran in terror from something that they did not understand.

It may seem incomprehensible to us that a beautiful voice should instill dislike or fear. Whatever the language of the song, you may say, is not beautiful singing beautiful to all who can hear—as the trilling of a bird must sound the same to men of any color and any language?

But the beauty of the voice is obscured by the fact that its source is something the natives do not understand. For that reason it is an object of suspicion—and of fear.

If we stop to think about it, it will surprise many of us to realize how much we have in common with those Australian natives in that we frequently refuse to see beauty in the things we do not understand. We too are suspicious and fearful of things we do not know. Most of the world's bigotry and prejudice springs from ignorance. And many of us, if we but realized it, create a spectacle no less foolish and unreasonable than those natives in panic over a beautiful voice issuing from a gramophone when we condemn without investigation, when we turn without consideration from things which are new, things which are different, ways to which we are not accustomed.

Fishermen Stranded for Five Days on Sea Bottom

Thousands of fishermen returning to Caspian ports recently told an astonishing story of having been marooned on the bottom of the sea for five days. They reported that at the busiest period of the fishing season the sea itself retired from under the fleet.

The sea receded along 150 miles of the northern shoreline, leaving the boats stuck several kilometers from solid earth. Airplanes dropped food to the stranded men until the tide flowed back and allowed them to refloat their ships.

Glamour, Romance in Evening Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF THE revival of the luxurious, the more elegant, the romantic, the dramatic, the glamorous in fashion indicates a turning of the tide as they say it does, from a season of depression to an era of prosperity and good times, then indeed have we cause to rejoice for the present signs in the matter of opulent dress are most propitious.

The new fashions, especially formal modes, are not only glamorous and elegant beyond anything known for years but they add to their fascination in that they seem to have recaptured the glories, the poetry, the vision and the imagination, the art, as expressed in lovely apparel created throughout the ages.

At a recent style showing given by the Chicago wholesale market council the gowns for formal wear, three of which are herewith illustrated, confirmed the feeling that we are entering a fashion era wherein a new spirit of elegance pervades.

Eloquent of classic beauty and statuesque dignity which carries the grace of sculptural lines are the new evening gowns of Grecian inspiration. Extreme interpretations of modes a la Grecque are seen in the draped themes of Vinnet and other Paris designers. Long flowing scarfs, huge wing sleeves, draped side pleatings are all shown in the new soft quality-kind silk crepes and velvets. Other gowns show skirts pleated all around of floating billowy masses of chiffon, or slim dresses with draperies (often pleated) in long cascades from the shoulder, to form a short train at the side or back.

Sumptuous fabrics, for which the present season is noted, bespeak the rich beauty of Italian influence, especially the magnificent velvets in warm deep purples and reds and greens, such as have lived through the centuries in old master paintings and frescoes.

The versatility of the present mode would make it appear as if Oriental princesses had come to life, in the new harem drapes and metal cloth turbans and sari scarfs and head coverings. Persian colorings and patternings, Chinese embroideries carry the spirit of the Far East into the immediate fashion program. Then there is the Russian influence which has an all-important influence on current style trends, as manifest in the smart high cossack turbans and fur bordered tunic blouses and coats and suits.

Of course we must not neglect to make mention of the picturesque robe de style gowns which have and are bringing so much of romance into the modern fashion picture. In these you may be as bouffant and rococco as were lovely ladies in the king's court in olden days of pomp and glory when George the Fourth was king.

Speaking of the bouffant we are minded to call your attention to the charming dress centered in the illustration. It demonstrated at first glance to the audience gathered at the style revue held in Chicago, the fact of high quality emphasized in a superb taffeta glinting with metalized highlights. To the right, in the picture, is a very lovely evening ensemble fashioned of one of the new rapturous, scintillating silver lame weaves such as are so smartly in vogue this season. Its styling accents a to-be-envied slenderized figure. Front skirt fullness, high-front, halter-neck bodice, extreme low-back decolletage, jeweled belt buckle are all highspots of note. To the left, a gown of pearl dot satin bespeaks Grecian inspiration via heavy golden cords and tassels.

AT FOOTBALL GAME

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For the football game, school, shopping or any daytime wear the above outfit is always correct. The coat is French lapin over a Scotch plaid dress in brown and red. The accessories are in brown to match the coat which may be worn with a suit on cold days. The swagger coat with its youthful lines is one of the tailored woman's highlights this season. Its smart simplicity of line distinguishes her wherever she goes, with no fussiness, but pleasing femininity.

FABRIC KNOWLEDGE AIDS WISE BUYING

Fabric knowledge is part of your fashion education. The smart woman knows that. It isn't the initial cost of a dress, it's the upkeep that counts. When you are confident that your taffeta will stay crisp; that your satins will hold their luster; that your chiffons will retain their loveliness and never get sleazy or sloppy; when you know that your sheers will hold their shape and that your crepes won't ultimately sag under an avalanche of beading or braid, that your clokys will stay in, and that your drapes will not sag—then, and only then, are you well dressed.

Women are rapidly learning to find out all these things before they buy a dress. They are learning to buy predictable merchandise.

U. S. Designers Following Glittering Fabric Trend

The French started it, but American designers were quick to follow the new trend of glittering fabrics for afternoon and evening year. A survey just made of American textiles discloses that every important manufacturer in New York has designed and presented materials to achieve unusual brilliant effects. Cabled reports on the first fall openings of the Paris dressmakers still further indicate the advent of sparkling fabrics.

Tailor-Made Influence Is Shown in Evening Gowns

Paradoxical as it may appear, the tailor-made influence has extended to dinner gowns this year. Worth launches wool-back silk velvet in dinner tailleurs with wrap-around skirts and bloused bodices, and Patou and Schiaparelli also favor evening tailleurs in silk velvet.

Lesson for December 8

NEHEMIAH REBUILDING THE WALL OF JERUSALEM

LESSON TEXT—Nehemiah 4:6-9, 15-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—The people had a mind to work. Nehemiah 4:6.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When Friends Work Together.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Team-Work.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC — Co-operation in Religious Work.

I. Nehemiah's Mission to Jerusalem (Neh. 2)..

While performing his official duty as cupbearer to the Persian king, Nehemiah learned of the distress of his brethren at Jerusalem. The walls of the city were broken down, its gates burnt, and the remnant of the captives were in great affliction and reproach. This news greatly moved him. He definitely asked God to give the king a favorable attitude toward his project. In answer to his prayer he was granted a leave of absence from the Persian court and credentials from the king. He journed to Jerusalem and made a survey of the city by night without disclosing his purpose to anyone. Having thus obtained first-hand information, he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem."

II. Preparation for the Building (Neh. 3).

The division of labor in this project displayed Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy. Observe some outstanding features of his administrative work.

1. He laid stress upon indifference. In administrative tasks it is proper that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action serves as a warning to the unfaithful and encouragement to the faithful.

2. Help rendered by the women (v. 12). It is a fine thing for the women to take hold even in building a wall when there are no men to do it.

3. Stress laid upon earnestness of some (v. 20). Recognition of fidelity will spur one on to faithful performance of his task.

4. Every one built over against his own house (vv. 10, 23, 28). There is no incentive for exertion quite so strong as that which concerns a man's own family.

5. Certain guilds of men undertook certain work (vv. 8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and occupation usually work best together.

III. Hindrances Encountered (4:1-6:14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballat and Tobiah (4:1-6; cf. 2:19, 20). The oppressors of God's servants frequently begin by hurling shafts of ridicule at them.

2. Conspiracy for a sudden attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw the work was actually succeeding, they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic.

3. Conspiracy with the Jews (4:10-23). They sought, by means of the Jews from the outside, to discourage those on the inside.

4. Greed and oppression of the rich (5:1-13).

The Jews of that day, like the profiteers of our day, took advantage of the poor and oppressed them so that they mortgaged their land and even sold their daughters into slavery.

5. Scheme to take Nehemiah's life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every other way, they craftily sought to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him.

IV. The Wall Completed (6:15-7:4).

So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When their enemies saw that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually completed, they were cast down, for they perceived that the work was of God. Upon the completion of the work, Nehemiah set his brother to rule over Jerusalem and gave instructions as to the opening and closing of the gates of the city. May we learn from this:

1. That though God's children are besought by enemies they should not fear.

2. When beset by enemies we should pray (4:9).

a. They set a watch (4:9).

b. Men were permittted to be with their families (4:13) and would thus fight better.

c. Half worked and half watched, all armed for battle.

d. They worked with sword in one hand (4:17).

e. They slept in their clothes, ready for attack (4:23). Genuine faith is always accompanied with precautionary means.

RATTLESNAKE PETE TELLS KILLING OF WILD BILL HICKOK

Eyewitness' Story of Tragedy Differs Somewhat From Popular Version.

Deadwood, S. D.—Rattlesnake Pete loped into town and announced between tobacco chaws that he had a brand new version of the slaying of Wild Bill Hickok.

Rattlesnake Pete rode into town from apparently nowhere. But ten minutes after he strode bow-leggedly down the crooked gulch that is this western town's main street, everyone knew that Rattlesnake Pete had hit Deadwood again.

Says He Saw Slaying.

The grizzled veteran of the days when buffalo roamed the prairies and Indians ruled the range said he was in Deadwood that historic night when Jack McCall drew his gun on Hickok in a saloon.

"Wild Bill and Jack McCall rode into town together the night before Wild Bill was killed," Rattlesnake Pete related.

"I guess no one ever knew it before, but those boys were pals. I know because I was there. McCall killed Wild Bill because he was jealous of him. That was the only reason."

The popular version of Hickok's slaying is that he was shot after a poker game in which he had taken all of McCall's money.

There was a splatter of tobacco juice in the dust and Rattlesnake Pete went on, warming to his subject.

"Calamity Jane, Poker Alice Tubbs and Jennie Wheeler arrested McCall at Cheyenne. They took him to Yankton for trial, but McCall said he wanted a change to Bonhomme county. It was there that the trial was held."

Hanging Businesslike Affair.

Rattlesnake Pete spared no words of his limited but colorful vocabulary in describing the hanging of McCall. It was quick and businesslike, he said, and McCall broke down at the end.

Then lest some greenhorn doubt the veracity of his tale, Rattlesnake Pete drew his black brows together, glared at his awed listeners and said:

"How do I know? I was there. I sat on my white pony just a little ways from the scaffold and saw the whole thing."

His story of Wild Bill was not the only one that Rattlesnake Pete brought with him. In mind and soul he went back to glamorous days of '76, when the blood-soaked earth gave freely of its gold to the roaring mining camps. He shifted his quid and started anew:

"I'm the cowboy who rode the horse from Chardron to Chicago in the world's fair of 1893. I rode it in fourteen and three-fourths days, registering my horse every sixty miles. It was a thousand miles and I got a thousand dollars for it. I was the only cowboy who got it.

"Would I do it again?" Rattlesnake Pete perked up at a question. "Just show me the color of your thousand dollars, pardner. Let me feed this here pony and I'll be in Chicago a week come next Friday."

Mox, the Traveled Dog of Culture, Passes On

Denver, Colo.—Mox, the dog, is dead. He was an unusual dog—he had breeding, education, travel. The way he carried his noble Dobermann Pinscher head marked him as a gentleman. The venerable fellow lay down to sleep under the big elms of his late master's home recently, an honorable twenty-year career at an end.

Mox was born in Germany and trained from puppyhood for the Berlin police secret service. The mayor of Berlin gave him to Jack Dempsey, then world's heavyweight champion, who brought him to the United States. Dempsey gave Mox to the late Hary H. Tammen, co-publisher of the Denver Post.

Mox was sullen, forlorn, until Tammen spoke to him in German; the publisher was rewarded with a leap and a lick. Tammen substituted English words for German, and Mox rapidly became naturalized.

Mox became a familiar figure in Denver, constantly guarding his militant publisher-master, and running errands. He became reconciled to his master's death in 1924, but recently he became infirm. Mrs. Tammen had him put to sleep and laid him under the elms.

WAR'S MENACE

By VISCOUNT CECIL

THE nations, in America no less than in Europe, are preparing for further war. More money is at the present time being spent for armies, navie and air forces than ever before in peacetime. Moreover, one great country, in defiance of all treaty obligations, has launched a war of conquest against another. And yet the contest which finished in 1918 was a war to end war.

We are drifting toward another world catastrophe worse even than the last. Can nothing be done to prevent it? Certainly good intentions and pious aspirations are not enough. No doubt the peace-loving nations will wish to remain at peace. But we found in 1914, and you found three years later, that in spite of our wishes we were driven into war.

What happened then may—nay, will—happen again unless we take adequate steps to prevent it.

PRESENT AMERICAN ECONOMY

By SECY. HENRY A. WALLACE

THERE is as much need today for a Declaration of Independence as there was for a Declaration of Independence in 1776.

The typical New England farming community of the Eighteenth century was 95 per cent economically independent of the rest of the nation and the world. The rest of the colonies might have suddenly disappeared, and the community could continue to function. Of how many communities in America could that be said today? Merely to ask the question is to answer it. And if farmers, with the help of government, should today achieve even a 50 per cent economic self-sufficiency, as compared with their present 20 to 30 per cent, the result would be the starvation of many millions in our cities. A change of this sort might be brought about slowly, but brought about rapidly it would prove a catastrophe.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NAVY

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE

I HAVE gone through the figures of the Admiralty and make this statement: In effective fighting force of battleships, battle cruisers and cruisers we have a more powerful fleet even than the United States and far more than any other nation. In addition, our guns are far bigger than those of any Continental power.

AMERICAN TRADITIONS SOUND

By DR. HANS KOHN

THE philosophy of Fascism glorifies the nation, to which the individual is expected to sacrifice himself; therefore the gesture by Mussolini, to impress the Italian people with the great traditions and the splendor of their country's conquests.

I believe that the courage which is asked of youth in a democracy, the courage to think things out for themselves rather than to depend blindly on their leaders, is a far greater courage than is asked of young people going into a war.

It was the traditions of Germany, of Russia and of Italy—the tradition of obedience to a kaiser, a czar, a king, which made it possible to set up Fascism, Communism, Nazism.

The traditions of the American people, on the other hand, the principles of liberty, justice and equality for all of which your ancestors fought in 1776, would prevent such a happening in America. Youth, think for yourselves, even though American ideals have never been completely realized.

FAITH IN THE LEAGUE

By GEN. JAN SMUTS

THE league is not moribund or on its last legs, but only finding its feet, only beginning its career. Henceforth more and more it will stand forth as the determined foe of imperialism, of that spirit of aggressive expansion and annexation that characterized the old pre-war order and which was fondly thought to have been killed in the World war but is again showing its horrid head in world affairs.

No, the message of Armistice day isn't forgotten. Long live the League of Nations!

Oldest Fortification in the Western Hemisphere

Cuba's Castillo de la Fuerza (the Castle of the Armed Forces) is believed to be the oldest fortification in the Western hemisphere. It stands at the foot of O'Reilly street in the oldest part of Havana. It was begun in 1538, thereby antedating Morro castle by about 50 years.

The history of La Fuerza goes back to the time of Hernando de Soto. It was there that Dona Isabel de Bobadilla, De Soto's wife, threw herself into the sea upon learning of her husband's death and his burial in the Mississippi river.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxines. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

UNDER THE COURTHOUSE DOME

The Shelby County Board of Revenue will hold their last business session of the year on Thursday, December 12th.

The "Speed Demons" had better look out for those newly uniformed patrollers, and remember that 45 miles is the limit on the open road. Also remember that when you begin an argument with a policeman—the POLICEMAN is always right.

Alabama is the first state in the Union to declare thru its Democratic Executive Committee, its unqualified endorsement of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Judge Wales W. Wallace and Harold Harlin spent Monday and Tuesday in Rockford attending to official Court duties in Clay County. The next term of the Circuit Court will be held in Shelby County beginning on the third Monday in January.

An interesting case from many many angles was tried in the Court room on Friday, December 6th, when the case of W. W. Flournoy, of Wilsonville, was heard by Judge W. W. Wallace of the 18th Judicial Circuit.

The prosecution was based upon the alleged operation of a Rolling Store by Mr. Flournoy, without first paying the $150.00 license now required by the Revenue Code adopted at the last session of the Legislature of Alabama. The defense took the position that this clause of the Revenue Code was unconstitutional and void, for the reasons that the license required was excessive, confiscatory, and was also a discrimination.

Judge Wallace held the statute to be constitutional, the Defendant was found "guilty"—and a fine placed up on him.

We are informed that the Rolling Store operators of the State are organized, and this case was agreed to be the "test" case, and the same will be appealed to the Supreme Court of Alabama.

Solicitor Paul O. Luck represented the State of Alabama, and Sam A. Lokey, Columbiana Attorney, represented the Defendant.

Do not get "crossed up" with Tax Assessor Luther Fowler when he asks how much insurance you carry on your property. The LAW requires him to ask these personal questions and to file the answers with your returns, together with the names of the insurance firms.

If you have complaints to register regarding the assessment of your property, appeals may be taken to the County Board of Review. The decisions of this Board are usually final.

Larger Consumption Of Cotton Expected

Larger world consumption of American cotton in the 1935-36 season than last season is now indicated according to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

Lower price of American cotton this year in relation to foreign growths, improvement in business activity, together with prospects for further improvement, and the replenishing of depleted stocks of American cotton abroad, are some of the factors that point toward larger consumption.

Special Election December 17, 1935

By Fred H. Gormley

Montgomery, Ala.,—(Special) — Pointing out that amendment No. 2 which will be voted on at the special election December 17, wiill not change the taxation laws and will not result in a reduction in revenue, A. C. Davis, chairman of the state committee for ratification of the amendment today urged citizens of Alabama to cast a full vote for the amendment in the special election.

Mr. Davis said the amendment merely continues the taxation laws on building and loan associations as they have existed since the first associations were organized many years ago. Savings deposited with building and loan associations have always been exempt from franchise taxes just as savings of banks are exempt. The amendment will continue this taxation policy. It was requested by the federal home loan bank to give assurance to investors that this state's laws will continue as favorable for home building as the laws of other states.

Governor Graves is much interested in ratification of the amendment and is convinced that its approval will mean that Alabama will get its fair share of cheap money available for home building during the post-depression area.

"This amendment does not exempt building and loan associations from taxes," Chairman Davis said. "They will continue to pay franchise taxes on their capital stock and ad volorem atxes on their real and personal property. They have never been required to pay franchise taxes on withdrawal shares or, in other words, on the savings accounts that have been deposited with them by persons who expect to build homes with the funds when the accumulation is sufficient. State laws have always exempted these deposits from franchise taxes."

"The legislature voted unanimously to submit the amendment to the voters when it was advised of the appeal of the federal home loan board and of the need for assuranre that the state will have a permanent policy on franchise taxes on building and loan associations.

"Any voter can cast a ballot for amendment No. 2 with full assurance that no revenue will be lost by the state, counties and municipalities. In the end it will mean more public revenue because these savings deposits when invested in homes will go on the tax assessment lists for property taxes for future years. This amendment is another forward step toward making Alabama a state of home owners."

Heart Drifts

UNDERSTANDING

No better than I should have been
No—nat as good,
For I had known so many others dear
Before I stood
Outside your door—
And you had known so many, too,
Before We met—And yet,
It does seem strange
That no one stayed deep down in heart,
Though you and I exchange
Something, some blessed consciousness,
We never knew before in all the stress.
And zest of living.
LOVES, Ah, yes, of course; but something more Than that — My Dear,
Words seem so limited when thought is clear—
But, really dear, why should I try to make you see,
For if you did not UNDERSTAND—it could not be!

FOR ANY WOMAN

Be glad, be glad, while still your heart can ache
Wildly, intolerably for love's sake;
There are worse things than midnights of unrest
When slowly turns the knife within the breast.

There are worse things than dawn of quiet weeping
For faiths impaired, for trusts love is not keeping.
There is more bitter than the heart's despair;
To stand beside Love's bier and NOT to care.

Cheaha State Park Has Beautiful Lake

Montgomery—The completion of a beautiful lake in Cheaha State Park has added an exquisite feature to the numerous attractions of that area. Lakes in the mountain regions of Alabama usually are conspicuous by their absence. However, in Cheaha State Park was found a natural basin fed by alpine streams which with a small amount of engineering work has been made to inclose a body of beautiful crystal clear water of several acres in extent.

The lake is a scenic gem in itself, but its own beauty is strikingly supplemented by the reflections of the mountain range in the background. The cliffs and ramparts of Cheaha Mountain are seen on the surface of the water almost as clearly as by direct view. Bathing facilities will be provided with the advent of warm weather in the spring.

The lake is at the foot of the mountain near the Western boundary of the park. It is reached most conveniently from the vicinity of Munford, although the mountain road built by the Civilian Conservation Corps from near Oxford over the summit of Cheaha passes the lake after descending the western side of the mountain.

EVERGREENS NEED WATER BEFORE COLD WEATHER

Auburn, Ala.,—All evergreens will withstand the cold weather of the winter months much better if given a thorough watering before the ground freezes, advises Homer S. Fisher, extension landscape specialist of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Mulching the plants either with well-rotted manure, decaying leaves, or peat moss is an added precaution. The mulch helps to keep the water in the soil longer and keeps if from freezing as soon as the surrounding soil freezes.

Mr. Fisher says that proper care of ornamental evergreens pays, since they are the most expensive type of plant materials, and the most conspicuous and useful, particularly in winter.

Farley Thinks Midwest Safe for Roosevelt—Sloan Urges Industry to Save Nation—Crisis in Europe Is Approaching.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY, in his capacity of chairman of the Democratic national committee, called that body to meet in Washington January 8, when arrangements will be made for the convention of 1936 and the place of that gathering selected. He told the correspondents that the chief bidders for the convention would be Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco, and denied the report that the first named city already had been decided upon. He said he thought the highest bidder would be selected, provided it has adequate convention hall and hotel facilities.

J. A. Farley

Stories that Senator Donahey of Ohio or some one else would be given second place on the ticket instead of Garner were laughed at by Mr. Farley. He asserted that there was no doubt about the renomination of Garner for vice president. Asked about the two-thirds rule, he said the committee might recommend its abandonment, but that any change was the business of the convention. Commenting on the Literary Digest poll, which shows a majority in the middlewest states voting against the Roosevelt New Deal, Farley said:

"So far as the poll relates to sentiment in the midwest states, like Iowa, it is 100 per cent wrong." He insisted that the President was very strong, not only in that section of the country, but in every part.

"The President will carry as many states next year as he did in 1932," said Farley. Roosevelt carried all except six states at that time. Farley said he believed Roosevelt would win the electoral vote of Pennsylvania, one of the states that voted for Hoover in 1932, and that also there was a good chance of carrying New Hampshire.

ALFRED P. SLOAN, JR., president of General Motors corporation, was the chief speaker at the annual dinner of the Congress of American Industry in New York, and he made an earnest plea to industry to save the country from bureaucracy and possible socialism.

A. P. Sloan, Jr.

Industry should lead the nation away from the fallacious theory of plenty "to promote the general welfare of all the people," Mr. Sloan told the nation's leading manufacturers. Should big business fail to accept this "broader responsibility," it will bring, he said, the "urge for more and more interference from without—government in business."

Mr. Sloan conceded the gravity and the extreme importance of problems of today—the paramount necessity of charting a sound course for the "long future." He advocated:

"1—Reduction in the real costs and selling prices of goods and services.

"2—A more economic balance of national income through policies affecting wages, hours, prices and profits."

The meeting of the congress was held in conjunction with the fortieth annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers, and the speakers before that body were as emphatic in their condemnation of the economic policies of the administration as was Mr. Sloan. President C. L. Bardo said: "Whether we like it or not, industry has been forced in sheer self-defense to enter the political arena or be destroyed as a private enterprise."

General Counsel J. A. Emery declared: "This gathering is a call to arms.

"The sentry call should rouse the armies of industry to repulse the forces of the alien theory that challenge our political institutions and economic system within our own household."

Robert L. Lund, chairman of the board, said: "The New Dealers have been forced to desert some of their boldest experiments. This has came to pass because the American people have demanded a return to common sense and sound business. American industry has taken the leadership in this combat."

PRIVATE bankers comprising the federal reserve advisory council have handed to the federal reserve board a report giving warning that unless the board acts to control credit, the country "faces dangerous inflation" and "speculation such as preceded the market collapse of 1929." The board suppressed the report but it leaked out.

Besides warning the reserve board against the dangers of credit inflation which lurk in the three billion dollars of idle bank reserves, the council disagreed bluntly with the do-nothing policy on bank reserves which has thus far been adhered to by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles and other federal reserve governors.

SANTA CLAUS is doing big work this year for the merchants of the country. It is estimated by officials of the Commerce department that the Christmas trade will amount to $4,500,000,000 or half a billion dollars more than in December last year.

Preliminary holiday trade reports from all parts of the country to the Commerce department indicated that retail trade already is running from 5 to 35 per cent higher than a year ago.

Christmas clubs will pay $312,000,000 to 7,000,000 members. Much of this money will go into Christmas trade.

EUROPEAN diplomats, especially the British and Premier Laval of France, are exceedingly clever and resourceful, but if they are to extricate their nations from the present threatening state of affairs they will need all their smartness. Though decision as to the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy was postponed until December 12 to give Laval a chance to conciliate Mussolini, the duce refused to make any gesture toward peace. Italians were authoritatively warned not to mistake diplomatic exchanges between their premier and the representatives of Great Britain and France as "peace talk," and were told there was no reason to believe Mussolini had modified his minimum terms already presented to Sir Eric Drummond and Laval's representative. Also he has declined further to conciliate Britain by removing more troops from Libya and has repeated his warning that he will consider an oil embargo an unfriendly gesture. He and all Italians are especially resentful against Great Britain, which apparently intends to insist on the oil ban. And now they are getting very sore at France, despite Laval's efforts to maintain friendly relations between the two countries. There were reports that Italian troops were being massed along the French frontier.

Sir Samuel Hoare

One more rather desperate move for peace was made in Paris when Laval gave Italian Ambassador Cerruti a "set of suggestions" which were said to be the last word from France and Great Britain before the applying of the oil embargo, due on December 12. These suggestions were said to be based principally on an exchange of territories between Italy and Ethiopia, the latter to receive its long-sought seaport and to remain absolutely independent, save for the lands granted to Italy.

The feeling in Rome was pessimistic, and there was noted a general tightening up of home defenses. Troops that had been expected to depart for the Ethiopian front were being retained in Italy, and the orders to the naval and air forces were suggestive. New economic measures to resist the sanctions were being put into effect daily.

The British government was engrossed with the troublous situation. Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, received timely orders from his physician to take a rest in Switzerland, and it was announced he would stop in Paris for a conference with Premier Laval. The admiralty was preparing for eventualities and ordered officers of the royal navy reserve to report at once for duty at Plymouth. These men have been serving as officers and engineers in the merchant marine.

GEN. HO YING-CHIN, Chinese minister of war, was sent to Peiping by Dictator Chiang Kai-shek to try to check the northern autonomy movement. Delegations from the Autonomy Promotion society called on him and mobs shouted autonomy slogans outside his office, and then the Japanese army officers took the matter in hand. Lieut. Col. Tan Takahashi, military attache at Peiping, and an officer of the Japanese garrison called on General Ho and ordered him to leave the city at once. Takahashi told the war minister: "The Japanese army is convinced your continued stay in Peiping can only complicate matters."

Ho Ying-Chin

Maj. Gen. Hayao Tada, Japanese commander in north China, said: "War between China and Japan is certain if China breaks the agreement signed last July in which Nanking agreed not to send troops into Hopei province."

At the same time Japanese war planes were flying low over Peiping.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL sent to London the usual polite reminder that the semi-annual war debt installment from Great Britain was due on December 15. And, also as usual, the British government sent to Mr. Hull the reply that under the circumstances it wouldn't pay a cent. Well, we were not counting on getting this money for Christmas spending.

BRITISH, Irish and Canadian delegations opened conversations in Washington with American officials looking to the establishment of trans-Atlantic air mail and passenger service. It was believed this could be accomplished as soon as reciprocal pacts are signed to allow the landing of American planes on foreign soil. Heretofore this has been blocked by the jealousies of foreign aviation interests.

The delegation from Great Britain is headed by Sir Ronald Bands, director general of the general post office. He is accompanied by C. E. Woods Humphrey, managing director of Imperial Airways, Ltd.

Postmaster General Farley announced that he would ask congress at the coming session for funds to start an air mail service between the United States and Europe.

CANADA'S wheat marketing policy, always a matter of great interest to wheat growers of the United States, is to be radically altered, according to the Dominion government. A new wheat board has been appointed, headed by James R. Murray, general manager of the Alberta Pacific Grain company. Instead of trying to maintain prices by stabilization operations on the Winnipeg Grain exchange, the board will endeavor to reduce the huge Canadian wheat surplus by offering wheat for sale at the world's competitive prices.

GOOD news for the building industry. President Green of the American Federation of Labor gives out the word that there will be no more jurisdictional strikes among construction workers. The factions in the building trades department of the federation have found a plan to prevent workmen from delaying construction by strikes over which of two organizations should do a particular piece of work.

In the future the contractor is to decide which union shall do the job when a dispute arises, and then if a joint committee of the unions involved is unable to adjust the difference the question is to be referred to a federal judge as arbiter.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE announced the corn-hog program for 1936-37. Designed to maintain a balance between the interests of the producer and the consumer, this new plan will permit a 30 per cent increase in hog production next year over 1935, thus preparing the way for possible reductions in pork prices to the housewife; and to restrict corn acreage to about 95,000,000 acres, an increase of about 1,409,000 acres, over the amount harvested this year.

Sec'y Wallace

After appraisal by community committees and review by county allotment committees, a corn acreage base and a market hog base will be fixed. Co-operating producers must agree to plant corn next year on at least 25 per cent of their base acreages. They will be permitted to retire from 10 to 30 per cent of their base acreage for soil-improving or erosion-preventing purposes. Hog growers must agree to produce between 50 and 100 per cent of the base market production.

The 1936 corn adjustment payment will be 35 cents a bushel on the appraised yield times the adjusted acreage, less the pro rata share of local administrative expenses.

Corn adjustment payments will be made in two installments. The first, at the rate of 20 a bushel, is to be made about August 1. The second will come due about December 31, 1936, at the rate of 15 cents per bushel.

A payment of $1.25 per head will be made on each hog in the base. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 per head if a producer fails to raise 50 per cent of his base numbers. The total payment to a producer will be the same for a production ranging from 50 per cent to 100 per cent of his base.

The 1937 rates will be announced by November 30, 1936, but the rate on corn will not be less than 30 cents per bushel and the rate on hogs will not be less than $1.25 per head.

ONE hundred thousand Democrats, mostly Georgians, gathered in the stadium of Georgia Tech at Atlanta for a homecoming and heard President Roosevelt deliver a characteristic speech, full of confidence, assurance of prosperity and praise for what the New Deal has accomplished. And he did not neglect to attack warmly the critics of his administration. In reviewing the economic and social advances since his inauguration he gave out what was considered the keynote for his campaign for re-election, and definitely announced his candidacy—unnecessarily—by asserting that life in the United States has improved in the last two and a half years and will continue to improve "if I have anything to do with it."

President Roosevelt

Mr. Roosevelt promised that lavish government spending was over and that the nation could look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit, and asserted that the government credit is higher than that of any other great nation. He bitterly criticized the treasury policies prior to his entrance into the White House, traced the relief policies as opposed to doles and declared that the peak of appropriations has passed.

Mary Pines for Her Pines

(A Christmas Story)

By Luella B. Lyons

MARY MINTER left her home from south of the Mason-Dixon line to marry Jack Howard. That's how she happened to be hating her new home in the North—hating the snow and cold and the fireworks she knew she was missing down home that Christmas day. Gazing out of the window all she could see were pine trees from four inches to sixty feet in height. Cedars! Pines! Spruces! She hated the words, even.

They Reached Ann Spear's Hospital Room and Made Explanations.

"How about a Christmas tree in the house, honey? Maybe that would help cheer you, do you suppose? I know you're eating your heart out with lonesomeness for home this, your first Christmas away," Jack offered, but Mary spurned his sympathy.

"A tree. A tree, did you say? Ha ha," she laughed bitterly, "go out there and on up the Ridge and look at those trees there by the hundreds and thousands. Imagine they are all Christmas trees if you like." Jack gave up trying to placate her but he understood—she was at that stage of homesickness.

About noon there came a phone call from their nearest neighbor, Milt Spears. His wife was in the city hospital, 40 miles away, and he had promised to visit here there, taking the two youngsters, but about an hour ago Milt had sprained an ankle and now—would Mary and Jack take the kids and go in his place?

What difference did it make if it was nearly nightfall when the pair and the two youngsters reached Ann Spears' hospital room and made the explanations and witnessed the relief that was so evident on the anxious wife's face.

"But where did you find such a novel tree arrangement, Mrs. Howard?" Ann's doctor wanted to know the moment he sighted the midget Christmas tree Mary had fixed up at a moment's notice. "Why, they are the niftiest things I've ever seen yet, and I'd like to buy a dozen of them."

A strip of painted tin that was bent to hang over the head of a bed into the shape of a shelf or bracket formed the foundation. A tiny cedar seedling about eight inches high formed the tree. Mary had stripped a wealth of tube roses she had been growing, to tie the blossoms all over that midget village tree. Fitting into a slot on that little tin bracket, it smiled its blessing upon the gathering.

Any Yuletide you might stop by the Howard Midget Christmas Tree Farm to find Mary and Jack getting a bit of rest from their labors, another glorious selling campaign over for another year. Yes, you'll find Mary there, for she does get pretty lonely when she must be away from her thousands of beloved midget conifers any length of time!

Christmas Cracker From France

The Christmas cracker came from France about eighty years ago.

Mrs. Durkee's Christmas Gander

By Martha B. Thomas

MRS. DURKEE had a gander, a fine strong bird with fine strong wings. Wherever Mrs. Durkee went the gander went, too.

Some years ago a goose egg had been given to Mrs. Durkee. It was a very large egg and ready to hatch, but a fox had killed the mother goose. It should make, when hatched and grown up, a fine Christmas dinner! Just as Mrs. Durkee prepared a nest for it, the shell cracked and out popped a head with very surprised eyes. From that moment the gosling and Mrs. Durkee became friends. She no more thought of him in terms of roasting than she would think of a neighbor in that unkind manner.

The widow lived alone and as the gander grew to manhood (so to speak), she depended more and more on him. Sometimes at night she would rouse him and he would untuck his head from his wing and escort her forth under a wintry moon.

And now, at the Christmas season, Gander was in full plumage and of a stern temper.

Christmas eve she sat alone by her kitchen fire, and there came a knock at the door. A man stood there and before she could speak pushed his way in. Seeing no one about, he ordered her to bring him bread and coffee and meat. She brought the man what he asked, and when he had eaten he said, "Now, give me all your money and I'll go with no trouble."

"No," said Mrs. Durkee. "I will not!"

Out came his fist and she just escaped a hard cuff on the head. She was angry enough to fight but instead went to her pantry. "I keep money in a jug here," she said and jingled some coins. At the same time she softly raised the window and whistled.

"Hey . . . come on with the cash! I'm in a hurry!"

"Yes, yes . . . some has stuck in the bottom." She made a great to-do at jingling. Then she heard a sleepy "Honk-Honk!" Her heart lifted.

"I have a few bills tucked behind the cookie jar," she added. "Let me get those." (Anything to take up time!)

She came slowly into the kitchen. "Here is your money," she said. "Oh, dear, I do believe some one is at the door. Take it quick!" She threw the coins at the man, and opened the door. In stalked the gander ready for anything.

The man shoved out his foot as if to kick him. In a moment, hissing and nipping, the great bird seemed to surround the man with heavy beating wings. The harder the unwelcome guest tried to escape the harder he was beaten back. At last, crouching and fending off the blows, he fled through the door . . . scattering coins all the way. The wad of bills had merely been a piece of make-believe.

The door slammed and the lonely widow sat down in a chair and laughed and laughed and laughed. The gander stood beside her, looking dignified and preening his ruffled feathers.

"I'd rather have you for a friend," cried Mrs. Durkee, "than all the roast ducks, turkeys and geese in the world. Merry Christmas . . .! and I'll give you some fresh lettuce this minute."

The gander's bright eyes roved about the room, and he followed Mrs. Durkee into the pantry.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—Representative James P. Buchanan, chairman of the house appropriations committee, is far from the rebel, bedevilling President Roosevelt, that he has been made to appear in the recent dispatches from Warm Springs and Washington.

Actually he is a member of the team, and at the moment is doing yeoman service for the "quarterback," as Mr. Roosevelt sometimes likes to style himself. His present play of forcing the President's hand on economy and budget balancing, his hopes that the President will eventually be in agreement with him, despite his own admission that he—Buchanan—is a "fanatic" on budget balancing, is all part of a very shrewdly calculated drama, not entirely unconnected with the election campaign next year.

For Roosevelt himself is thoroughly convinced not only of the necessity for making a very strong play toward economy in his budget message next month, and of painting a picture indicating that the budget will be balanced in due time, but also of the necessity of some extraordinary method of making the country believe he means it.

He has been told very frankly that the very interests he most wants to placate—to win over to the conviction that, from an economic and fiscal standpoint, he is perfectly safe—distrust his words. He has been told that it will take a great deal of skill to convince them he really intends to do what he may promise in that budget message.

Hard-boiled cynics are very difficult to convince by mere words, especially when some of those cynics believe firmly that the speaker of the words has fooled them before. So the problem was to stage a little drama in advance of the budget message, which would lead up to it, and pave the way for its being believed.

Would Cut Budget Deficit

It wasn't just a trial balloon which the Texas congressman sent up when he talked about cutting the budget deficit down to half a billion dollars for the year beginning July 1, next, and to scratch for the following year, after which expenditures were to be kept within income.

The idea is to have the country read the President's budget promises next month with the knowledge that the head of the house appropriations committee wants to go oven further toward budget balancing than the President himself!

If the New Dealers had figured for a month they could not have devised a more convincing plan for persuading the country—not just of the President's intentions, but that they would be carried out.

For Mr. Buchanan is far from being just a congressman. He is chairman of the one committee in the house that handles all appropriations. Subcommittees appointed by him and working under him scrutinize the proposed expenditures for every governmental department and agency. House members as a whole are very prone to follow the recommendations of the house appropriations committee. For one thing, it provides them a very simple and effective alibi for their votes. It saves lots of embarrassing explanations to critical constituents.

Moreover, business is perfectly aware that at the other end of the Capitol, the appropriations committee is presided over by Carter Glass of Virginia, who was so worried about national credit and the administration's spending policies that he wanted to cut the famous four-billion-dollar bill last year to two billion dollars. Senators do not pay as much attention to committee recommendations as do house members, but Mr. Glass and Mr. Buchanan will both be on the conference committee that will iron out differences between the two houses.

Lewis Vs. Green

That John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers of America, has all the cards in the inter-union labor battle, as far as issues are concerned, most labor leaders here privately agree, and would win the fight promptly if his name were William Green.

Or to put it more succinctly, if he had Green's personality, and Green's background, and Green's friendships.

The American Federation of Labor is marching toward vertical, or industry unions, and away from the old form of craft unions. But the oligarchy of the federation leans heavily toward Green, their president. Not only do the majority of the leaders distrust Lewis, but they include many who actively dislike him.

Lewis, many of them say privately, has been a successful fighter for the United Mine Workers. He has been aggressive, battling every moment. But he never knew when to lay his fighting manners aside. As a result, in conferences of labor leaders he has tried to ride over his colleagues just as though they were nothing but capitalists, and with all the contempt in his expression, both facial and by words, as if they were trying to starve his followers into submission.

Entirely aside from all this personal feeling, many of them point out that battling for the Mine Workers, successful as it has been so far as winning each battle that came up was concerned, has proved rather disastrous for the workers in the long run.

If Lewis had been head, for instance, of the automobile workers, and they had followed him with the same percentage of loyalty that the coal miners have demonstrated, the story would be very different.

For in the case of the automobile industry, it has been expanding year by year. Every season it needed more workers than the season before. Not only was the demand for its product growing, but there was no other industry competing with it—taking away its markets.

Success a Backfire

In the coal industry, however, there has been active competition from oil, both for ships and for factories, and even for homes. There has been the rapid development of gas and electrical competition. For example, the electrification of the Pennsylvania railroad from New York to Washington. And there has been a very heavy slump in international trade, which accentuated the slumping curve of railroad coal consumtion, as shipping, especially the big trunk lines leading to ports.

So that in boosting the price of coal by increasing wages, Lewis' success has had a decided backfire. This is not the sort of point that usually gives labor leaders much pause. But they cite it as showing that Lewis lacks judgment.

However, several very large employers, who have been operating virtually open shops for some time, have told labor leaders privately they do not object to letting their present company unions—forced by NRA—into vertical or industry unions. What they are worried about is having to deal with twenty to thirty different craft unions, which frequently, they have observed in other concerns, get into quarrels among themselves and produce strikes which are not to be blamed, even by the workers, on their employers.

They want to be able to settle all their labor troubles with one set of officials—with one union. And they have served notice that they will fight to the death against the organization of their workers into the present craft unions.

Farley Shocks Them

The brain trust wing of the administration, as distinguished from the practical political wing, was shocked beyond words at the remarks of Postmaster Jim Farley at Denver before the Colorado Democratic central committee.

Mr. Farley's words, which so aroused the brain trusters who have been made sick at heart again and again at having their legislative ideas "mangled" on Capitol Hill, were:

"The second error is that the delegation in the national legislature are expected to be mere rubber stamps to carry out the will of the President. On the contrary, let me assure you that the member of independent habit and judgment is the one most appreciated by the administration. It is the President's function to recommend legislation. To advise congress what he deems requisite for the welfare of the nation. Those who have faith in his judgment go along with him, but there is neither pressure brought on the congressmen to follow the President's lead, nor hostility or reprisal for these who differ with him. It is rare that any important measure goes through without amendment. So much for that!"

The exclamation point at the conclusion of this paragraph appears in the official text, and most people at Washington, of whatever political persuasion, and in whatever office, agree that the punctuation is correct.

What bothers the brain trusters is not the accuracy or lack of it in the historical part of the paragraph. They chuckled at that part. But not at the intimation that what Farley insisted had been done would be the policy in the future.

Turning on the Heat

Now if ever in the history of Presidential dealing with Capitol Hill more heat was turned on by the White House to win senators away from the Glass-Adams side of this controversy, and get them to vote for the nearly five billions which the administration wanted, old-timers around Washington do not remember it. And remember that Mr. Adams, just praised by Farley, was one of the ringleaders of the move to cut the appropriation in half!

But that was then, while now is something else again. Farley is not worried about legislation next session. He is worried about the election. That is his job. At the time of the four-billion-dollar fight Farley, as a matter of fact, was in the midst of it. He did his utmost to help the White House dragon the reluctant senators into voting for a bill which Glass and Adams thought was too great a strain on the national credit.

And this is no time, from Farley's point of view, to bring up the merits of that controversy. President Roosevelt's every effort is being bent, at the moment, to the task of making the next budget look more reassuring to the business interests of the country. Hence all the talk about the blue pencil being freely used on estimates for appropriations.

"My Empire" Wants Peace
"ME, Too," Says Selassie
Popguns for Uncle Sam
$900,000,000 More

England's lord high chancellor, Viscount Hailsham, read the king's speech, written by the king's cabinet. The king's references to steps "urgently necessary to safeguard my empire" are recommended to this government. We haven't any "empire" exactly, but we have a republic worth defending. Some of our loose billions might be well spent in that direction.

Arthur Brisbane

Ignoring some Italian friction, the king went on to say, "My relations with foreign powers continue friendly."

Mentioning the Italian misunderstanding, he said: "My government will continue to exert their influence in favor of peace." If it does, peace will come.

Haile Selassie, emperor of Ethiopia, sensibly asked the Patriarch Johannes, supreme authority of the Ethiopian Coptic church, to arrange peace, if he can, with Mussolini, and Abuna Cyril, high bishop of his church, is asked by Selassie to do his best.

And now comes from Universal Service the important authoritative report that Haile Selassie has agreed to give part of his territory to Italy in return for peace.

Washington says this country plans a series of Pacific ocean "Gibraltars," armed with 16-inch guns with a fighting range of 25 to 30 miles. Quite amusing, considering that the original Gibraltar has become a useless rock, thanks to airplanes and submarines. Invading airplanes might not be kind enough to come within 25 or 30 miles of those interesting fixed Gibraltars.

What this country needs for coast protection is airplanes, for fighting, and dirigibles for observation, located close enough together and high enough up in the air to make them really useful in the next war.

Uncle Sam borrows $900,000,000 more, bringing the national debt above $30,500,000,000, but $40,000,000,000 below the amount that certain "great bankers" told President Roosevelt this country could easily carry. Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr. wants President Roosevelt to tell who the great bankers were, but it is understood that they talked in confidence.

Prince Sumi of Japan, brother of the Mikado, fourth son of the late Emperor Yoshihito, takes the title "Prince Mikasa," meaning, literally, "Prince of the Three Umbrellas." The name "Three Umbrellas" is taken from a Japanese mountain and is also the much revered name of the flagship on which Admiral Togo fought the battle of the Japan sea.

"Three Umbrellas" seems appropriate—one for Japan, one for China, one for the Philippines; all Japanese.

The village of Verde Cocha, near Guayaquil, in Ecuador, exists no longer. A landslide wiped out everything, instantly killing fifty inhabitants. A slice of green mountainside, two miles wide, came roaring down, and there was no trace of the village and no man lived to tell about it.

But other men will rebuild Verde Cocha for men are as persistent as ants, that rebuild their little villages when the gardener's hose sweeps them away.

Poor China abandons hope for her northern territory and its 95,000,000 inhabitants, that Japan wants. China suspects that Japan "plans a series of blows to force the entire Chinese nation into vassalage to Tokyo." "Asia for Japan" is the Japanese motto, and Japan knows how to go about it. No signs of "fifty-two members of the League of Nations" telling Japan, "You must not."

Senator Borah of Idaho and Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr. of New York had a long talk, and reporters "guess" that Senator Borah and Mr. Fish have agreed to run side by side, Senator Borah for President, Mr. Fish for Vice President. It is not safe to "guess" about Senator Borah, but it would be wise for the Republicans to decide soon.

When experimenting starts, it keeps going. Hitler, manufacturing cannon, knows they will need "fodder," and insists on more babies. A German farmer gets a divorce because his wife wants no children.

"It is the duty of German wives to perpetuate the German blood," the court says.

Miss Edna Maria Granitsas, twenty-two-year-old member of a Massachusetts school committee, says teachers talk too much, do not let children talk enough. She says children should be encouraged to express themselves. The Massachusetts lady goes far when she says "If a child wants to yell out in class, let the child yell until he decides not to yell." Discipline is also a part of education.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Giving Thanks for God's Book.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Giving Thanks for God's Book.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Studying the Bible Together.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Bible in National Life.

This lesson is a fine illustration of the rightful place of God's Word in the life of a nation. The only cure for national ills is a return to God and obedience to his Word.

I The Teacher's Spiritual Condition (Ezra 7:10).

He prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, to do it, and to teach Israel the statutes and judgments.

II. The Word of God Read (Neh. 8:1-3).

1. The eager assembly (v. 1). The people gathered together and requested Ezra to bring the book of the law. God had touched their hearts, creating within them a yearning for his Word.

2. A representative assembly (v. 2). God's Word should be taught to all classes—men, women, and children. The Spirit of God can speak through his Word to the whole family sitting in the same pew.

3. An appreciative assembly (v. 3). So eager were they to know God's Word that they did not get tired, although the lesson lasted for five or six hours. When people realize that God is speaking through his Word they will give attention.

III. The People's Attitude Toward God's Word (vv. 4-6).

1. Due reverence shown (vv. 4, 5). When Ezra opened the law all the people stood up out of respect for God's Word.

2. They joined heartily in prayer (v. 6). As Ezra led them in prayer they united in saying, "Amen, Amen," bowing their faces to the ground.

IV. God's Word Being Interpreted (vv. 7, 8).

The attitude of the people toward God's Word largely depends upon the minister. Proper dignity and solemnity should be manifested by the minister when reading the Holy Scriptures.

1. He stood up where the people could see him (v. 5).

2. He read distinctly (v. 8). The manner in which many read the Scriptures is greatly to their discredit.

3. He caused the people to understand (v. 8). The supreme business of the minister and teacher is to make the Word of God so plain that old and young can understand. The explanation should be clear and definite.

V. The Effect of Applying God's Word to the Life of the People (vv. 9-18).

1. Conviction of sin (v. 9). The divine method of convicting men of their sin is to have God's Word applied by the Holy Spirit. The Word of God is quick and powerful (Heb. 4:12).

2. Weeping turned into joy (vv. 10-12). When sins have been perceived and confessed there is forgiveness. Continued mourning will not atone for past sins. Furthermore, it dishonors a pardoning God and even unfits the one for present tasks. Joy has a salutary effect upon one's entire being. "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

3. Blessings were shared with others (vv. 10-12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others. Pure religion goes out to minister to the poor (James 1:27). Godliness is not content with having a good time alone.

4. The people obeyed. From the reading of the Scriptures they found that the feast of the tabernacles had long been neglected. They kept this sacred feast in a way that had not been since the days of Joshua.

5. They separated themselves from the ungodly (13:1-3). As soon as they had heard the Word of God they separated themselves from the mixed multitude.

6. The house of worship was cleared and order restored (13:4-14). No nation or people can be strong which neglects the worship of the true God.

7. The Sabbath was restored (13:15-22). Israel had long violated the Sabbath. To ignore the essential law of the Sabbath is national suicide. Unnumbered evils followed in the wake of the desecration of God's holy day.

8. God's law of marriage restored (13:23-31). Some of those who had intermarried with the heathen were brought face to face with their sin. They separated themselves from their ungodly companions. God's favor cannot be enjoyed by those who live in disobedience to his Word.

A Splendid Mystery

To me there is something thrilling and exalting in the thought that we are drifting forward into a splendid mystery—into something that no mortal eye hath yet seen, and no intelligence has yet declared.—E. H. Chapin.

Poultry

"FRESH EGGS" MAY MEAN BETTER EGGS

Poultrymen, Egg Dealers Have Improved Quality.

By R. E. Cray, Extension Specialist, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

The last five years have witnessed a vast improvement in the egg marketing facilities in many sections. There is now some encouragement for the farmers to produce high quality eggs, because they do not have to take the same price for them as the man who keeps a mongrel flock under filthy conditions and markets his eggs at infrequent intervals.

The improvements in the methods of egg marketing have followed many different lines, but in every instance it is based upon two principles: (1) paying the farmers on the basis of the quality of eggs delivered, and (2) selling eggs on a graded basis which pays a premium for that particular grade of eggs.

It is beyond the power of man to improve the quality of a fresh egg, but it is entirely within his power, through feeding and management, to produce a fine quality egg. It is also within his power greatly to improve grading and marketing practices, so as to retain the fresh egg quality until the egg reaches the consumer.

Some suggestions for producing quality eggs are: remove all roosters from the laying flock, keep the laying house clean, gather the eggs four times a day, place them immediately in a cool room, usually the cellar, grade the eggs according to size and color, and market them twice a week.

Hens Confined Lay Well as Those Out on Range

Hens kept in confinement and properly fed will lay as many eggs and tend to lay larger eggs than birds of the same age on limited range. These conclusions are the outcome of experiments conducted since 1928 at the Animal Husbandry Experiment farm at Beltsville, Md.

Birds kept under confinement in these experiments were fed cod liver oil along with other feed and had access to sunshine through open windows in the laying house, thereby preventing possible adverse effects from vitamin deficiency. These hens had a tendency to lay a larger number of eggs during the winter months instead of in the spring as was the case with the hens on range. Electric lights were used in both pens from 5 a. m. until daylight each day from September until April. The fertility nor hatchability of the eggs was affected by the confinement of the hens, nor was there any noteworthy difference in mortality of the hens.

The flocks that were not confined were fed the same rations, except that cod lover oil was omitted, and were allowed to range in grass yards approximately 70 by 100 feet in size.

Housing Pullets

All pullets, whether or not mature, should be in their winter quarters in advance of the cold, frosty nights. In flocks where 5 per cent of the pullets are in production, one should move them in mediately to the laying house. If the time of housing the pullets is delayed until more than 5 per cent of the pullets are in production, there is some danger of interfering with production when the pullets are transferred from the brooding quarters to the laying house. The laying house should be cleaned and thoroughly disinfected prior to moving the pullets. Furthermore, the pullets should be examined for lice and treated for same, if they are infested, in advance to placing them in their winter quarters.

Feeding the Pullets

Begin feeding the laying ration after the birds are five months old, observes a writer in the Indiana Farmer's Guide. When the pullets' combs redden and about 10 per cent of them begin to lay it is time to put them in the laying house. Delaying too long will throw some of them into a partial molt and interfere with egg production at a time when prices are at their best. Allow 3½ to 4 feet floor space per hen.

With the Poultrymen

Provide water in abundance but not too cold or freezing.

* * *

Artificial lights provide the layers with 12 to 14 hours of feeding time.

* * *

Biddy will lay just about the same number of eggs whether it rains or shines.

Well-grown pullets are absolutely essential to profitable winter production.

A dozen eggs will average about 22 ounces. The large eggs known as the jumbo size weigh about 26 ounces to the dozen.

Chickens help to supply food the year round for the family, offering a good source of fresh meat in addition to the eggs.

The wrapping of eggs in cellophane should mean a great deal in quality to the consumer as well as being an important factor in dollars and cents to the packer.

BANK DEPOSITS WERE SAFEST INVESTMENTS

High Government Official Says No Investments Except U. S. Bonds Suffered as Little Loss as Deposits in Closed Banks

WASHINGTON, D. C.—No form of investments except Government bonds suffered as little loss as deposits in closed banks during the years 1931-32-33, Jesse H. Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, declared in a recent address.

"A point generally overlooked in connection with bank failures in this period, is that upon the whole, depositors in closed banks will get a somewhat larger percentage than has been true in bank failurs over a period of say twenty-five years," Mr. Jones said. "Heretofore they have gotten about 58%, but in these wholesale bank closings, my estimate is that they will, upon the average, get about 65% of their deposits.

"Another point worthy of mention is that a depositor in a closed bank loses only a part of his deposit, while the bank stockholder loses all, plus a stock assessment.

"No form of investment, except Government bonds, has suffered as little loss as deposits in closed banks, and while I appreciate that there is little consolation in this fact, those who had their savings invested in stocks, bonds, mortgages, real estate, industrial investments, or in businesses of any kind, have had losses very much greater, and in a much larger percentage, than have depositors in closed banks.

"It is for these reasons, and others not necessary here to enumerate, that it is not possible to justify paying depositors in closed banks with the taxpayers' money."

Advertising Mistakes

A QUESTION before many of us is what change of advertising policy, if any, should be made in view of present financial and business conditions. It is perfectly natural for us to give consideration to some degree of retrenchment, but it is dangerous to let reduction in expenditure be such as to bring about a real gap in the continuity of the advertising. It is a common mistake for some advertisers to think that they can turn advertising on and off, like water from a faucet, and expect it to become immediately effective whenever they are prepared to resume operations. Advertising does not work that way. Temporary conditions should not influence us to make too serious inroads on the program of advertising, which can be wisely conceived only on a long term basis.—Francis H. Sisson, President American Bankers Associa-

Social and Personal Mention

MILDRED WHITE WALLACE, Social Editor

WHAT? No Christmas Spirit yet? No plans for the most colorful spectacle of the whole year made? No Christmas Tree to wink and blink at you the minute you walk in your living room? No gay little cards all over the desk? No paper ribbons trailing all over the couch? No leaping fire from the yule logs? No mistle toe? No horns to blow? No trains to run up and down a track? No presents to hide? No NUTHIN' —Lady, Lady, something is wrong somewhere — somehow. Too old to dream? Out grown it all? "Sez you"! Heaven forbid! Forget the old morbid "what's the use" idea, and take a look around you at the stores and shops—Put a song in your heart —and lets go-a-shopping! Stores right here in Shelby Conty are filled with irrisistible gifts to please the oldest or the youngest and take it from me—you will see an array of progressive business firms who have listed their wares in the Democrat to be released on December 19th—which will warrant your attention. Watch for it—that is, if you have paid up your subscription! You might be disappointed if you have not attended to this little important detail.

Christmas, whether it is the way Columbiana celebrates it, Russia, Japan or Columbo, is the grandest season of the year! What a dreary hum-drum world it must be to those who refuse to allow the Christmas spirit ever to enter into their busy lives. You might as well go to sleep and sleep thru all of it—Get netirely out of the circle of good fellowship that extends around the world at this time of the year. We KNOW you will get pretty lonesome, for only a few folk we know refuse to share our enthusiasm for this joyous occasion

You have asked for some suggestions of gifts for "him" and "her". We will attempt to dash thru the zip and swing of excitement among those who are "shopping early," and tell you more about appropriate gifts next week. In the mean time you might take a squint in Old Santa's eyes—there is a merry twinkle there which says plain as anything--"Don't worry about the things you can't help. I'll look after everything for you"—We have personally shifted all our responsibilities on his crimson shoulders and for a time at least, we expect to join the ever widening cheerful Christmas circle whose mem bers sponsor good fellowship, and whose hearts are bound together with a mystical ribbon of tenderness that is a never to be forgotten influence, and goes far toward bringing us to the goal of "peace on earth good will toward men"—

The Culture Club met with Mrs. Levert Christian on Thursday, December 5, in one of the most interesting programs sponsored by this worth while organization.

Mrs. Howard Whittaker presented an entertaining paper on Warm Springs, Georgia—around which Southern point so much political and human interest hovers. A satisfactory report was read on the excellent work done by Geraldine Anderson, deserving girl who is receiving her education at Berry School, and who pays an appreciative tribute to the members of the Culture Club for giving her the chance t further her ambitions in an educational atmosphere.

A delicious salad plate with coffee was served the members and the two distinguished guests, Miss Barefield, School Attendance Officer, and Miss Pruett, newly elected Director of Child welfare of Shelby County.

"Anna Karenina", was presented the Club Library. The Club will hold its next meeting with Mrs. James Crawford on December 19th.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. H. D. McGreggors, former residents of Columbiana, now making their home in Vincent, will be grieved to learn of the accidental death of Howard McGreggor, aged 11 years. Howard, while playing on a piile of cross ties, had the misfortune while attempting t ojump from one cross tie to another, to miss his footing and a tie rolled on him, which injury caused his death.

We join a host of friends in Columbiana in extending our sympathy to our former friends and neighbors in this dark hour of trial.

Carl Groubie of the Columbiana Hardware Company, states his store will give a prize of $5.00 for the pret tiest out door Christmas tree judged by a Committee to be appointed and who will make their final decision on Christmas Eve Night. This should be an incentive for more trees and certainly vie with the artistic arrangement.

Miss Mary Tom Goodwin spent the week end in Birmingham, visiting Mr .and Mrs. Felton Goodwin.

Guess you have heard about the slogan an "unknown" wrote, concerning Lucky Strike Cigarettes. Walking into an advertising agency in New York this fellow struck the key note to a slogan which the above named Cigarette Company paid him exactly $25,000 for THINKING! Do not be surprised to see the new slogan which has been adopted—It is, "Be happy—Go LUCKY"! How many times have you said those words never thinking of their intrinsic value?

Felton Goodwin, prominently identified with the Internal Revenue Department in Birmingham for the past two years, has received his third promotion, and will leave for his new assignment of responsible duties with the Federal Government on January 15, to become a resident of Opelika, Alabama. Mr. Goodwin will have under his direct supervision six counties.

Personally, we know of none more worthy of this promotion than Mr. Goodwin. There are none who more sinecrely deserve the honors he has received since leaving Columbiana, where he was employed as the efficient Chief Clerk in the Tax Assessor's office for four years. We join Mr. Goodwin's legion of friends in the County in wishing for him continued success and with it — HAPPINESS!

Peeking in, poking about and ringing a few door bells, we find a bit of local news about folk you know—Miss Ruth Luck, of University, spent the week end in Columbiana.--"Bub" Gordon, has had the distinction of being elected Advertising Manager of the Crimson-White publication from University.—Saturday afternoon—no football game to clutter up the ether—Everybody, sad-sober-and with that "nothing to do" until New Year's-tilt-feeling! Milton Bird and his lucrative business, at a dead stand still! However, business will "pick up" when the New Year dawns —L. G. Fulton, Frank Fulton, Milton Bird and Doug Holman, looking a bit the worse for wear since a narrow escape on Saturday night in an automobile wreck. Better "Slow Dwn" Boys, the newly elected patrolman will get you next time--if 'SPEEDING was the trouble.—School will disband on December 20th for the holiday season.—L. C. "Lives of great men now remind us

Mrs. John Little, of Wilton, was the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Cage Head Tuesday.

The postman has just brought another letter in from our friend on Sassafras Farm. Watch for it in next week's issue of the Democrat. He, whoever he is, sends Christmas wishes to all readers of this weekly newspaper and a special message which we will tell you more about next week. Many conjectures regarding this "personality" have been handed in—but so far, Personal Mention is still—"in the dark."

TO OUR FRIENDS AND SUBSCRIBERS

In an honest endeavor to bring to Shelby County readers of the Democrat, the most interesting, entertaining and informative paper possible, we have asked many of our subscribers to write us their idea of what constitutes the best newspaper for their needs and requirements.

Some years ago, rural people were satisfied with local news from their immediate communities—but for the past few years, we know that the attitude of the rural communities is changed. They want more information on current topics, State, County, and National, and we believe we have solved their wishes in the policy of the Democrat to bring to them, in addition to a thorough coverage of the local territory, including Court and legal procedure, neighborhood correspondence, personal, live stock and produce markets, a comprehensive digest of current events; an intelligent interpretation of Washington news —views from the national leaders in all parties and in all walks of life; feature writers, a good clean serial novel, the Sunday School lesson, comics and a Kiddie Kolumn for the children; fashions for mi-lady, and many other "ideas" which judging from your generous response and patronage we believe complies with your requests for what you want to find in the paper each week.

May we not now ask that you renew your subscription to The Democrat? Our Christmas issue, filled with advertising matter and other features will be off press next week, we want to share it with you.

Let us hear from you. And a million thanks for all your thoughtful kindnesses to us during the year.

First Aid Treatment Taught Thousands By Red Cross

More than 187,000 certificates showing completion of first aid courses were issued last year by the Red Cross. This shows a gain of 56,000 certificates over the previous year. Approximately 64,200 boys in C.C.C camps throughout the country passed first aid tests. Since the Red Cross first entered the field of first aid teaching, being one of the first organizations in the world to do so, almost one million persons have been trained in handling emergency treatment.

The annual report of the Red Cross further reveals that more than 327,000 copies of the Red Cross Aid Handbook have been sold at home and abroad.

The Red Cross has assisted 54,305 veterans in clearing their cases through the U. S. Veterans' Bureau this past year.

Last year 3,837,941 persons became members of the Red Cross. The annual roll call takes place each year between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day.

Junior Red Cross members increased by 402,000 enrollments during the year which has just passed. Junior members carried on an exchange of correspondence with junior members in 62 other countries having Red Cross Societies.

TO FOIL BANK CROOKS

NEW YORK.—The American Bankers Association Protective Committee has developed a plan of bank inspection to bring out exposure hazards or weak spots in respect to attacks by criminals based on its long-established, nation-wide experience in investigating bank burglaries, holdups and sneak thefts.

The inspection covers eighty leading questions and seventeen recommendations which are instructive in the prevention of such crimes. These relate to such subjects as the use of alarms and other protective equipment, also the condition of windows, doors, skylights and other entrances which have facilitated the early morning entry of bandits who kidnap bank employees from their homes during the night, or break into the bank premises and bind and gag the employees.

BANKERS HELP

"Save the Land and You Save the Man" is the essence of a suggested agricultural program recommended by the Arkansas Bankers Agricultural Committee. "Beware of impoverished soil. It leads to impoverished homes," says a statement sent to the banks to be distributed to their farmer customers. "To help nature save the land, build up the soil, by:

a. Stopping soil erosion.
b. Planting legumes.
c. Raising livestock.
d. Developing pastures.

"Look ahead with confidence—know what you are doing, therefore:

1. Draw up a farm inventory.
2. Keep a record, daily or weekly.
3. Budget expense, and keep within it."

Mr. Chester Crim visited friends and relatives in Birmingham on last Sunday.

Fresh

Inexpensive, Easy Patchwork Quilts

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

Patchwork quilts as a rule are elaborate, cost quite a bit and represent many days of tedious work. This work and cost can be cut down to a minimum as shown in the illustration. Any of these designs can be used on eighteen nine-inch blocks and so arranged to make a full size quilt. About three ounces or one yard of prints is all that is required for the patchwork. Folder No. 536 in colors illustrates four ways to assemble these different designs, also cut out diagrams for six different patches like the above. Information about yardage required for back, border and blocks is also given.

The folder No. 536 and folder No. 0 with other quilting information will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents, or send us 19 cents and we will send folder and sufficient beautiful patches to make up the patchwork on one of these simple quilts.

We're Still Getting Mad On as the Savages Do

When Tom Sawyer and the new boy first met and took one another's measure they worked themselves up to the point of combat by passing insults and dares. In the Arabian desert, when the tribes feel the urge for battle, they prepare for it by dispatching impudent verse back and forth. When one side feels that the impertinence can only be atoned for in blood the shouts give way to blows.

All very childish, of course. But is it so much different from the civilized methods? Young Italians threaten the British embassy in Rome and break the windows of British places of business. The British hurry troops to Egypt. The inspired press of Italy is as contemptuous of all things British as are the Bedouin versifiers of their tribal enemies. And Britain moves up warships from Gibraltar to Malta, in the very shadow of the Italian toe, as though to pinch it. The principle is the same all the way through, and even the practice does not increase greatly in dignity.

Fair Day

Friendship maketh indeed a fair day in the affections from storm and tempests, but it maketh daylight in the understanding out of darkness and confusion of thoughts.—Bacon.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Cakes and pies will not burn while baking if a sheet of asbestos is cut and fitted into gas stove oven.

* * *

If skins peeled from apples when making pies are boiled until soft, then strained into pie shell before putting in apples, the flavor of pie is improved.

In arranging the table for your bridge luncheon you can get the most distinctive effect by choosing a luncheon set of that sheer cathedral linen done in pastel-tinted embroidery. They are a change from the usual type of Italian linens.

* * *

To remove iodine that has been spilled on linen or cotton, make a paste of starch and cold water and spread over stain. Let stand until dry, then brush off.

A space should be left between walls of refrigerator and dishes containing foods to allow free circulation of air. This preserves the foods.

When roasting beef have oven very hot at first to seal in juices, then reduce heat, cooking more slowly.

* * *

When salt hardens in shakers, remove tops, turn upside down, fill with hot paraffin and place upside down on a smooth surface. Before paraffin becomes too hard open holes in shaker tops with a toothpick. Salt will keep quite dry in shaker when covers are treated in this manner.

Capacity for Improvement Even in Worst Character

Every wrong propensity may be finally subdued or considerably corrected; every right one may be assisted by additional motives and carried on to yet higher perfection. Even in the worst characters some capacity for virtuous improvement, of which no vestige has yet been observed, may be discovered or drawn forth.—Blair.

Crush-Resistant Velvet Good News

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IN VIEWING the current fashion picture it appears as if velvet is about to "run away with the mode." Not that velvet is news to any of us, for women who keep pace with fashion have become so thoroughly and enthusiastically velvet-conscious by this time, they go about town, they dine, they dance, they even sleep in velvet.

However, comes some news that is news, exciting news, news that is joy-radiating. It's crush-resistant velvet, with the emphasis on crush-resistant. In the way of good news, what could be better?

Now, please do not jump at the conclusion that the new crush-resistant velvet is absolutely non-crushable. No such claim is made by members of the Velvet Guild who are sponsoring it, but they do say that its resistance far exceeds any endeavor in that direction up to date, thus bespeaking a greater, more dependable serviceability for this new type of velvet. Anyway it's a comforting thought to know that there's a velvet to be had that is definitely more resistant to crushing than any velvet heretofore known.

Speaking of the overwhelming predominance of velvet in the present mode, some style leaders go so far as to declare that this is the most important season from a fashion angle that velvet has ever known. From accessories of all kinds through the entire gamut of clothes goes velvet on the fall and winter program.

For daytime wear the vogue for velvet suits and coats, fur-trimmed or otherwise, is established. For afternoon, for formal as well as superb plain weaves in velvet. The heavy classic Lyon velvet is an excellent medium for gowns of like pomp and dignity. It is a staple, too, for tailored suits.

Beside the well-woven yarn-dyed costume velvets, interesting variations have been devised with mixtures of metal and cellophane threads which answer the call for glitter this season. Crinkled velvets which look as if shirred are also much in evidence. Then, too, delicately woven transparent velvets hold their own. This type shirs and pleats beautifully.

A smart new note is the use of velvet with tweeds and woolens. Tweed skirts with velvet blouse, tweeds with velvet belts, collars, cuffs and scarfs. Tweed coats detailed with velvet are all featured fashions, as are also the new gilets, waistcoats and complete cape linings of velvet as used with colorful woolens and tweeds.

The costumes of the trio of fashionables here pictured are made of the new crush-resistant velvet. A slight touch of the military is expressed in the red tape and buttons of the black velvet street dress centered in the illustration. It is topped with a self-velvet soldiers' hat with gold cord.

To the right in the group is a black velvet dinner dress with full three-quarter sleeves of silver and multicolor embroidery in a Chinese design. The evening hat has a net crown and a velvet visor.

Cross fox lavishly trims a smart suit of crush-resistant velvet as shown to the left. The jacket is belted and the skirt is the new cocktail length. The blouse is gun-metal lame. Velvet gloves, bag and beret complete the costume.

There is a Santa Claus

ROSS HUTTON finished telling his little daughter the story of Christmas, of the shepherds and the Christ child, and had as tactfully as possible explained about Santa Claus, Polly heaved a sigh. "Well, I think there's a Santy Claus and I hope he brings me a sheep like the ones in the story."

The day before Christmas, Ross saw a white woolly lamb in the window of a toy shop. He was glad he had walked to his office. Otherwise he might not have seen the lamb. He would stop on his way home and get it. But one of the men in the office offered to drive him home, so the lamb was forgotten until he heard Polly as she was being put to bed tell her mother she hoped "Santy" wouldn't forget about the "sheep." Ross looked at his watch and decided the shop would probably still be open. Anne called to him to ask where he was going, and he answered, "Back in a few minutes."

When he parked his car before the shop, the thought that the lamb might not be there, struck him for the first time. He felt much relieved, therefore, when he saw the lamb in the window.

As he tucked the package under his arm and turned to leave the shop, a little boy came in. Ross heard him ask the proprietor if he still had the lamb that was in the window that morning. He was told the gentleman just leaving had bought it. "Oh," the disappointment he felt showed in his voice. Wasn't there something else he would like? But there didn't seem to be anything else.

Santa Claus Had Brought Her a Sheep and a Baby Doll.

As he got into his car Ross caught sight of a small boy standing before the window, his gaze fastened on the place where the lamb had been. He seemed so disappointed, it was too bad there wasn't another lamb for him, Ross thought as he drove away. But probably something else would catch his fancy and he would forget all about the lamb. Children were like that. Ross wondered though if Polly would have forgotten so easily. He scarcely thought so. The poor little thing would have been mightily disappointed. He was glad he had remembered before it was too late.

But try as he would he couldn't get the picture of the little fellow out of his mind. Halfway home he turned his car around and went back to the shop. The boy had left, so Ross asked the proprietor if he could tell him where the boy lived. He lived just around the corner. He often came into the shop. Tonight he had come to buy the little lamb for his small sister, and was so disappointed when he found it gone. The proprietor had tried to interest him in something else, but he hadn't been successful in doing it. Ross interrupted to know in just which house the boy lived. Then in order to have some satisfactory excuse to offer at home, he bought a baby doll for Polly.

When somewhat later he came into the living room where Anne was busy trimming the Christmas tree, she wanted to know where on earth he had been. He shook his head and put his finger to his lips as a warning not to waken Polly. He placed the package under the tree and with a happy smile he began helping with the work of trimming.

The next morning he was awakened by Polly's happy cry that she knew there was a "Santy Claus" because he had brought her a "sheep" and a baby doll just as she asked him to. Ross sprang out of bed and into the living room. Where could the "sheep" have come from? For there was Polly with a lamb under one arm and the doll under the other.

"Where?" Ross asked, pointing to the lamb. Anne whispered that she had bought it.

"There is a Santy Claus, isn't there, Daddy?" Polly's voice implied she was giving information rather than asking it.

Ross heartily agreed with her: "There certainly is a Santa Claus beyond a doubt."

A Frock With Slender Lines for Matron Who Wears Size Forty-Six

PATTERN 2487

Here's a real "find" for the woman who's a size forty-six, and has been seeking a dressy frock that will ably conceal extra pounds, yet allow her to look as young as she feels. Then, too, there's also a wealth of slenderness to be gained by center panels, front and back, which hold a wide box pleat in seam. Deserving of the title "bosom friend" is that dressy, graceful twin jabot that so successfully conceals too ample curves. The matron will do well to choose a smooth, sleek silk, satin, or crepe for her "very best" frock, let the jabot contrast, and bright buttons do a little "highlighting."

Pattern 2487 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and ⅞ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Hawaii Discovery Made Possible by Franklin

To Benjamin Franklin is due "safe conduct" that enabled the discovery of Hawaii, today one of the most powerful units of America's national defense in the west.

In the Archives of Hawaii, on the grounds of the former royal palace in Honolulu, reposes a photostatic copy of a letter written from France in 1779 by Franklin, who was then minister plenipotentiary from the United States to the Court of France.

The document is addressed to "all captains and commanders of armed ships acting by commission from the congress of the United States of America now in war with Great Britain," and explains that as Captain Cook's expedition had been fitted out before America and Great Britain were at war, the great navigator and explorer should be given a safe conduct and not considered as an enemy.

Keep On Trying; Even Cinders Have a Market

No man is ever finished, no man is ever through, licked, whipped, reduced to worthlessness unless he allows it to be so. He may think the fires of adversity have burned him to ashes or to a cinder, but remember ashes still have their uses and there is a tremendous market for cinders!

A man needs to be able to fight, of course. He must be able to. Not only that, but at times he must do it. However, he must not lay such stress on fighting qualities that he forgets man also needs the generous and kindly and understanding heart.

IN HIGH STYLE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In this charming two-piece afternoon dress we see fashion at its smartest. Antique gold is the color of the silk lame overblouse. One of the gestures of fashion this season is to make up rich materials as simply as possible so as to throw the emphasis on the elegance of the fabric. The skirt is of plum color silk crepe. One of fashion's whims this season is for young girls to wear the very deep plum purple color which used to be considered "oldish."

PARIS HATS SHAPED LIKE BASE OF IRON

High hats for sports, but flat for dress.

The latest and flattest hat shown in Paris is shaped exactly like the base of a large flatiron, with the felt doubled and squared to make an inch-thick plank. It is worn well forward on the head, over a black bandeau, and has two hat-pins, one red and one black, as trim.

Nearly all of the newest hats have a forward plunge. Velvet toques are draped so that one part falls over the forehead and the other is cut in a narrow, rounded back line to keep the hat on the head.

Fur hats, or those fur-trimmed, also dip forward.

Off-the-Face Tendency in Hats Is Stronger Than Ever

There is a sudden and definite backward movement in the early fall hats. The off-the-face tendency is stronger than ever, and the new hats seem to have added height as well, conveying the idea of a sort of combination halo and bonnet.

The combination of felt and velvet promises to be smart for fall, as will the combination of velvet and grosgrain. The new halo hats consist of a tight-fitting little skull cap, usually of velvet, with an upturned felt brim which is wider in front than in back.

Short Veils, Long Trains

The bride who marches to an altar bedecked with chrysanthemums and gladioli will wear white satin, velvet or moire. Her train will be long, her veil quite short and her bouquet decorations will furnish the color for the scene. It is possible, of course, to order exquisite bridal dresses in any shade under the sun from the deep Renaissance blues to rich marigold yellows. But the discriminating bride doesn't. She sticks to white for herself and puts rich-toned fabrics on her maids.

Christmas Boxes

Giving Christmas boxes is said to spring from an old custom of priests putting on board of all out-going ships boxes for alms. These were opened at Christmastime and masses said for the givers of the alms. The box was called Christ mass box and from this comes the custom of Christmas boxes and gifts.

A PROCLAMATION
BY THE GOVERNOR

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Alabama at the regular session 1935 ordered an election to be held by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which said amendment is herein set out, and ordered that said election be held on the First Tuesday after the expiration of three months from and after the final adjournment of the present session of the Legislature; and

A Letter of Appreciation From London, England

13 Longville Road
Kennington
London, S. E. 11.
England.
December 3rd, 1935

Dear Mildred White Wallace:-

This is just to let you know that we are receiving the Democrat every week and to thank you for sending it, my husband enjoys reading it just as much as I do. It is so nice to know what our friends in Shelby County are doing while we are away. I have been intending to write you for some time, but it seems so hard to find time to write. There is always some one here or we are going places, that it is hard to get letters written. I don't know whether what we have been doing will interest you but will try and give you a little idea of the places and things we have seen. First, we had a very enjoyable crossing, there were only eight passengers and Mr. Luther the only man, but every one was very agreeable and as it was only a small boat, we had to make our own amuse ments which wasn't really hard to do. We had a lovely lounge and radio and all the books, magazines, etc. that one wanted, also had a paper with the highlights of the days news every day, besides hearing it over the radio.

The meals were excellent, so really no one had any complaints to make and the weather was very pleasant practically all the way across, we were behind the gales all the way across and our roughest weather was when we reached the Irish Seas.

A few days after we landed, we went to see the Crystal Palace, it is a beautiful place and we are planning to go back again as one day isn't enough to do justice to the place The day we went they were having Nassed Bands playing from all over England for various prizes, they have this contest every year. There were thousands of people from all over England there to hear them. It was really worth going to see and hear.

The next places were the Houses of Parliament and Westminister Abbey, both were very interesting places, in the Abbey we met up with an American that now lives in London, he is very interesting and knows London from one end to the other,

State Farmers Win Two National Cups

AUBURN—Organized farmers of Alabama and Hale County this year won two national loving cups at the annual meeting of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

One cup was awarded organized farmers throughout Alabama for showing the greatest increase in farm bureau membership of any state in the country, and the other was presented to Hale County farmers for showing the biggest farm bureau membership increase of any county in the United States.

Recently, more than 15,000 leading farmers of Alabama have become farm bureau members, reports J. L. Edwards, president of the state farm bureau, who said that present indications point to a 30,000 membership by the first of 1936. Over 1,200 Hale County farmers recently became members of the Hale County bureau.

POTATO GROWERS NOTIFIED OF IRISH POTATO ACT HERE

AUBURN—Alabama producers of Irish potatoes for sale should get in touch with hteir county agent immediately so the agent may take the proper steps to obtain tax exemption stamps for each potato grower in the state, advises W. H. Robertson state potato agent for Alabama.

"It is absolutely necessary that you determine, within the next week if there are any potatoes raised for sale in your county," writes Mr. Robertson to each county agent in the state. The 1935 potato act, passed by Congress, provides that a tax of 5 cents per hundred pounds may be collected on all potatoes sold, except such poundage as may be alloted to the farmer and for which stamps are issued."

Dear Mildred White Wallace:-

The sixth grade is getting ready for Christmas. We have our tree, a big one. The boys had a hard time getting it fixed. After they thought they were through, in came the tree. To their surprise it was too large for the room. After a struggle they got it out the door again, and had to fix it all over. Well, we have it up and ready to decorate. I hope we will have no more trouble.

Christmas and New Year will not be long off. guess you are planning on a visit from Santa Claus. We are. All the boys and girls in our room are trying to be good. But some can't succeed. I guess they are very excited.

Helium Proves Useful in Both Science and in War

Has Many Potential Uses So Far Not Exploited.

Washington.—Hoisting the stratosphere balloon Explorer II more than thirteen miles above the earth, helium vividly demonstrated that it can perform useful jobs for science as well as for war.

Soaring steadily up, in spite of the tug of gravity, this aristocratic gas was showing its preference for the upper heights, where it is much more at home than at sea level. At the earth's surface, the atmosphere contains only about one-half of one-thousandth of one per cent of helium (.0000054), but 500 miles away from the earth it is believed to consist largely of hydrogen and helium, which may finally escape into practically empty space between the stars.

"Colorless, tasteless, odorless helium has a temperament all its own," says the National Geographic society. "It has no savage tendency to be destructive, for it is non-inflammable and non-poisonous. Being a monatomic gas, its hermit nature keeps each individual particle, or atom, aloof from its fellows. Helium is so haughty, in fact, that it refuses to mix with other elements unless shocked or jolted into a combination by an electric discharge.

"Ordinarily lazy and inert, helium's only exercise is to drift heavenward when released, being the lightest known gas except hydrogen, and to indulge in the lazy sport of conducting electricity, in which it can be beaten only by neon. But it makes less effort to struggle through rubberized fabric than does hydrogen, thereby winning a commercial advantage, for less of it is lost from a balloon. Helium is stubbornly opposed to change, remaining the same at low temperatures which make rubber as brittle as glass.

Largest Helium Plant.

"This latter quality aids man in separating helium from natural gas. At Soncy, about seven miles west of Amarillo, Texas, the world's largest helium production plant processes natural gas, piped 12 miles from wells in the Cliffside structure.

"This plant, operated by the United States bureau of mines with leased rights to gas from 50,000 acres of land, can produce over twenty-four million cubic feet of helium a year. One year the cost of production was estimated at less than a cent—7 mills—per cubic foot of helium, and during one busy month the cost dropped to 4 mills. In 1915, when the world output was 100 cubic feet, the price was nearer $2,400 per cubic foot.

"Helium esecaped general notice until the destruction of World war airships by fiery bullets started the search for non-inflammable gas to substitute for hydrogen, which explodes easily, even in contact with air.

U. S. Biggest Producer.

"The United States alone has helium-bearing natural gas in amounts sufficient for commercial production. Ohio, Colorado, Utah, northern Oklahoma, and especially Kansas and Texas have gas wells producing as high as 7 or 8 per cent helium. The 'sands' of the Cliffside structure in Texas, now being worked by the government plant, have only 2 per cent helium, but have been chosen because they are easy to work, have a steady volume, and a market for residue gas.

"It has been estimated that from natural gas, a million cubic feet of helium escape daily. Classed as a 'rare' gas, helium is rare in quantity but not in occurrence, for it can be found nearly everywhere, in exceedingly small amounts, in the older rocks of the earth's crust, in gas from mineral springs, in sea and river water, and especially in natural gas.

"Its power to conduct electricity gives helium potential uses which so far have not been exploited. Its main commercial use now is in aeronautics, with possibilities of development in food preservation, fireproofing, refrigeration, and cooling electric motors. It might also be employed in air conditioning for people who must work under great pressure, as in deep-sea diving, caisson work, and tunneling. Scientists find helium helpful as a standard wave length in studies with the spectroscope and as a medium for low temperature studies. In an atmosphere of helium, hot metals can be worked without the corrosion they suffer under normal conditions."

Spain Sees Old Dramas of Lope de Vega

Tercentenary of Dramatist's Death Observed.

Madrid, Spain.—Spain is celebrating this year the tercentenary of the death of its great dramatist, Lope de Vega, one of the world's most prolific writers. De Vega wrote more than 1,800 plays and was equally productive in other literary work, composing epics, romances, lyrics, pastorals and novels.

Some of his most famous plays, such as "La Dama Boba," or "The Stupid Lady," and "Fueneovejuna" have been staged here this year in the Teatro Espanol, the semi-official state theater, and played in one of Madrid's leading parks, just as they were played in de Vega's time. They also have been produced to some extent in the provinces, where strangely enough the revival has had a more popular success than in Madrid.

De Vega's plays are so numerous that only about 450 of them have ever been gathered and definitelly attributed to him. Even though his dramatic works were written in verse, he wrote a hundred of them, he once said, in only 24 hours each, and there are records preserved today that bear out tales of his marvelous facility.

At one time he undertook a play in collaboration, another dramatist writing one act, Lope de Vega a second, and the two doing the third jointly. The other man rose at 3 a. m. to complete his part, but de Vega did not get up until two hours later, then finished his section, wrote a long poem, and after eating a hearty breakfast, went out to water the garden while waiting for his friend to complete the other part.

Lope de Vega wrote his first play at the age of twelve. His enormous production is explained in part by the fact that he could earn very little for a play, and that the public was constantly demanding new ones. Until a few years before his death he scoffed at his plays as mere potboilers and thought his fame would be based on his other work. Today all except his plays practically are forgotten.

Girl Born on Ship as It Arrives From Germany

New York.—Twenty minutes before the North German Lloyd liner Europa left Quarantine for her Hudson river pier, a girl baby was born in the ship's hospital to Mrs. Paul A. Schulz, twenty-six, a third-class passenger, who is accompanied by her husband, Paul Schulz, a machinist and a United States citizen. Immigration officials said the child could adopt the citizenship of her father or was entitled to be a German, the nationality of the mother, as she was born under the German flag.

FIRST SNOW QUEEN

To Theresa Sham of Stowe, Vt., goes the honor of being the first young woman to be elected a snow queen this winter in the United States. She was given the title at a carnival of the Mount Mansfield Ski club.

Building Work on Giant Vessel Is Aiding 250,000

Glasgow.—Nearly a quarter of a million people in Britain are helping, directly or indirectly, to fit out the great Cunard-White Star liner Queen Mary.

This statement was made here by Lord Inverclyde, when he formally opened an exhibition of a model of the liner.

Lord Inverclyde indicated that the Queen Mary's size was not dictated by an effort to surpass that of any other ship.

"Owing to the amazing developments in naval architecture and marine engineering, it has been found possible," he said, "for two vessels of sufficient speed and size to maintain a regular weekly service between Southampton, Cherbourg, and New York. The Queen Mary and her contemplated sister ship represent the smallest and slowest which could fulfill the conditions and keep up such a service."

Scottish Home Weaving Returns to Prosperity

London.—Cottage industry in the Scottish island of Lewis and Harris producing the well-known hand-made tweeds is enjoying comparative prosperity after a period of severe depression.

The revival has been brought about largely by the limitation of the trademark to genuine products of the local industry to the exclusion of imitation machine-made goods, which has revived the confidence of the public in these remarkable materials.

Lengths of the tweed were presented by the islanders to the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester as wedding presents.

1880 Razor Still Going

Athens, Ohio.—When Wayne Kinney of Pleasanton read an account of a man who had used the same razor for 47 years, he yawned. Kinney has a razor he as used almost daily since 1880—and it seems to be good for many more years.

Jobs for U. S. Tied to Allegiance Oath

Rock Island, Ill.—Contractors who wished to perform work for the United States government in 1869 had to swear that they would support and defend the Constitution of the United States to be eligible to receive federal work, it has been ascertained by Capt. M. E. Sorley, Military Assistant in Rock Island District, United States Engineers.

Examining records in the archives of the district engineer office on Rock Island arsenal island, the captain came across a contract dated June 1, 1869, for the piers and abutments of the Rock Island bridge across the Mississippi river. The contract contained the clause pertaining to the Constitution. Such a clause is not contained in present-day federal contracts.

BRITISH WAR CHIEF

Alfred Duff Cooper, former financial secretary to the treasury, who has been named war minister of Great Britain by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin. His wife is the famous beauty, Lady Diana Manners.

Ship Steward Collects Autographs 25 Years

London.—One of the world's greatest autograph books belongs to Frank Moss, chief steward of the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain.

In its pages are the signatures of royalty, famous naval and army men titled people, artists, authors, bishops and stage and movie stars, which he has collected during seven voyages around the world.

Moss, who is now in the twenty-fifth year of sea life, has been with the Empress of Britain ever since she made her maiden voyage.

Tiny Chapel Seats 8

Festina, Iowa.—In a grove near the ruins of Fort Atkinson, an early Iowa military post, stands St. Anthony's chapel, believed to be the smallest church in the world. The quaint building measures 12 by 20 feet, contains four pews capable of seating eight persons.

Thief Steals Only One of Her Shoes!

Denver.—Denver police are puzzled by a bandit who robbed Miss La Verne Dannels, twenty-four. Miss Dannels reported that while walking in a street with another girl late at night, a youthful thug seized her, threw her to the sidewalk, grabbed one of her shoes and fled. She valued her loss at $8.50, price of the shoes.

MIRACLE OF BRAIN SURGERY REVEALED

Parts of Skull Removed, Treated and Restored.

San Francisco.—A miracle of brain surgery, by which portions of the skull are removed, cured of their ills outside, and restored safely to the head hours or even weeks later, was described before the American College of Surgeons here.

The surgery has been under development for several years at the University of California medical school, and was explained by Howard C. Naffziger, M. D., head of the department of surgery at the university, and O. W. Jones, Jr., M. D.

A new test that enables physicians to forecast whether a person is liable to develop high blood pressure in later life was described.

The test, developed at the Mayo clinic and described by Dr. S. Marx White of Minneapolis, is known as the cold test. A person's blood pressure is measured while he lies on his back, completely still. Thus the lowest blood pressure level reached is found and recorded.

Next his left hand is dipped into ice cold water. This promptly changes the blood pressure, measured on the other arm. In a few seconds the hand is removed from the cold water, and again the blood pressure is measured every 30 seconds. If the previous blood pressure is not regarded in two minutes the person is susceptible to high blood pressure.

A new form of the splanchnic nerve operation was reported as an apparent cure after high blood pressure has reached what are ordinarily considered hopeless stages.

The operation was described by Alfred W. Adson, M. D., of the Mayo clinic. The idea is to cut the automatic nerve control of muscles in blood vessels, thus relieving these muscles and stopping high pressure of the blood almost instantly. On the operation table it drops an average of 100 points.

Dr. E. Payne Palmer of Phoenix, Ariz., proposed to the conference that every airport in America and every dangerous crossroad should be guarded by a first aid station.

Man Goes Mad on Devil's Island; He Is Innocent

Paris.—Nineteen years ago, a young Frenchman, Jean Guien, was charged with the murder of an English dancing girl named Muriel Hayes, then appearing with a troupe in a music hall.

He was convicted, in spite of his protestations of innocence, condemned to death, then reprieved.

Reprieve meant Devil's Island for life.

Three years ago, the real murderer was arrested on another charge, and signed a confession exonerating Guien.

Attempts to have Guien's conviction quashed revealed the fact that at about the same time, he had escaped and all trace of him had been lost.

A few weeks ago, guards on the track of another fugitive found Jean Guien in a fever-infested swamp, alive but mad. His mind had given way as a result of his sufferings.

He died a few hours after learning that his innocence had been established.

The story was revealed in a report to Paris officials.

Crows Are Responsible for Mysterious Shots

Auburn, N. Y.—George Fronczek, forty-four, promises to use scarecrows instead of bullets to keep crows from his small city garden in the future.

Fronczek used a rifle to chase the crows from his land, and the International Harvester company had to close part of its plants when workmen were endangered by bullets from an unknown source.

After an investigation the source was found to be Fronczek, and he was given a suspended sentence on a charge of discharging firearms within the city limits.

Australian Skipper Has Skipped Rope 600 Miles

Melbourne.—In 28 days, Tom Morris, an Australian skipping enthusiast has skipped 600 miles. His journey was from Melbourne to Sydney along the Hume highway. He estimates that he skipped about 800 turns to each mile, and about 472,000 turns for the journey. He wore out five skipping ropes, but used only one pair of shoes.

Pet Gander Follows Its Owner on His Rambles

Northampton, Mass.—Like the little lamb that followed Mary everywhere she went, "Dick," a gander, is always at the heels of Edmund Laccas, seventy-nine, retired mill worker. On his daily trips to town Laccas can be seen followed by "Dick," his chest out and chin in and stepping high like a well-drilled German private.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

Washington.—There is more unanimity—in private conversations among both Democrats and Republicans, New Dealers and reactionaries—that the silver policy of the United States government is weird than on any other controversial subject, probably.

There is not so much public criticism of it, for various reasons, mostly concerning the electoral votes of certain strategic western states.

But the truth is that no one explains it satisfactorily, probably because it is rather difficult for anyone to explain something he does not understand, and the only two persons credited with understanding the silver policy are President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. Neither of them does any talking, if one excepts the occasional retort of Morgenthau that he is "still buying silver" and is "carrying out the mandates of the silver law."

The most intelligent theory as to the actions of the administration runs something like this:

First, it was forced on the administration. Had it not been accepted, the probability is that congress would have rushed through some other inflation measure. It is not impossible that congress might have forced the use of printing press money to finance governmental needs, and pay the national debt, as many advocated.

Second, having accepted the silver law, the idea of a tremendous profit to the treasury developed in the minds of Roosevelt and Morgenthau. They had just made a profit in gold for the treasury of something like two billion, eight hundred million dollars. Incidentally six hundred million is still in the treasury, and two billion was converted into the famous but mysterious equalization fund, about which, like the silver policy, nobody knows anything except Roosevelt and Morgenthau, and they won't tell.

Profit Looked Good

So the idea of making a profit on silver of about two billion, to be made by buying and commandeering silver cheap, and revaluing it later—as gold was revalued—at a much higher price, was very appealing.

Up to this point, as a matter of fact, there is no doubt about the precise accuracy of what happened. Now comes the more nebulous part.

Having conceived the idea of a big profit, obviously the more cheaply silver could be bought, the greater the profit would be. So every now and then Morgenthau would act as though the silver buying policy had been abandoned. This always resulted in the price of silver falling, and from the standpoint of accumulating a lot of silver at a low price, everything was splendid. With the slight exception that the government has nearly always, since the policy started, paid more for newly mined silver produced in this country than the world price.

But as a result of his clever strategems to convince world silver holders that the price was not going to advance, the world gradually came to the conclusion that the whole silver price boosting objective of this government had vanished. So the world, believing the price of silver would fall as soon as the silver experimentations of the United States were concluded, began to dump silver.

With the result that if the United States tomorrow abandoned its whole silver policy (which it positively will not) the result would be a rather heavy loss to the treasury on its silver operations to date.

Whereas, if Morgenthau had complied with the spirit of the silver law, and kept up a brave front of forcing the price of silver up, the world would not be dumping silver now, but holding it for the alleged objective mentioned in the silver law—$1.29 an ounce.

Substitute for NRA

President Roosevelt is still convinced that there must be a substitute for NRA. Further, he is still convinced that an essential part of the advance program is to convince the American people that business cannot work out a satisfactory substitute—that it must be imposed by the government.

This is the status despite the obvious fiasco of Maj. George L. Berry's conference, which was far from satisfactory to the President, in that the major did not succeed to anything like the desired extent in simulating an impression of fairness.

No one inside the administration criticizes Major Berry's motives, nor his advance plan. There is a good deal of undercover criticism, however, of his lack of tact in handling the situation that developed.

Critics admit that they do not blame Berry for his frame of mind when the big meet was called to order. They know all about the preliminary meetings of groups of business men, the obvious desire of a great many industries to sabotage the whole movement, and the fact that many had actually come with more intention of stirring up trouble than of aiding in any conciliatory agreement or co-ordination of the various viewpoints.

So when several of the business representatives started the fireworks, they typified for Berry the spearhead of the whole force he was fighting against, and he lashed out.

It would have been much better, critics point out, had Berry restrained his feelings, and, after reminding the conference that nothing was on the agenda for this meeting but his outlining speech, then announced the meeting adjourned, but invited those who wished to talk to organize their own meeting and go ahead.

This would have left the business representatives who wanted to obstruct free to talk their heads off, but no particular harm to any administration objective would have been done.

Feared Speeches

Berry's own objection to this course was that speeches would be made at such a meeting, which might have "stolen the headlines" in the next day's papers. His critics admit this, but insist that the net result of the speeches would have been to show more conclusively than anything else could possibly have done the difficulty business representatives would have had in getting together.

Two courses are now open to the administration, and decision as to which will be followed will be made by Mr. Roosevelt himself.

One thing is absolutely essential to either course. The face of Major Berry must be saved. He is far too popular, especially with American Federation of Labor leaders, to permit of anything else.

One course would be to allow Major Berry to take all the letters he has had from business men of various shades of opinion, work them out, and finally produce a report recommending specific legislation for a substitute NRA.

Despite widespread objections to the whole idea of NRA on the part of many business man—especially since prices have begun to rise—plenty of justification could be produced in these letters in Major Berry's possession for such a course.

It is true that some of the letter writers have since changed their minds. A great many business men wanted some form of NRA restored while prices were still low. They wanted some form of government protection against chiselers. Now that prices are rising, the danger to their own selfish interests is not so frightening. So they would like to get rid of government interference and supervision, now that they no longer need, as they see it, its protection.

Hoover Vs. Borah

Will Herbert Hoover's strength at the Republican national convention be sufficient to stop William E. Borah's nomination if the Idaho Lion gets going good?

That question is being asked in many political circles, both Democratic and Republican, since the recent radio blast of the veteran lone wolf of the American house of lords. Particularly since, in preaching the "doctrine of plenty as against the doctrine of scarcity," he goes right to the heart of the problem which is the chief concern of every Republican anxious to get his own party in power, and to get Franklin D. Roosevelt out. To wit: the problem of what to offer the farm belt in place of the much denounced AAA farm benefits and processing taxes.

As a matter of fact, up until that speech, you could not find a Republican in Washington who really believed Senator Borah had a chance for the nomination. This was true despite the paucity of available timber for the G. O. P. nomination, and despite the fact that Borah has been running first in nearly every poll taken, beginning with that of Robert H. Lucas many months ago.

Borah was simply set aside for two reasons. One was his age. He will be seventy-one on June 29, next, just after the convention adjourns. The other was the strong group of individuals high in Republican ranks who object vigorously to his nomination.

Herbert Hoover is in a way the head and front of this group, but it is very large, and important. The opposition of those composing it is based on two things. Borah's political and economic philosophy, and what they call his "undependability."

A very prominent magazine editor has told many Republican leaders of his own negotiations with Borah for a long series of articles. The fees for the articles were to be huge. There was no limitation on what he could say—no attempt to dictate policies. Borah, the editor says, was frankly attracted by the money and the opportunity to reach such a large audience so easily. But he reluctantly declined the offer.

His explanation is the whole point. One article might be all right. Two might be right. But over such a period of time as was involved, he was likely to change his views so radically that the later articles might contradict the earlier!

It is this, rather than Borah's political philosophy, which today causes most of the opposition on the part of Republican leaders to Borah. It so happens that many of them would swallow his economic views without gagging if they could depend upon him, once in power—on the theory that anything would be worth trying to be sure of throwing Roosevelt out.

A Lucky New Year's Error

By LUELLA B. LYONS

IN ABOUT three hours it would be New Year's eve, but to Eve Blair that meant nothing but heartache, for she was packing to leave Stephen, and was going back to mother. Hadn't Steve said she had mistreated his elderly Aunt Ann, and had been selfish, and a lot of other hastily-said things. Her tears were watering the things she packed, but the phone shrilling out its call, forced her to swallow that ferocious lump in her throat.

"Eve?"

"Yes."

"Listen, here at the New Year's committee headquarters we are swamped with calls for singers. I thought of you, so I wonder if you and Bud won't go out to the Lubberman Home and sing a while for the old folks there. A few old hymns and a few old, sweet ballads, to last from 6:30 to eight bells. Can we depend on you, Eve?"

"You just bet you can. We'll be there," and the phone clicked as the other party hung up the receiver with a thankful sigh. "Must be that Steve offered our services on some other occasion and forgot to tell me about it. Wonder how she knew we used to nickname him Bud? Oh, well, I'll postpone going home to mother till morning; no use in letting these folks down because of our inability to get along." Eve was already digging out Steve's old accordion, her old guitar, some old song books and a hymnal.

It was while Steve and Eve were returning from the old people's home, where they had spent a very happy evening, that Steve fished a letter out of his pocket and held it toward Eve. "Let's burn this old farewell note together when we get home, honey. We can forget and forgive, can't we?"

Eve nodded happily as she snuggled against him as he drove. The trip of cheer had paid many kinds of interest for both the older folks and for Steve and Eve.

"Who could be calling at this time of night?" they wondered as they entered the apartment to hear the phone jangling, demandingly.

"Eve?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, you see it was this way: I was to call Bud and Eve Blairsend and one of my helpers got you on the phone. It was a coincidence of course, especially after the way you took the request. Just a few minutes ago I discovered the mistake and phoned the Home only to be told that we had better never try to send them any other entertainers but you two, so it seems you made a grand hit with them and are elected for the job again real soon, if you're willing . . ." and on went the effervescing and the explaining.

The little god of peacemaking, his job finished, left the scene content with his day's work. Eve held close in Steve's arms, all thoughts of a separation gone, perhaps, forever.

TURNING A NEW LEAF

By KATHERINE EDELMAN

THE glow of soft lamps lent their charm to the living room. Comfort and beauty were two words that symbolized the interior of the Sexton bungalow. Eleanor and Dick, home for the holidays, seemed to be enjoying it all. Eleanor was munching from a box of home-made candy.

"Isn't it nice to be home, Dick?" she murmured. "Mother and dad are precious, making things so comfy."

"Yes, they are," Dick answered thoughtfully. "I wonder if we really show our appreciation. By the way, where are they now?"

"Oh, mother is putting the last finishing touches on my dress for tonight. And dad is packing the freezer of cream that he made."

Dick was silent for a moment, then he jumped quickly from his chair. "Do you know, Eleanor, that we're two pretty selfish children?" he cried. "Here we sit around, doing nothing, leaving mother and dad the burden of everything on their shoulders."

Eleanor's face showed concern. "You're right, Dick, we really ought to be ashamed. . . But it's not too late to help. Let's surprise them. How about us fixing the sandwiches and salad for the party? Mother planned to do it while we were dressing."

In a minute they were in the clean, white kitchen, taking things from the refrigerator. Very carefully, they fixed the brown and white sandwiches, wrapping them in wax paper. Deftly, too, using mother's recipe, Eleanor made the big bowl of fruit salad and set it away. Dick helped with everything, and they washed and dried the dishes and utensils used.

Just as they had put things away, mother looked in the door. "Why—what are you doing, children?" she asked wonderingly.

Eleanor rushed over and gave her a big hug. "We've just woke up," she whispered. "Dick and I have been pretty selfish, sitting around while you and dad worked so hard. But we're going to be different from now on—and we're going to have lots of fun, helping you and dad."

"Well, the cream is all set up," dad said, as he opened the door leading from the basement, "and it's going to be pretty good."

Eleanor rushed to his side and kissed him. "Dad, you've been just a darling," she exclaimed. "Dick and I have just woke up to how much you and mother have been doing for us. And we hereby solemnly declare that we're turning over a new leaf for the New Year."

"THE BELLS of AVALON"

A New Year's Story

By ALICE B. PALMER

NORMAN TREAT was sorting over his music at the radio station and wondering what he was going to sing on the New Year's program. Boyishly enthusiastic and filled to the brim with the New Year's spirit, he hummed, "The Bells of Avalon," over and over again.

"I have it, Norm! I have it!" shouted his manager. "You're to sing a complete program of 'Bell' lyrics. We ought to be able to hunt them up and go over them in no time. Let's see, there's the 'Bells of St. Mary's,' a beautiful song, then there's the good old-fashioned 'Blue Bells of Scotland.' And oh, yes, the best of all, Norm, 'The Bells of Avalon!' So get busy and practice up, old boy, and be all set for 'ten bells' by the clock, on New Year's eve."

Thus the manager hurried out and on to other worlds to conquer. Norman sat stupefied. He did not mind the old time "Blue Bells of Scotland" or "St. Mary's," both lovely songs, but the "Bells of Avalon"—that was the catch. How could he do it? What if Charlene should hear him? It had been her favorite song and many a time he had sung it to her accompaniment on the piano. "The Bells of Avalon!" What memories that particular piece stirred within him! How they both had adored it! Then suddenly without explanation she had become engaged to another and Norman had been "out in the cold" ever since.

At precisely "ten bells" on New Year's eve the following announcement came over the air: "We are now to hear a fifteen minute program of delightful 'Bell' songs, appropriate for the occasion, by none other than our celebrated tenor, Norman Treat."

Norman had arranged his "Bell" songs in order, leaving "The Bells of Avalon" until last.

He did not know why he had done this, but he had. Soon the rich tones of his lovely tenor voice were floating over the air in one glorious "Bell" song after another. Last of all he sang with tender, heart-rending expression, "The Bells of Avalon!" "I wonder if you hear the bells, my dear?" he sang directly to Charlene. Then the deep-toned studio bell accompaniment chimed joyously in a reminder of the midnight hour.

The much enjoyed program was over and Norman heaved a deep sigh of relief. Still filled with the lovely vision and presence of his lost sweetheart, he turned to leave the studio when a telegram was thrust into his trembling hand. He hardly dared open it, but when he did, he read:

"I heard the 'Bells of Avalon,' Norm! Won't you spend New Year's with Charlene?"

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

PARENTS should teach their children to chew their food. Proper mastication in early youth is a fine preparation for good digestion in later life, since the habit, once formed, is likely to continue. This is no plea for languid eating for dawdling over the meals, which has little or nothing to do with proper eating. It is a hint to parents of one way to promote good health in their offspring by insisting that food is not swallowed without the amount of chewing needed for its ready assimilation with the gastric juices and the elements of stomach and body.

The term "Fletcherize" will be remembered by many readers as the name given to slow eating because the eminent Doctor Fletcher advocated that each mouthful of food should be chewed 40 times before being swallowed. Persons suffering from stomach ailments and their train of illnesses, were greatly relieved by this means of avoiding swallowing improperly chewed foods. Before such a necessity arises, parents can ward off stomach troubles by teaching their little folk to chew their food well before swallowing it. The gastric juices must be kept in correct action.

Advised by Physicians.

Dentists now agree that chewing food well is good for the teeth. They require action of this kind, and the clearing of food from crevices between teeth which results. Correct chewing promotes good teeth, as well as good health. Reduction of doctors' and dentists' bills is a natural outcome. But no negligence in going to a dentist and having periodic examinations of children's or adult's teeth should result. Nor should there be any laxness in summoning a physician when symptoms of illness foretell the need.

A child, or an adult for that matter, who is subject to seasickness, or car sickness which makes itself felt aboard trains, trolleys, and sometimes in closed automobiles, will find a cracker or crust of bread, well masticated, a decidedly good remedy. This is because anything that keeps the stomach in action relieves the nausea. Gum is sometimes chewed for this reason when traveling. In seasickness and its like, chewing of such simple things proves a remedy in itself.

Floating Foods.

There is something intriguing about the idea of foods that float. We are accustomed, today, to beverages, that are termed floats, chocolate floats, coffee floats, etc., but these are not eatables although the liquids have nourishment in them. The very term float, is significant, since it indicates a combination of a buoyant creamy foundation, with sufficient body to support the top edibles, and an upper ingredient or preparation of a lighter consistency or with a texture that will keep a-top the lower or foundation food.

There are many of the floating preparations. Chief among these are the light and fluffy beaten whites of eggs, uncooked, or the delicately browned and slightly cooked beaten egg-whites as found in meringues. Marshmallows or marshmallow whip is a usual float.

Among the more solid edibles that float are found conde (pronounced con-day) crusts, slices of lemon and also of hard boiled egg, halved Boston crackers and oyster crackers, some varieties of grapes, and of leaves of sweet or fragrant herbs, etc.

Comfort for Dad

An exceedingly attractive living room that has a spacious fireplace and opens onto the garden is featured in McCall's. Mary Davis Gillis, author of the article, says of the room: "A successful living room is a man's room as well as a woman's. So the room contains chairs of a generous size. The walls, painted with a new, quick-drying paint (in dawn-gray) tone in with the gray-brown floor covering. The yellow of the sofa is picked up in the pattern of a chair. Homespun draperies shade in horizontal stripes through white, sand and brown, and a big easy chair in deep blue gives accent to the room."

Elastic Paint Needed

As garden trellises and lattices are exposed to severe weather conditions, it is wise to repaint them at the first sign of weathering. An elastic paint, which will give and expand with the wood as it swells and shrinks in response to fluctuating weather conditions, should be used. Regular exterior house paints are usually of an elastic nature.

Protects Against Weather

"Long oil" varnish is generally slower drying, tougher and more elastic than a "short oil" varnish. Spar varnish, which is used for the protection of surfaces that have to brave weather vicissitudes, is an example of the "long oil" type.

MAKE BREAKFAST PARTY SUCCESS

Sundays and Holidays Best for Informal Meal.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE breakfast party is a delightful form of entertaining more or less informally. In general, Sundays or holidays are naturally chosen for this meal which may be scheduled for any time between nine and one-thirty. The word "brunch" which was coined some years ago indicates the elasticity both as to the hour and the menu.

The meal may be served either at the table or buffet style depending upon the number of invited guests. In any case, the gayest of linen, glass and china are used. Be sure that the napkins are large enough to be really useful. Men guests always appreciate my large breakfast napkins which go with a red, green and white striped cloth. They call them "young table cloths."

Now about the menu. You may use foods which we associate with breakfast no matter what hour the meal is served. Or, you may choose more elaborate dishes, such as would be served at the usual luncheon. In the latter case, however, fruit should be the first course, as it is at breakfast. At a buffet breakfast, which I attended recently, a variety of fruits and fruit juices were passed on a tray.

For a second course there may be, if you like, a cereal, hot or ready-to-eat. Oatmeal or cornmeal mush with plenty of cream will be a treat to persons who habitually eat the lightest of breakfasts. For your main course, there may be either standard ham or bacon and eggs or baked sausages. A kidney stew may be chosen if you have bacon also. You know there is always one person who doesn't like kidney! Potatoes are often served at this course. Everyone likes them hashed in cream. A combination of sweet potatoes and apples, baked in casserole was acclaimed by guests at a recent Sunday breakfast. You may like to try the toasted potato fluff or the potato stuffed with sausage for which I am giving you the recipe.

Hot breads are always in order for breakfasts.

Be sure that you have plenty of hot coffee on the table at the moment that breakfast is announced. That is what everyone demands at breakfast. The coffee pot should be kept continually filled with fresh, hot brew. In addition to the above listed foods, you may add several kinds of marmalade.

For the breakfast which verges on the luncheon, you may offer hot bouillon instead of cereal. The main course may be broiled chops, scrambled eggs with shad roe or broiled chicken. There may be fried tomatoes or creamed mushrooms as well as potatoes. Sometimes cold meat in addition to scrambled eggs may furnish the main course. The potatoes may be in croquette form. If fruit has not been offered as it usually is at the beginning of the meal, guests may help themselves at the end from the filled fruit dish which gives a decorative note to your table.

No matter how simple the menu, if the food is well cooked and your breakfast table appointments are attractive, your "brunch" will be successful.

Eggs Baked in Tomatoes.

Select small, round tomatoes. Cut across at stem end and with a teaspoon scoop out center. Turn upside down to drain. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper and drop in a bit of butter and a tablespoon of seasoned bread crumbs. Into each tomato shell break an egg and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 15 minutes until egg is set and tomato cooked through.

Stuffed Potatoes With Sausage.

Bake as many white potatoes as needed. Halve them, scoop out potato, mix with butter, salt and pepper. Take about half as much sausage meat, cook until soft, but not brown. Mix well with potato and refill the potato shells. Bake until brown on top in a hot oven (450 degrees).

Scrambled Eggs With Shad Roe.

6-8 eggs
¼ cup cream
Salt and pepper
1 tablespoon butter
Paprika
1 can shad roe.

Beat the eggs, add the cream and season to taste with salt and pepper. Melt one tablespoon butter in a heavy frying pan, pour in mixture and stir over a low fire until just set. Turn out on a hot platter, sprinkle with paprika and arrange around the eggs the roe, which has been lightly browned on each side in butter.

Waffles.

2½ cups pastry flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
½ cup melted shortening or cooking oil
1½ cups milk

Mix and sift dry ingredients; beat eggs and stir in shortening or oil. Add milk, and then dry ingredients all at once. Beat until thoroughly mixed and bake in hot waffle iron about five minutes.

Toasted Potato Fluff.

8 cups mashed potatoes
Seasoning
Hot milk
½ cup whipped cream
½ cup grated cheese

The mashed potatoes should be well seasoned and beaten with milk until creamy. Spread on a deep plate, cover with whipped cream and cheese, and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a hot oven (500 degrees F.) until brown.

IN THE SOUP

Earl Freyer, Baltimore night club chef, was stirring the soup. William Smith was repairing the roof. Their destinies came together, swiftly, violently. Smith fell through the skylight and landed on Freyer. The soup went "plop" and the two men went to the hospital, where only slight injuries could be discovered.

HENRY GRADY'S PROPHECY COMING TRUE

—:o:—

The combination of controlled prduction and PCA loans will go far toward helping the South to realize at last the dream of rural independence and happiness which Henry W. Grady so eloquently pictured a half century ago:-

"When every farmer in the South shall eat bread from his own fields and meat from his own pastures, and disturbed by no creditor and enslaved by no debt, shall sit among his teeming gardens and orchards and vineyards and dairies and barnyards, pitching hay crops in his own wisdom and growing them in independence, making cotton his clean surplus and selling it in his own time and in his chosen market and not at a master's bidding, getting his pay in cash and not in a receipted mortgage which discharges his debt but does not restore his freedom—then shall be breaking the fullness of our day."

Without control of cotton acreage this dream could never have come true—as The Progressive Farmer points out in the following timely comment:-

"Without control of cotton acreage this dream would never have come true. For under old conditions if cotton prices fell too low, there was always a large element of farmers who felt that they must increase their acreage in order to get the same gross amount of money as before. Thus we heard recently of a well-known Eastern North Carolina farmer who when cotton prices dropped violently one year said to his foreman: "Last year I thought coton would bring 12 cents and we planned for 100 bales. Since 6-cent cotton is now in prospect, we must plant 200 bales." Under old conditions there were enough farmers of this type (not only large farmers but also small farmers compelled to have a certain amount of cash for clothes, interest, taxes, and doctor's bill) to keep acreage unduly high al lthe time. We nearly always grew too much cotton.

"Of course one reason we had a chronic overproduction of cotton was that the South's 'time prices crop mortgage system' made economic slaves of too many cotton producers. The typical supply merchant not only compelled his patrons to grow an excessive quantity of cotton but was opposed to their growing enough food, feed, and fertility crops. The FCA production credit program is now helping tremendously in remedying this situation. Instead of being deterred from 'living at home', farmers who borrow through PCA are regarded as better risks if they do live at home, produce needed food and feed, and plant soil imorovement crops—as Henry Grady dreamed would sometimes be the case."—The Times-Standard.

So comes again the beautiful poem picture of the Little Babe of Bethlehem—born more thn 1900 years ago, and which on the morrow, the whole world will humbly bow in reverence to honor.

"The universal joy of Christmas is certainly wonderful. We ring the bells when princes are born, or toll a mournful dirge when great men pass away. Nations have their red-letter days, their carnivals and festivals, but once in the year and only once, the whole world stands still to celebrate the advent of a life. Only the lowly Babe of Bethlehem claims this world-wide remembrance. You cannot cut Christmas out of the Calendar—nor can you cut it our of the heart of the world."

Let all of us join with the universal chorus, who will lift their voices in Christmas carols of praise surrounding the Cradle-Manger. It is worthy of all. Let the Star shine! Let the Magi give gifts! Let the Shepherds worship! Let the angel-faces flash out from the great dome over head. Let the Church bells chime! Let your joyous hearts sing until the echoes of your voices mingle with the stars! Let no harsh note of dissention mar the beauty of the harmonious song of Peace. In no more fitting way can we say farewell to the closing year, and "All hail" to the New!

"For the earth has grown old with its burden of care,
But at Christmas it always is young;
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And its soul full of music, breaks forth on the air
When the song of the angels is sung.
It is coming Old Earth, it is coming tonight!
On the snowflakes which cover thy sod
The feet of the Christ-child fall gentle and white,
And the voice of the Christ-child tells out with delight
That mankind are the children of God."

POULTRY

POULTRY SUPPLIES DOWN; MORE EGGS

U. S. Bureau Sees Decline in Prices During Year.

Supplied by the United States Department of Agriculture.—WNU Service.

Relatively short supplies and high prices for poultry are in prospect, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in its annual outlook report.

Eggs, however, will increase in supply and decline in price. There will be an increased hatch of young chicks in the spring of 1936. Prices of both poultry and eggs will decline in the latter half of the year.

There are more young chickens in farm flocks now than a year ago, but poultry receipts are not likely to reflect fully this increase until late next spring, because of a tendency to save a larger than usual proportion of pullets for layers.

There are also more laying birds in farm flocks now than a year ago. This means an increase in egg production.

The bureau says that on the basis of volume of output, the hatchery industry in 1935 had the best year since 1930. Fairly sharp increases were reported from all sections of the country.

The higher egg prices are causing an expansion in commercial egg producing areas of the Pacific coast, and larger supplies of eggs from that section can be expected at eastern markets during 1936.

Consumer demand for eggs, it is stated, will depend upon consumer income and upon the price of eggs in relation to that of competitive foods. The bureau believes that consumer demand for eggs will increase.

Chicks With Short Legs Caused by Diet of Hens

Newly hatched chicks with unusually short and shaky legs have been a puzzle to poultrymen.

Now poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found that short-legged chicks often come from eggs laid by confined hens, which receive feed lacking satisfactory protein concentrates.

They found that not all meat meals furnish the proper kind of protein supplement for confined breeding stock. Several diets which contained meat meal as the sole protein supplement caused the hens to lay eggs from which short-legged chicks hatched. At the same time normal chicks hatched from eggs laid by hens receiving different kinds of meat meals as the only protein source.

Green grass, milk, and some meat meals contain the factor necessary to prevent these short-legged chicks. Rations for confined breeding stock, the specialists advise, should include milk, alfalfa leaf meal, and cod-liver oil.

Combatting Hen's Enemies

In contrast with lice, the common poultry mite is not a permanent resident on the hen. It might be described as the chicken bedbug, for it attacks the fowls at night and leaves in the morning to hide in cracks and crevices of perches. During the night the mites swarm over the fowls, gorge themselves with food, irritate the hens, and cause them to lose rest and sleep. Poultrymen have learned to combat these enemies of the hen through chemical and other means. Clean the house thoroughly, removing every trace of litter and other materials. Then spray the house, roosts, and nests with coal-tar, cresol, nicotine, or crank case oil sprays.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Corn Supplies Heat

Nearly all farm raised grains can be used in feeding hens, but corn is the most efficient in supplying heat, says the Wisconsin Agriculturist. The amount of grain that a group of hens will consume varies, but where the grain is fed in the litter it is generally recommended that 12 to 14 pounds of scratch grain per 100 hens be fed daily. It is essential that the birds go to roost with full crops. Therefore, usually two-thirds of the daily ration of scratch grain is fed late in the afternoon; the other one-third can be thrown into the litter in the morning.

With the Poultrymen

Experiments at the Ohio State university comparing all mash rations fed dry to poultry with all mash rations fed wet point to a decided advantage for wet feeding. The investigators say wet mash is more palatable, and that the birds eat more of it, lay more eggs.

* * *

Hens in high production drink more water than poor layers. They also exhale more moisture and thus increase the humidity of the air in the poultry house.

* * *

Bloody eggs may result from a large blood clot diffusing throughout the entire albumen or may be the result of an injured oviduct giving forth blood in the albumen.

* * *

Do not feed cod liver oil in excess of the required amount; not more than one per cent oil or more than 2 per cent meal.

* * *

When the flock is properly fed it is not difficult to select the poor layers. They are the first to go out of production.

Snug Bloomers to Protect the Tots

PATTERN 9621

Warmth is mother's first thought when winds blow cold. It's then that two-to-ten-year olds need the extra protection of snug bloomers 'neath their brief frocks. This frock buttons down the front so the kiddie may button it as easily as a coat; partly stitched pleats add skirt fullness, and puffed sleeves create little-girl charm. A quick pull, and bloomers are in place. The kiddie that has both frock and bloomers of wool challis will be warm as toast the whole winter long.

Pattern 9621 may be ordered in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2½ yards 36 inch fabric and ¼ yard contrasting.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 W. Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Vow to Show Kindness and Courage to Others

Frequently it is the kind word that puts sweetness into a gift. Many are in need of the kind word more than material help. "Why isn't it a better world?" we often wonder. It will be, for us and for others, too, if we "make oath and keep it with a steadfast mind" to show kindness and courage throughout the year.

To cook rice properly, wash, season with salt and add very slowly to rapidly-boiling water. Boil about 20 minutes without stirring. Drain, wash and put in warm oven until kernels swell.

An aluminum spoon placed in the soap suds in which silver is washed will result in shining silver. Polish silver with chamois or a flannel cloth after drying.

One-half cup of soap flakes dissolved with a little hot water, to which a cup of kerosene has been added, is an excellent cleanser for the bath tub.

If screws are put into a cake of soap before you attempt to put them into hard wood you will find they will go in much easier.

Blouses Gain New Fashion Heights

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

BLOUSES are stepping out of their one-time obscurity under a suit jacket and are appearing at gay social functions as costumes in their own right complete with slim skirts of silk satin, wool or silk velvet. Paradoxical as it sounds, tailored blouses have soft touches, while formal blouses have a rather tailored look, the fabric supplying the proper glamor for the occasion.

The blouse of silk lame is a favorite for dressy afternoon wear, and those "little evenings" when your hostess says: "Don't dress." There are long-sleeved or short-sleeved models in all-over patterned silk lames which glitter to your heart's content, or if you so choose you may have soft silks with just a suggestion of metal in interwoven or embroidered motifs.

The shirtwaist or jacket type of blouse of scintillating lame is prominent, fastening with long rows of self-covered buttons, rhinestone studs set on a front tuck, or with elaborate frogs of self-fabric. A typical model of each is here illustrated. Huge frogs of self-fabric trim the jacket blouse as pictured at the top in the group. White and silver silk metallic in a scroll pattern fashion it. The sleeves are full to the elbow. A tiny turn-down collar of self fabric finishes the neckline.

The other metallic blouse shown is of gold silk lame. It is a glittering little affair which can be worn for formal afternoons or "little" evenings. Its brief sleeves are puffed. The closely placed buttons are of self fabric, while pert bows accent the neckline and waistline. It is a Lanvin model. Very new looking, too, are sleeveless silk lame blouses with draped armholes shirred or draped bodices after the Molyneux tradition.

Blouses worn without suits under fox or mink capes for theater, night clubs or the cinema are smartly new. They are worn without hats or with absurd little evening hats that are mere twists or dabs of silk tulle, silk lame or silk velvet.

For luncheon in a swank restaurant, for afternoon tea, there is nothing more flattering than a blouse of delectable silk satin, softly draped or shirred at the shoulders, with a new version of the high cowl neckline after the manner of the Schiaparelli model illustrated to the left below. This stunning silk satin blouse is in Kelly green.

The sheer silk blouse, new this season, is attracting favorable attention. It can be worn with a dark woolen or tweed suit or as a separate costume with a contrasting skirt. Silk chiffon and silk georgettes are the featured fabrics. Fine pleating or tucking, shirring around yokes or under necklines give such blouses softness and femininity.

The tailored blouse for sports wear or with a tailored suit is done in varied moods. There are youthful blouses of soft silk crepes in pastel colors, with simple club collars, and perky bows for trimming—correct for wear with plaid woolen skirts or with tweed suits. Then there are shirtwaist blouses of delicate silk crepe de chine, with jabots and frills trimmed with fine lace, perfect to wear with a perfectly tailored suit.

Colors are new this season, too. Gold and silver vie for favor in metals. Strong blues and reds and greens are favorites in less formal blouses of satins and chiffons. The dusty pastels or strong vivid tones, both register for tailored blouses. Of course classic white is as important as ever. It is the rule for the blouse to provide the color accent for the ensemble, sounding the basic note of the costume, which makes it more than just a mere costume accessory.

BLACK AND WHITE IS SMART AS EVER

That the Parisian black and white is just as smart as it ever was is proven by the winter collection of Chanel, who trims with white touches almost as lavishly as in the summer collection.

Outstanding is the sheer black wool, which looks like a silk crepe. The dress is in two pieces, with a shorter, straight skirt whose fullness comes from box pleats at the side seams. The top is high at the neck with a white band and crisp bow tie similar to that worn by a man. The long sleeves are full above the elbow, and have white wrist cuffs. The bow tie at the neck is repeated at the front of the belt.

Hats for Country Outfit

There is lots of choice for the hat which completes one's country outfit. The suede or chamois can be matched in a beret trimmed with a bright quill, or the sweater and jacket lining can be matched with a soft, perky woolen hat, while still a third choice is a sports felt the same shade as the skirt and trimmed with a quill of the same color as the sweater and jacket lining.

Vanity News

Clothes may make the man, but make-up makes the woman. Make the eyes as dramatic as possible. Keep eyebrows faint and unobtrusive. Use rouge lightly to leave the emphasis on the eyes.

"Rag-Rug" Tweeds

New wools called "rag-rug" tweeds are being shown in Paris. They are woven with bits of multi-colored fabric among the threads, to resemble rag rugs.

Full and Slim Silhouette Now Appear for Evening

Both the slim silhouette and the very full one appear in the evening mode. Mainbocher, the clever young man from Chicago, who has become one of the leading designers in Paris, favors slim frocks with all the fullness gathered in the back. For instance, a slim frock of black matelasse silk taffeta has a vast bustle that puffs out just below the low graceful V of the black decolletage. In contrast is a dress of plain black crepe done on very slim lines. The frock is worn with a black satin cape on which there are sewn horizontal strips of monkey fur. A frock of purple-red and silver brocade has fullness only in the back. The fullness is held out with stiffened net.

Massive Jewelry

Bracelets and necklaces apparently have taken a tip from the barbaric splendor of Byzantine jewelry and appear in massive designs sometimes set with stones as large as bird's eggs. So large and blazing is the jewelry, which a number of designers display for wear with the frocks of Persian and Egyptian inspiration, that only one or two pieces can be worn at a time.

Black Supplants Pink

Black satin with a silvery brocade design, reputed to be scratchproof, is the latest material for foundation garments. On display in many Paris shops was a radical departure, white and flesh-colored undergarments. The newest are sleek, streamlined wisps of shimmering black satin and elastic.

Gold and Jewels

Day dresses this fall will be accented by embroideries, gold braiding, velvet trimming and jeweled ornaments.

Lesson for December 29

REVIEW: SIGNIFICANCE OF THE EXILE AND THE RESTORATION

GOLDEN TEXT—The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear him, and his righteousness unto children's children. Psalm 103:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Restored His People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Restored His People.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Learning From Great Men.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Providence in History.

The method of review must be determined by the teacher. The grade of the class, the aptitude of the scholars, and the genius of the teacher are features to be considered. For senior and adult classes, the following suggestions are made.

I. Study the Lessons of the Quarter as Illustrating the Philosophy of History in God's Dealings With His People in Their Captivity and Restoration.

Assignment of topics should be made at least one week in advance. Only adult classes could be expected to use this method. The following subjects might be assigned:

Why God permitted Israel to go into exile.

What cure the exile effected for Israel.

What changed views of life resulted from the exile.

The bearing of the exile upon prophecy.

The relationship of divine chastening to divine love.

II. Character Study.

Assign the outstanding heroes of the quarter's lessons to members of the class to have them report. This assignment should be made at least one week in advance. Some of the outstanding characters for consideration are Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Daniel, Nehemiah, Ezra, Zerubbabel, and Malachi.

III. Summary of Contents.

This is a method readily usable at all times, and it can be adapted to most of the grades. The following suggestions are made for the carrying out of this method:

Lesson 1. The prophecy of Isaiah is the grand center of the Old Testament. It pictures the Servant of Jehovah, with great wisdom, gloriously executing the divine purpose of redemption, at the cost of great suffering.

Lesson 2. Before he was born, Jeremiah was ordained by God as a prophet to the nations. He so really took to heart the doom which awaited his people that he wept sorely.

Lesson 3. Jeremiah stood in the gate of the temple in order that the multitudes might hear him. He told the people that God required them to amend their ways, solemnly warning them of impending judgments.

Lesson 4. While Belshazzar and his lords were engaged in drunken revelry, the mysterious hand recorded the divine judgment. There is a coming day of judgment.

Lesson 5. Because of Judah's apostasy, God permitted the Babylonians to destroy Jerusalem and take the Jews into captivity.

Lesson 6. Ezekiel sets forth personal responsibility. On his part, it was to hear God's word and to sound forth the warning. The people's responsibility was to hear and obey.

Lesson 7. Though Israel went into captivity as a chastisement, in due time the Lord restored them. In due time God will make good his covenant agreement with the Jews.

Lesson 8. God used these prophets to stir up the people to build God's house.

Lesson 9. Ezra was commissioned to lead the people to forsake their sins and return to God.

Lesson 10. On hearing of the distress of his brethren in Jerusalem, Nehemiah took the matter to the Lord in prayer. The Lord gave him favor with the king, permitting him to go back to build the walls of Jerusalem, bearing credentials of authority from the king.

Lesson 11. The method used in bringing the people back to God was the reading of the Word of God to them. Because the Word was made plain to the people, they repented of their sins.

Lesson 12. Malachi, as an aid to Nehemiah in effecting reforms, pointed out the sins of the people. He set forth a day of judgment when righteous retribution would be meted out to the wicked, and rewards given to the faithful.

We have now concluded our months of study in the Old Testament and will with the new year enter upon a study of the Gospel of Luke.

A Man

O rich and various man! thou palace of sight and sound, carrying in the senses the morning and the night; and the unfathomable galaxy; in thy brain, the geometry of the city of God; in thy heart, the power of love and the realms of right and wrong!—Emerson.

Work

Thank God! Work is sorrow's cure, its hands like the hands of an enemy, but its voice the voice of an Eternal Friend.

Where Does the World Get Its Supply of Oil?

Three Nations Control Output of Industries' Lifeblood.

Discussion of oil embargoes in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war raises the question: "Where does the world get its oil?" Petroleum deposits have been found in every continent except Antarctica, but well-defined pools are widely scattered. Actually, a very few nations control the supply of this lifeblood of modern industry.

"Three countries produce about 81 per cent of the world's petroleum output," says the National Geographic society. "These are the United States, Soviet Russia and Venezuela. If all three should cut off their oil supplies, many steamships, trucks, automobiles, armored tanks, airplanes and railroads all over the world would be stopped, as well as industries depending on oil for fuel or lubrication. Great Britain, through her control of distribution of oil produced in her dominions and colonies, and in many other countries, also is a powerful factor in the world's oil situation.

Italy Produces Little Oil.

"A general oil embargo would practically threaten Italy's motors with starvation, for Italy, in the entire year of 1934, produced only as much oil as the United States does in about two hours.

"Almost 99 per cent of the world's oil comes from only twelve countries. Italy is but one of the many nations which would have to combine their petroleum resources to make up the other 1 per cent.

"While the three leading nations are making production history by their thundering progress along the oil trail, four others follow them in a group, although many laps behind —Rumania, Iran (Persia), Netherlands Indies, and Mexico. Almost neck and neck, five more follow along: Colombia, Argentina, Peru, India, and Trinidad, which produce less than 1 per cent of the world's annual output each.

Oil Also Found Under Water.

"The distribution of petroleum seems to show a slight preference for the western hemisphere and for the northern side of the equator. Nevertheless, it is found in such extremes as Iraq, where iron-muscled Kurds work in July heat at 128 degrees in the shade, and north of Point Barrow in Alaska, where frozen clods of oil-soaked earth are burned as a substitute for coal.

"Water, as well as earth, may lie above petroleum. Venezuela's Lake Maracaibo, black with oil, is studded with derricks which workmen reach by bridges of narrow planks from the shore, and is supervised from a floating camp on a barge. The Summerland field of Santa Barbara county, California, extends beyond the shoreline of the Pacific, so that derricks wade into the ocean to draw up oil from several hundred feet below sea level.

"The United States leads the world in oil production. Recently a diamond jubilee marked the industry's seventy-fifth anniversary since Col. Edwin Drake sank the country's first oil well 70 feet into the rich Appalachian field at Titusville, Pa. Oil is still produced in Pennsylvania, especially for the manufacture of lubricants.

Texas Fields Date From 1901.

"In 1901 the rich Texas oil fields were brought in, starting a branch of the industry which in 1934 produced $36,000,000 worth of oil, more than the combined production of the two next richest areas, Oklahoma and California. The latest spectacular development is that of the Louisiana Gulf coast, which doubled its production in 1934. One geologist estimates that the United States, already producing 61 per cent of the world's oil from its two million acres of oil fields, actually has more than a billion acres untouched.

"Running second, Soviet Russia's government-controlled oil production rose in 1934 to 166,000,000 barrels, with acres and acres of oil seepages undeveloped or even unprospected.

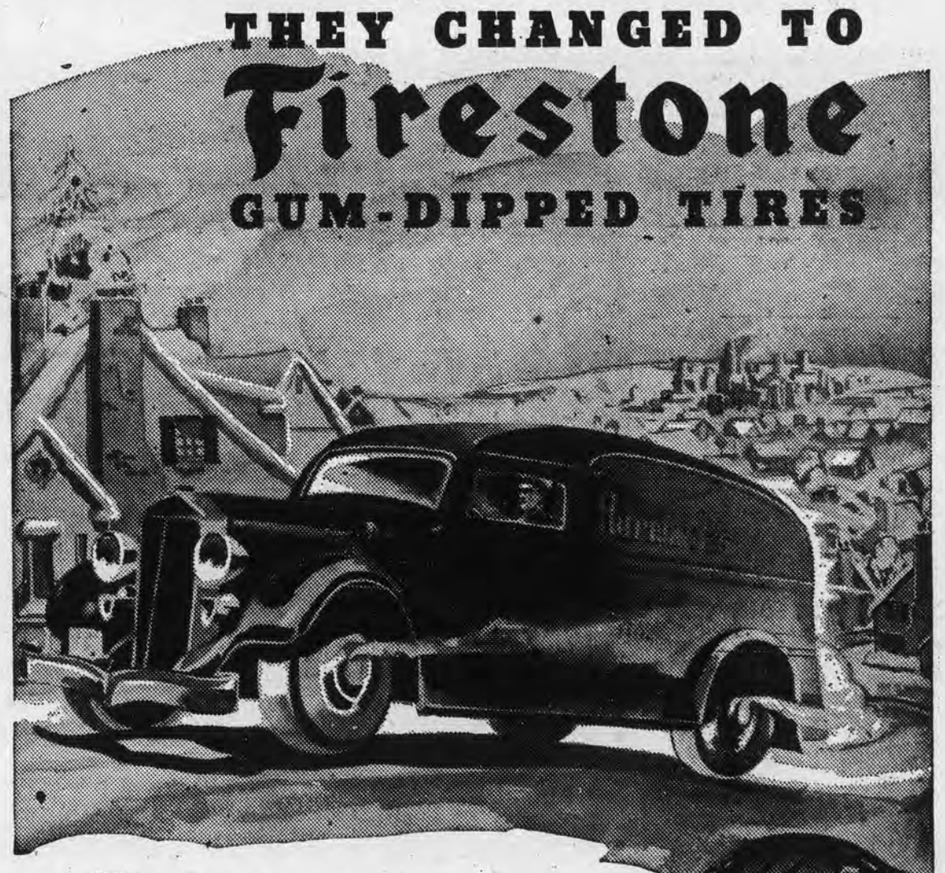
"Venezuela keeps third place at a gait which is amazing, in view of the fact that commercial production began there less than twenty years ago. Petroleum constitutes 75 per cent of the country's exports. Rumania, taking fourth place from Iran in 1934, still has many undeveloped areas.

Advice of Old Usable for Straight Thinking Today

When we become angry our thinking gets crooked, and when we grow too fond of ways that are not right we cannot properly judge what is the true course to follow. Archbishop Adalberon, when presiding nearly a thousand years ago at an assemblage for the choice of a king for Lower Lorraine, in what is now France, warned his hearers of these obstacles to clear thinking by saying:

"Let us act in such sort that hatred stifle not reason, and affection distort not truth."

Could there be a better expression of what should be the attitude of folks today?



Dog Saved 40 Persons

One of the most intelligent dogs was "Barry," a St. Bernard belonging to the famous St. Bernard Hospice in the Swiss Alps. Before he was shot by a man who mistook him for a wolf, he saved the lives of 40 travelers who were lost and near death in snowstorms, one being a little girl whom he carried to safety.

4-H Boys And Girls Offered Credit To Keep Dad's Records

AUBURN—To encourage more farm bookkeeping in Alabama, agricultural leaders here have decided to give 4-H club boys and girls credit for keeping AAA record books for their fathers in 1936.

In reporting this project for boys and girls, T. A. Sims, 4-H club leader, emphasizes the importance of record keeping by stating that "farmers who do not keep records are unable to tell just where they stand. They may think they are making a profit when, actually, they are losing money."

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION FROM LONDON, ENGLAND

he has told me lots about my native town that I didn't know, for instance he showed us the oldest house of Parliament in the World, you go to it from Westminister Abbey but it doesn't belong to the Abbey. There is an attendent who stands at the door and as you go in, he hands you a pair of rubber slippers to put on over your own shoes, they won't let you go in without them, the tiling on the floor is about the oldest there is in England if not anywhere, and they keep the records of the oldest days there, it is really very interesting and worth going to see. We went there on a Saturday and on the following Monday, they were having Special Services at Westminister Abbey, attended by the Lord Chancellor, Judges and Members of the Legal Profession dressed in their wigs and gowns. I wish you could have seen them, it was very impressive. I know you would have enjoyed it. The service was very beautiful. After the service was over, they all marched out and lined up waiting for their motors and carriages to come and take them to their various offices in the Law Courts and while waiting, there were dozens of newspapermen lined up get ting the various pictures for the papers.

Sunday, October 6th was Harvest day, it is always held on a Sunday and people carry to the churches any and everything that is grown and made and they decorate the Altars with the various things, they then have special services of Thanksgiving, and the preachers of the various churches then take the foods and dis tribute it among the poor.

Our next visit was to the Life Guards and from there to St. James Palace, it is very interesting to watch them changing the Guards. Have also been to the London and the British Museums, both very interesting, went to another very small museum in the Law Court building where most of the records and belongings to Royalty are kept, one can't really remember it all. I am trying to get guide books from the various places and they help a lot to refreshen one's memory.

Went to the Tower of London where they keep all the amory of the old wars, also the Crown Jewels and the various other buildings there and a very old and interesting church which the public can only go into with one of the guards who they call the Beefeaters, will enclose a snap of one in case you might like to see how they look.

Major Evans, the American we met in the Abbey, is the father of "Madge Evans" the actress, he carried us to the New Masonic Temple, supposed to be the finest in the World. It is a very beautiful building inside, but the most beautiful was the Grand Lodge room. This room is only used four times a year. The Grand Masters chair is of gold inlay and costs L6000 pounds alone and there are two smaller gold chairs on the Rostrum. The largest piece of Tiling in the ceiling is only 1-2 inch square and the work was done entirely by Italians who are the only ones who can do that kind of work. They were two years on the inlay work alone and the whole building took nine years. When the room is not in use the whole Rostrum is sealed in Cellophane. Well, this will have to do for this time, hope this will be of interest to you. I must close with kindest regards from both Mr. Luther and myself.

Yours sincerely,
Violet Luther.
